Two discoveries overwhelmed the mind of the watching Thurston at that moment. The first was that Alice Lisle was loyal to his memory. The next was that she was sacrificing herself for a poor invalid fellow creature. He reached within an inner pocket and drew forth a dozen or more bank bills that represented part of his legacy. It was a vivid, irrational impulse that caused him to fling the precious money through the transom—a shower of blessings indeed!

Somehow a rare joy took possession of his soul as he fled from the spot. He wandered about the streets, thinking, thinking. Ah! here was an object in life at last: to watch over in secret this devoted first love, to see that she did not suffer. He would never become known to her—ah, no! with the convict stain upon his life!

A hand touched his shoulder and Thurston turned to confront a policeman. The latter was scanning a photograph in his hand. Thurston recognized it as one of himself, taken when he entered prison.

"I believe you are Mr. Thurston?" spoke the officer, quite respectfully.

"Yes," answered Thurston, his heart sinking. On the threshold of new hopes, was he to be hunted down by the police as he had been by criminals?

"Would you step to headquarters with me, sir?" pursued the officer. "It is something important—had orders to locate you for a week."

Dejected, anticipating all kinds of direful trouble, Thurston entered the presence of the chief of police a few minutes later.

"Mr. Thurston," spoke the official, "I have some strange news to impart to you. The son of the banker who sent you to prison has just confessed, dying, that he, and not you, was the guilty criminal. His father has written a statement exonerating you. He has also placed in my charge thirty thousand dollars, which is the amount you would have earned during your ten years' unjust imprisonment."

"Give me the statement!" cried Thurston excitedly. "At last, at last, light, hope, happiness."

There was nothing to hide from his love now! Back to the poor attic room and its bewildered inmates John Thurston hastened. Its bare walls seemed those of a palace as her lost lover renewed with sweet patient Alice Lisle the broken troth of the dreary years agone.

DON'T WASTE TIME

Many Men Have Accomplished Wonders in Their Spare Moments

Great men are economical in their use of time. They not only work hard for hours together, but they also save the spare minutes which most persons waste in profitless employment.

As the distinguished naturalist Cuvier rode from place to place he read and thought, and the results of his saving these odd quarter hours are seen in his books.

Napoleon, as he hurried over Europe in his camp carriage, was busy in planning for the government of conquered countries and in contriving new conquests.

Elihu Burritt learned no less than eighteen languages and twenty-one dialects by the economical use of time. While he worked fourteen hours a day at his trade of a blacksmith he found a few minutes each morning and evening to study Latin or French.

His Greek grammar would fit into the crown of his straw hat, and as he stood at his furnace, waiting for the fusing of the metal, he would catch it up and commit to memory a part of a Greek verb.

Sir William Jones, the Oriental scholar and a judge in the supreme court of India, had so well improved his time that before he reached the age of twenty-one he knew Greek, Latin, several modern languages and had studied the Arabic and the Persian. His use of the spare minutes made him both learned and famous.

John Wesley said: "Never be unemployed; never be triflingly employed; never while away time."

Be careful of the minutes, and the hours will take care of themselves.

APPLES, ORANGES, FIGS AND PRUNES

Are The Four Fruits Used In Making "Fruit-a-tives

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the only medicine in the world that is made from the juices of fresh ripe fruits. Thus, it is manifestly unfair to say, "I won't take Fruit-a-tives because I have tried other remedies and they did me no good". On the other hand, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" is entirely different from any other preparation in the world, is just why you should give it a fair trial, in any trouble of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys or Skin. "Fruit-a-tives", is composed of the active principle of fruit and the greatest nerve tonic ever discovered. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FASHION HINTS

Fullness in Skirts

Dress designers are cudgeling their brains to find a way to add fulness to skirts without making the change from the narrow sheath to simulated balloon too quickly.

The pretty little gown shown is of Italian sky-blue charmeuse. It has a yoke longer on one side than the other and across it diagonally the breadths of the skirt are gathered.

This skirt is exactly alike, front and back, and it has its opening placket at the side where it is buttoned with dark blue cut-glass buttons.

The waist is a simple kimona with a vest and Medici collar set in. This vest opens, in turn, to show a white satin under-waistcoat. There is a touch of fur on the sleeves.

Women in Persia

"Woman is a calamity, but no house can be without the evil," runs the Persian proverb, and Miss Ella Sykes, in a lecture on "Family Life in Persia," given at the Lyceum Club, London, showed how all her life the Persian woman is forced to take a "back seat" on account of her sex. She has, however, one opportunity of asserting herself. When a prospective mother-in-law visits the house of her parents to inspect the bride suggested for her son, the chosen one may, if she so pleases, refuse the honor to be thrust upon her. By handing sweets and cakes rudely to the old lady she lets her know that she has come on and nails, which was obtained in South Devon, is specially interesting as this was used to break the spell cast by a black witch upon a herd of cattle. Beside it lies a strand of red silk taken from the neck of a Norfolk child who was troubled with bleeding from the nose and wore this charm as a preventive.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

DISEASE-CARRYING INSECTS.

Dr. C. GORDON HEWITT, Dominion Entomologist, has prepared a leaflet on the suppression of two insects that may cause a great deal of disease among soldiers, namely flies and lice. His directions are so simple and of such real value that they are given herewith:

"Flies are one of the most important carriers of preventable disease, particularly typhoid, in the camp and field. The first essential is to prevent the breeding of flies, particularly in the spring and early summer when they are less abundant. Each fly lays several batches of 100 to 150 eggs. From these eggs in warm weather young maggots emerge in less than a day and another generation of flies is produced in about ten days. Fresh horse manure is the chief breeding place, but they will breed in any kind of excrement and organic refuse such as garbage from the mess tents, etc. Stables and horse lines should be kept clean. Do not leave manure standing for more than a day.

SUPPRESSION OF FLIES

"All fresh manure should be collected and burnt in the special incinerators for that purpose. Where, for any reason, immediate burning is impossible the manure should be treated by the most convenient of the following methods:

"1. If much straw is used, pile in heaps as firmly as possible and water or spray the heaps, especially around the edges, with a solution of borax in the proportion of one-half pound of borax to three gallons of water. Solutions of certain proprietary disinfectants may be used if borax cannot be obtained.

"2. If the manure is fairly free from straw, pile in heaps, beat the manure with spades to pack it tightly and make the firmly-packed sides as vertical as possible. Cover with a foot of earth if this can be done.

"Keep the flies out of the garbage by covering it. Burn all garbage and organic refuse as soon as possible.

"It is most important that all excreta should be covered; flies will breed in it and carry infection from it to food.

"All excreta in the latrines should be completely covered. Special attention should be paid to its satisfactory and speedy disposal.

"Flies can emerge from beneath a few inches of loose soil. Buried material should be covered by a depth of at least one or two feet of lightly packed soil.

"As flies are bred from filth, which may be infected, they should naturally be kept off food.

"A flyless camp is possible with proper care. No flies mean less sickness and greater comfort for all."

"Two kinds of lice occur commonly on man, the Body Louse and the Hair Louse. The former parasite spreads rapidly when favorable conditions occur such as crowded quarters, inability to change one's clothes, and dirty surroundings. The Body Louse lives on the clothes over the skin, and is rarely found on the skin itself. It requires a meal of blood twice in 24 hours. It lays its eggs in the seams of the clothing and retreats into such seams and folds after feeding. The Hair Louse occurs in the hair, as its name indicates, and its eggs or "nits" are well known. The female louse lays from 70 to 80 eggs in two weeks; the eggs hatch in three days, sometimes longer, and the next generation begins to lay eggs in about two or three weeks.

EXTERMINATION OF LICE

"The Body Louse is the carrier of typhus fever, in addition to being an irritating parasite. Avoid scratching the irritated places.

"Change the clothing as often as possible. Keep verminous clothes away from uninfested kit. Lice die of starvation in about a week's time in discarded clothes. Badly infested clothes not further needed should be burnt, buried, or sunk in water. When clothing cannot be removed, the wearing of silk underclothing will serve as a good preventive.

"Dry heat of 160 Deg. F. maintained for ten minutes, steam, or boiling water will destroy lice and their eggs, which are more difficult to destroy than the adults, in clothing.

"Clothing may be freed from lice by washing with cresol soap made as follows:

Water	10	gallons
Jeyes Fluid	1½	ounces
Soft Soap	1½	pounds

"Wash shirts in cresol soap solution made with boiling water; wash blankets in the solution first. Tunics and pants should be turned inside out and rubbed with lather, especially along the seams; allow the lather to dry on the garment.

LEARN FRENCH

THE SPIRIT AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF ALLY LAUDED BY PROFESSOR.

Prof. John Squair, formerly teacher of French in Toronto University, before a Toronto audience, made an admirable and comprehensive address on "Why Frenchmen Love France." In graphic language he reviewed the history of France, telling of the high ideals of that people, their struggles for excellence in art, in science, and in language. England, he said, had been profoundly influenced by the French for three hundred years in the fourteenth century, and since then by the alliance made in 1914. Germany had slavishly copied French art and architecture, even down to the yellow whitewash used in the royal buildings of the French Court at Versailles. The palace at Potsdam, and the residences of the petty German princes, showed plainly their imitation of the Versailles architecture. That great German brigand, Frederick the Great, had used French nearly always in speaking, and had left quite a library of books he had written in that language. Germany had made many efforts to destroy every trace of French influence, but it was too strongly impressed. Paris, the beautiful, was described in glowing terms by the speaker, and his comments and generalizations as to the spirit, the soul of France, were heartily endorsed by the French Consul in Toronto, Count Sabliere, who pronounced Prof. Squair a master of the French language, literature and history, and perfect as a connoisseur of French art, paintings and architecture. He added that the address was a masterpiece of French psychology, French sentiments, the French spirit.

Prof. Squair urged that the flexible and expressive French language be taken up as a serious study in Ontario schools. Hitherto it had been treated as though fit only for ladies. He said that men could surely not wish any more virile vehicle of thought than that used by the heroes of the Marne and Verdun, who had held back the Huns and saved civilization. French had always been, and still is, the language of diplomacy and the highest type of literature.

AEROPLANE MAKER DEAD

Office Boy Became Tramway King and Equipped Britain

Sir George White, one of the pioneers of the electric tramcar service in London who died during the first year of the war, was the founder of the Bristol Aeroplane Company, the first aeroplane factory in England, which built the famous Bristol "Scout" biplanes with which the British army in France was largely equipped. He began life in Bristol as an office boy in a solicitor's office.

HEALTHOGRAMS

Bow legs in children result from walking before the leg bones are stiff enough. As a rule babies will walk when they are ready. It is not necessary to encourage them.

Blind spells and dizziness, experienced by young people, who otherwise seem quite well, are often the direct indications that too much food is being eaten or the wrong sort of food.

School washrooms should have faucets for running water, which are controlled by foot pressure, so that the hands need not touch the faucet. The common towel should be abolished with the common drinking cup wherever it has not been already.

Plenty of water to drink and a fair allowance of fruit should be given a child twenty months old. He may have oranges, lemons, prunes and pineapples. Toasted bread, crackers and cereals will not injure him.

Tuberculosis makes great headway among children. It is a disease which above all others, requires diet. Children with tuberculosis heredity or tendencies should be fed along the same line as for anemia, except that fat rather than iron is demanded.

It is very necessary that the studious child should be encouraged to take enough outdoor exercise to protect its health and insure its growth. Teacher and parent working together will find it possible to correct the "too much indoors" error.

RUBBER FROM STEEL

Its Manufacture From Coke Oven Gases a Possibility

At a recent meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute in London, the president read a paper on by-produce in steel manufacture. He discussed the utilization of blast furnace gases for operating gas engines and for illumination and heating, and the later developments in making nitric acid from these gases, and also the manufacture of bricks and cement from slags. A new idea was presented looking toward the synthetic production of india rubber from coke oven gases. The president's words were: "It was being sought to obtain from it the hydrocarbons, the derivatives of which were found in india rubber, and experiments that had been made permitted the foreshadowing of the manufacture of artificial rubber."

Fortunes in Lace

Several millionaire families in New York possess immense fortunes in laces alone. The laces owned by the Astor family are valued at $300,000; those of the Vanderbilts at $500,000. It is said that the New York Four Hundred buy more lace than any collectors in the world. No fewer than twenty wealthy women may be mentioned who each own laces worth $50,000. Lace is the luxury of the rich. No ordinary middle-class collector can hope to possess anything but a few choice pieces, if lucky enough to be able to have these.

There are several fine collections amongst the English aristocracy. The priceless lace of the late Queen Victoria, worth at least $375,000, was chiefly left to H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg. Queen Alexandra has a magnificent collection; years ago its value was said to be $250,000.

OTONABEE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY IN GOOD SHAPE

Finances in Excess of Previous Year.

(Special Correspondence.)

KEENE, Jan. 25. — Miss Irene Thompson of Mount Julian is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Gall.

The annual meeting of the Otonabee Agricultural Society was held in the town hall on Thursday, Jan 18. The report presented by Treasurer J. A. Drummond was most gratifying, the finances being in excess of last year. The officers elected were as follows:

Mrs. W. Foster and children; New Liskeard; Mrs. A Shearer of Indian River, and Mrs. J. Shearer, of Lang, were guests last Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Burley.

Born to Mr. Mr. and Mrs. James Nelson, on Monday, an. 15th, a daughter.

About 150 guests assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McFarlane last Wednesday evening and spent the evening at cards and dancing.

Mr. Harry Mather is spending a few days this week in Toronto.

The sewing "bee" held by the Ladies' Patriotic Society last Wednesday in the town hall was quite a success. Another "bee" will be held Wednesday afternoon, the 31st, to which all ladies are cordially invited. Refreshments will be served.

Corp. Roy McDougal of the 164th Bn., Hamilton, spent Trusday and Friday at the Victoria House. Corp. McDougal was a former employe of the Bank of Toronto at Keene.

Mr. Harold Roche returned to Peterborough on Monday after spending the past week at the home of his parents.

Miss Annie Bohn is visiting Toronto friends.

Mrs. Wm. Bell received word during the past week that her brother, Pte. John Barnhardt, of the 87th Grenadier Guards, had been killed in action on the Somme front.

Mr. Dennis Roche has returned to his home from Toronto owing to the illness of his father, Mr. P. Roche, who, we are pleased to report, is getting along nicely.

President—Peter Drummond.
1st Vice-Pres.—R. A. Nelson.
2nd Vice-Pres.—H. Humphries.
Sec.-Treas.—J. A. Drummond.
Directors: Messrs. John Lang, Jas. McNeil, M. O'Keefe, S. M. Comrie, G. E. Kent, C. Nelson, N. J. Miller, D. Edwards, J. J. Moore, G. Howson, E. Wood, Alex. Wood.
Auditors: John Lang and James McNeil.

It was decided to hold a field crop competition for oats, and to have a departmental judge of horses at the fall fair. The date of the fall fair was set for October 2 and 3. The president was appointed a delegate to attend the convention of Fairs and Associations at Toronto.

The Keene Ladies' Patriotic Society will give a Valentine entertainment and supper on Wednesday evening, Feb. 14th.

Prof. Lees, P. S. I., paid the local public school a visit on Friday of last week.

Miss Margaret Sharpe of Westwood visited at the home of Mr. Jas McNeil the past week.

The ball given by the stock holders of the Lang town hall was well attended last Friday night. The proceeds were to go toward improving the hall.

Mrs. Skinkle of Lakefield and Mrs. Morgan of Peterborough spent a few days last week at the home of Mr. Duncan McFarlane.

Mr. W. Howson of Alberta is visiting his brother, Mr. G Howson.

Mr. Michael Kennealley attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Thomas Crowley of Peterborough on Monday.

Hot Water the Best Liver and Bowel Medicine

Says Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Washes Poisons from System

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to billious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Kenny of Percy Are Honored.

(Special Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Jan. 25.—A number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Jas Kenny of Percy met at their home recently and presented them with a substantial gift prior to their removal to Peterborough, where they will reside. During the course of the evening a nicely worded address was read, and the presentation of a handsome buffet made. The address was as follows:

Dear Friends: We are met here tonight with feelings of pleasure and regret. It is and has always been a genuine pleasure to be entertained in your hospitable home, but we feel sorry as we think this is likely to be the last for some time at least. We are all creatures of circumstances and circumstances have led you to make your decision. We regret that it should be so. Your friendships (many of them lifelong) are, however, not easily broken, and we trust your thoughts will often turn back to the old home and its memories.

You may rest assured that your kindly dispositions and generous characters, which have endeared you to us all, will not be forgotten. We wish you to accept this buffet, not only for its value—for money cannot measure the esteem in which you are held—but as a token of good will and respect, and as a reminder in your future days of the friends and neighbors of the old home community.

Signed on behalf of the assembly.

Among the list of successful students at the Christmas examinations at Norwood high school we notice the names of Lexis Fife, Laura Smith, Willie Tate and Ona Doxsee, town.

An interesting moving picture show under the auspices of the Ontario Board of Health was given in the town hall on Wednesday afternoon and evening and was well attended. The doctor tried to show some preventive measures to stop the spread of various diseases and to encourage all to do what they could to exterminate the fly.

Quite a number of our young folks went to Norwood Friday evening to enjoy the carnival there. They report a good crowd. Our local best skater, Mr. Bert Dodd, was successful in winning first prize in the single race and also first in the partner race. Bert is at home on his skates and hard to beat.

An excessive cold snap has been experienced here and some of our people have been anxiously awaiting the arrival of the coal car. However, its timely arrival has settled all fears and all are supplied.

WOULD PUNISH KAISER AND BREAK GERMANY

Stern Treatment Demanded by Toronto Colonel—Must Never Discuss Peace With Huns

Before the Empire Club of Toronto Col. George T. Denison spoke on "The Alleged German Peace Offer." He said that peace talk by Germany was the symptom of the intrigue to take away from us by treachery and diplomatic ruse what we have won. He instanced the treatment of the conquered enemy in ancient and more modern times; told how the Romans utterly destroyed Carthage and plowed it under; how Napoleon was banished by the sentence of the allies, without any opportunity for conference or negotiation, which was utterly refused; how Jefferson Davis was imprisoned and very harshly treated at the close of the American civil war. He said that the allies must not listen to any terms whatever from the Germans and their allies; we must never have any of our representatives sit down at the same table with them; we must never discuss it in any way; such a thing would be a cruel wrong to all our young men who have died for this country and for freedom and for our Empire.

Must Punish Well

Suppose we did make a peace, the war would be on again just as soon as the Germans could get ready if we stupidly gave them now a truce, and thus we would throw a terrible burden and a responsibility upon our children. Therefore we must take exactly the same course as those other great countries did when they found that they had to fight the thing out to the end. While we should not be influenced by feelings of vengeance, we ought to punish Germany and her allies in such a way as to secure peace for hundreds of years if possible. He believed this could only be done by the utter destruction of the German power, and the enemy ought to be punished for the horrible crimes they have committed, such as were unthought of in ancient times or in any of the cases mentioned.

Restore German States

Maximilian, Emperor of Mexico, never committed any crimes, but he was condemned and shot; why should the Emperor William get more tender treatment than other scoundrels that have lived? He is a criminal at heart, and ought to be punished as such. The way to save us from future trouble is to destroy and break up the whole German Empire; the Hohenzollerns ought to be taken and kept as prisoners; the different nations that make up the German nation the Kingdoms of Bavaria, Baden, Saxony, etc., should all be asked to become again separate kingdoms, and not allowed to send representatives to Berlin to the Reichstag to be overshadowed and dominated by the Huns of Prussia and forced into wars with other countries. No doubt these kingdoms would be pleased to obtain their freedom from the Huns

MEN WENT ON ALONE

Officers All Killed, But Ontario Battalion Took Whole Objective

Major-General R. E. W. Turner recounts some striking deeds of splendid heroism by Ontario battalions in the following letter to the Ontario Government, transmitted through Lieut.-Col. Richard Reid, agent-general for this province in London. The letter reads: "Dear Colonel Reid—Please convey to the Ontario Government the deep appreciation of all ranks of the Canadian overseas forces in Great Britain for their message of sympathy and continued confidence in their loyal efforts for King and Canada.

"I desire to add to the above my deep personal appreciation of the splendid behavior of the Ontario battalions that I have the honor to command, namely, in the third brigade and second division. No finer incentive to gallant deeds is needed than the magnificent example of one battalion that lost all its officers going over the parapet at the Somme on Sept. 15, 1916, but still continued on under the non-commissioned officers, and gained, consolidated and held all its objective under intense enemy's fire.

The measure of success must not always be judged by the number of prisoners captured, as it was found later on the same day the Ontario trenches captured from the Boches were filled with German dead, a splendid proof of their ability with the bayonet. Ontario has good cause to thank God for her 'noble sons.'"

TATTOOISTS VERY BUSY

Old Order Reversed—Girls Subm the "Sign of Indelible Love"

For soldiers and sailors to h their sweethearts' names or init tattooed on their arms is a practic centuries old, but in the East End London the order has been revers Professional tattooists down the affirm that they are kept uncomfor ably busy by damsels who desire have their "boy's" names thus indelibly imprinted on their arms. Tattoo ing can be done now by an electrical controlled instrument, this meth being both considerably quicker less painful than the old-fashion method.

"The girls around here fairly fl to me," declared one of these arti "and they all want boys' names, mos ly soldiers and sailors, done on thei arms. There's two of 'em in there now" (indicating an inner roo where his assistant was at work. From this room two buxom belle presently emerged, and the tattoo inquired of one if she would mind h visitor seeing her arms? The girl d clared that she "didn't mind," and nonchalantly slipped up her sleev and there, in multi-colored script read the romantic declaration: Love Bill Bloggs" (or whatever th name was).

The damsels having departed, th "artist" was asked if his fair cl were invariably constant, or if they ever wanted the original names ex punged and new ones substitut "Bless you," was the reply, "the nearly always do! When one fe low goes to the front, they take with another and want the secon lad's name put on instead." "And ca you manage that?" "Sure we can, the name isn't too long! What w generally do is to turn the first nam into a nice little bunch of flowers, a then print the new name underneath.

CANADIANS TOO YOUNG

Keen Young Soldiers Who Had to Home

An English paper said: Another tachment of young Canadian soldi is about to be sent back to th Dominion. Its members enlisted a men of full military age, and it ha only been discovered in compiling th records in this country that they a many months short of eighteen yea of age.

"They are as keen as mustard," said a Canadian official, "and are fi class fighting material, but th authorities think that they should back to Canada to continue in traini there until they are old enough take their places in the firing lin The youngsters themselves are d appointed that their great hope meeting the Hun must be postpo but are well content with the "ride" they have had across the lantic.

The First Typewriter

The typewriter is not such a modern invention as is popularly supposed. Two hundred years ago Henry Mill patented in London a writing machine but it was so clumsy as to be practically useless.

Nothing more in the same line seems to have been done until 1829, says The London Chronicle, when the first American typewriter was patented; it was christened "the typographer." Four years later France tried its hand in this direction, while between 1840 and 1860 Sir Charles Wheatstone invented several writing machines.

It was not, however, until 1873 that the typewriter became a commercial proposition. This was invented by an American, C. L. Scholes, who interested E. Remington & Son, a firm of gun manufacturers, in it, and in 1874 it was put upon the market.

Vertical Mower For Tangled Grasses

A machine which mows both vertically and horizontally has been invented by an Oregon man. It has been used with good success in heavy clover and vetch which were badly lodged and tangled, and which usually require one or more men to clear the divider on the outer end of the swath. The vertical cutting bar is a little more than two feet high. Connections between it and the horizontal cutter bar actuate the cutting blades. These connections consist of rods and cranks operated by the movable cutter bar of the horizontal mower.

Keeps Feet Off Radiator

A bracket to be fastened to a steam or hot water radiator to enable a person to warm his feet has been patented by its inventor.

HOUSE WILL TAKE RECESS AFTER VOTING SUPPLIES

Recess of Two Months Will Enable Sir Robert Borden to Attend Conference---Quebec's Part in the War.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—Both parties held caususes yesterday and it is understood that the Government definitely decided to accept the proposal of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to adjourn the house for the period covered by the Prime Minister's trip to England. The house will, therefore, vote the war credit and pass an interim supply bill and then adjourn probably from Feb. 15 till April 15. The exact date of the adjournment will depend upon the time fixed for the imperial conference and a cable announcing the date will probably be received by the Prime Minister today. The adjournment will, of course be beyond Easter Sunday, which falls this year on April 8. All controversial matters, including the extension of the parliamentary term will be postponed until after the adjournment.

Liberals Are Worried

The Liberal caucus was followed by no announcement of any kind, but it is rumored that the Dorchester by-election and its probate ecect upon the prospects of the Liberal party in Ontario and the West was under discussion. The election is set for Saturday and the result is being awaited with no little interest. It is probable that the debate on the address which so far has elicited little of interest, will be prolonged for another week. Sir Sam Hughes is expected to speak next Tuesday.

Quebec on Trial

The failure of Quebec to do her full share in the matter of recruiting was dealt with from several angles in the speeches contributed to the debate on the address in the House of Commons yesterday.

W. A. Boys, Conservative member for South Simcoe, made a slashing speech which aroused supporters of the Government to great enthusiasm. He called on Sir Wilfrid Laurier to repudiate his candidate in Dorchester, and said that Cannon should be sent to an internment camp rather than to the House of Commons.

W. F. Cockshutt, Conservative member for Brantford, said there was no use in blinking facts; Quebec had not done her part up to date. He believed, however, that the French in Canada would yet prove as valorous as their kinsmen in old France.

Hon. Charles Marcill, defending his province, said that the people had been told by the Government that the man who tilled the farm or made munitions contributed just as effective service to the Empire as the man who went to the front.

Daddy Long Legs

HEAVY DEMAND FOR SEATS AT THE BOX OFFICE TODAY.

Judging from the demand for seats for "Daddy Long Legs," Henry Miller's splendid comedy, which will be presented at The Grand for two performances on Saturday next, it looks as though the company will receive the same reception in Peterborough as they have been getting ever since the tour commenced.

There are few women who have not read this charming story by Jean Webster, who would not like to see it presented by such a capable company as Mr Miller is sending on this Canadian tour. With this in view, the management have arranged for a special scale of prices for the matinee on Saturday, the first half of the lower floor being $1.00 and the balance of the lower floor 50c and 75c. In the balcony the first half has been scaled at 75c, and the second section at 50c.

As the seat sale opened this morning and there is a heavy demand for reservations, those who contemplate attending either the matinee or evening performances will do well to book their seats as early as possible.

That the matter of surgeon for the House of Refuge be left in the hands of the Board of Management; also salary attached.

That no action be taken re appointment of engineer.

Committee on Finance

Mr. Squire presented the report of the County Committee on Finance as follows:—

That the accounts marked Schedule A be ratified.

That the accounts marked Schedule B be paid.

That the usual by-law for borrowing money for current purposes be passed, making provision for $45,000.

That this committee recommend the paying of $3,000 per month for the balance of the year 1917 in addition to the $3,000 already granted for January of 1917.

That the payments made to the Patriotic Fund be levied for in the year 1917 in the usual manner of collecting rates, and that a by-law consistent with the same be passed by this Council.

That all loans from the bank be advanced by way of overdraft save Patriotic grants.

That the Children's Aid Society be granted the sum of $400

That the sum of $4,000 be granted to the British Sailors' Relief Fund to be paid forthwith and that a by-law be passed consistent with the same.

The report was adopted and confirmed by by-law.

Committee on County Property

Mr W. A. Anderson presented the report of the County Property Committee as follows:—

That this committee recommend that the council stand by the agreement entered into by the chairman, Mr. McFee, and Mr. Cory, the adjustor for the underwriters, with regard to fire damage to the Court House.

That the matter of procuring necessary minor articles for County purposes be left in the hands of the chairman and Mr. Nesbitt.

That the chairman procure five cords of hard wood, together with the amount already secured.

That H. Wheeler be allowed 12c per pound for beef to be supplied to the jail:

The report was adopted and confirmed by by-law.

Mr. Wheeler had supplied the meat on his last contract at 9c per lb.

Committee on Roads and Bridges

Mr. Bullied presented the report on roads and bridges as follows:—

That the reeves of the municipalities be respectively commissioners for the expenditures of any county moneys appropriated for roads or bridges in their respective municipalities and that where money is voted towards a bridge or road on the boundary between any municipalities, the Reeves thereof shall act in conjunction with each other.

That such commissioners be empowered to make such repairs from time to time as they shall deem necessary upon bridges or approaches of the county in their respective municipalities, and that the treasurer pay therefor upon the certificate of such commissioners, but where such repairs are likely to exceed $100 the commissioner shall first obtain the approval of the reeve of an adjoining municipality.

That the usual grants of $100 each to Burleigh & Anstruther, Chandos, Galway and Cavendish, Harvey and Belmont & Methuen.

That the county contribute 40 per cent. of the total cost of a bridge at the end of the street railway adjoining Otonabee, providing the balance is provided from other sources, and that the county assume the maintenance of such bridge, and that Messrs. Warden, Easson, Anderson, Fitzgerald, Rye and Bell act as a committee to have the matter carried into effect.

That Peter's Bridge be rebuilt this year and that the chairman, Warden and Mr. Squire be authorized to carry the same into effect.

That Messrs. McKee and Young be appointed to look after necessary repairs to Pigeon Creek Bridge and Chemong Bridge.

That Mr. Ingram procure chains necessary to float an anchor boom one-half way across at Gannon's Bridge if he deem it advisable.

That the matter of acting upon assumption of bridges be dealt with in the future as has been done in the past.

That Messrs. Griffith, Rye, Young, Walsh, Darling, Anderson, Brown and McKee be a special committee to ascertain what steps should be taken re taking advantage of the Highways Act; Mr Anderson to be chairman of such committee.

That the treasurer be authorized to pay to the township of Otonabee one-half of the cost of rebuilding Taylor's Bridge upon a statement being furnished by the township of such expenditure.

That the matter re Monaghan Bridges be left in the hands of the Chairman, Warden and Mr. Rye.

That Mr. Clark be commissioner for Silver Lake Boundary Bridge.

That Harrington's Bridge and Pigeon Creek Bridge be visited by Messrs. Chairman, Fitzgerald, McKee, Young and Nichols and that they report at the June session.

That the Chairman, Warden, and Messrs. Darling, Griffith and Mathison be a committee to construct Dafoe's Bridge; also to visit Freeman's Bridge and report at June session.

That Messrs. the Chairman, Warden, Darling, Griffith, Mathison and Anderson be a committee to inspect Welbeck's and Boland Bridges, Asphodel and report a the June session.

That Messrs. McKee, Eason, Fitzgerald and Walsh inspect Haines Bridge and report at June session.

The report was adopted and confirmed by bylaw.

AUDITORS APPOINTED

The County Council at their session last night appointed Messrs. W. H. Casement and Jas. Calder auditors for the year 1917.

WANT EXTRA GRANT

The report of the committee on schools will be taken up on Saturday morning in order that the members can seriously consider the extra grant to continuation schools.

Reeve Fitzgerald, Lakefield, pointed out to the members that the continuation school in Lakefield was a benefit to the children of the surrounding townships and no fee was charged by the village for the attendance of these pupils. He was positive that only half the pupils were from the village.

Reeve Young of Ennismore was quite positive that the county should grant 25 per cent. extra to the municipalities having continuation schools. In Ennismore the continuation classes were attended by pupils who came from other townships. The assessment of lands had been raised owing to the benefit of the continuation school and in that way the township itself was paying the extra grant asked.

Some of the council thought that the continuation schools should charge fees to pupils from outside the municipality.

HOUSE OF REFUGE

The report on the House of Refuge for the year 1916 was presented to the County Council yesterday afternoon by Chairman Bullied and the report was received on a motion of Reeve Fitzgerald.

Some of the Council did not favor adopting the report that referred to the appointing of an inspector. They thought more consideration should be given to the matter before taking action.

The report read:—

Conditions prevailed during 1916 much the same as reported to you by my predecessors for previous years.

Your board made the statutory visits and as far as possible consistent with what information was available performed their duties to the best of their ability.

The attached statement reveals to you the number of inmates and the average cost per week of the same.

We have no specific report from the house surgeon referring to the health of the different inmates or the cause of death where death took place, but in so far as we could ascertain the regulations have been complied with.

From now on considerable clothing, boots and other wearing apparel will be required, together with a great quantity of provisions and in order to carry out the object for which the institution was established an inspector outside of the council, in my opinion, should be appointed who would be responsible for all sales and purchases and the distribution of all supplies to the various inmates as their particular cases require.

An inventory is on file in the county vault of all equipment and a copy of the same could be furnished such inspector in order to place all responsibility on him.

The recommendation is made without casting reflection on anybody but other places report the appointment as most conductive to the satisfactory conduct of such institutions.

INSPECTOR BRODRICK'S REPORT

The average attendance for the townships was as follows:

	Enrol't	Ave.	P.C.
Smith	498	280.50	56.32
Ennismore . . .	152	81.50	53.62
Harvey	211	107	50.71
Galway & Caven	77	38	50
Total	938	507	54

It is gratifying to be able to report that all the schools on the Victoria side of the Inspectorate and all but two on the Peterborough side opened at New Year's with teachers qualified under the regulations.

There is no longer any difficulty in securing qualified teachers. But the problem awaiting solution is how to secure for the schools of the north teachers having qualifications as high as those in sections less remote. The situation will, I believe, be met by the increasing number of second-class teachers and by paying higher salaries in the northern sections. Under the present system of government grants, the paying of higher salaries is no burden. As most members of the council are aware, the grants are now paid under a sliding scale, the highest grant being 40 per cent. of all salaries above $100 paid to sections having less than $30,000 assessment, and the lowest 20 per cent. of all salaries above $400 to sections having an assessment of $100,000 and higher. This scale of payment gives to sections having a low assessment a relatively larger grant. In addition, the government pays generously to such schools from the Assisted Schools Fund the amount to individual schools depending upon assessment salary paid, expenditure on school improvements and other local conditions. The total grants paid to certain sections are in fact very large, quite large enough to make it as easy to pay $600 now as it was to pay the much lower salary of ten years ago.

To illustrate by two cases—one from each side of the Inspectorate:

First—One school (Peterborough County) in 1906 paid a salary of $270, and received a total grant not exceeding $25. In 1916 this same school paid $600 and received a total grant of $363, an advantage to the section over 1906 conditions of about $13.

Second — (Victoria) Salary in 1905, $300. Total grant $17. Raised by section, $283. In 1916, salary paid, $600. Total grant, $353.90. Raised by section $246.10, an advantage to the section of $36.90.

I have selected these schools because (1) The salaries are relatively higher, (2) The assessment of one is considerably below and that of the other is somewhat above the average for the township.

These sections are both financially better now than in 1906.

Educationally the advantage is still greater. (a) Then the certificates were of lowest grade and the teacher's experience brief. (b) Now they have second-class teachers with better scholarship, better professional training and longer experience.

What these two sections have accomplished (financially) is quite within the reach of other sections.

Efficiency.

The schools are now practically all under qualified teachers, and it is reasonable to expect better work. The intelligence of the teacher shown in her teaching, the spirit and judgment displayed in her management, the enthusiasm and glow which she brings to her work and her efforts to cultivate the school spirit in the community are impalpable things impossible to measure in words. But it is certain that there is generally an improvement both in teaching and management. This does not, however, mean that the schools are as efficient as they should be. They are not. For this there are several reasons:

(1) Irregularity of attendance. This is not merely a tale twice told. it is a story repeated to this council year after year. A few schools give a splendid attendance, among them No. 9, Smith. A glance at the table of attendance shows that the percentage of attendance on this side of the Inspectorate ranges from 46, the lowest, to 75, the highest, the average being 54 per cent. Of an enrolment of 938, only about 27 per cent. attended three-quarters of the time or more, while 400 pupils or very nearly 50 per cent. attended less than half the time during the calendar year.

In my opinion there is only one solution for the school attendance problem—convey all children to school at public expense. Then enforce the provisions of the Truancy Act. A second cause of inefficiency in rural schools is found in the frequent change of teachers.

Agricultural Education. — The Department of Education is now and has been for years co-operating with the Ontario Department of Agriculture with a view to making the education provided for country children more adequately meet the needs of rural life. For this purpose a course of study has been drafted, provisions made for the training of teachers competent in agricultural work, and encouragement is offered to both trustees and teachers by way of generous grants.

The Course of Study is well within the ability of pupils of our middle and senior grades; its topics are subjects intimately related with farm life, and therefore appeal strongly to the interests of rural children, and it is varied enough and elastic enough to meet the varied conditions of different communities. The whole spirit of the course is such as to keep pupils in sympathy with and to dispose them favorably towards rural life in later years, and the method suggested, indeed insisted upon, is that of observation, investigating and experimenting.

Grants.—While it is very desirable that teachers of agriculture in public schools should be certificated, the work may be carried on by any teacher who is competent. In the case of teachers without certificates, the government grant to both trustees and teacher is $8 or $12 according to the plan adopted. In the case of certificated teachers the grant to each is $20 or $30.

In Peterborough West there are now three schools doing agricultural work. All school gardens have been prepared for a beginning of observation work in the spring. Besides the work done in these schools, home gardens have been carried on in many schools, and school fairs held under the direction of the agricultural representatives. These men on both sides of the Inspectorate have been enthusiastic, intelligent and untiring in the work of promoting agriculture in the schools, and I hope that many teachers will qualify this year and enter upon the work next autumn.

The Continuation School at Ennismore continues to do excellent work under a staff both qualified and competent.

Miss Myrtle Grahame of Peterborough spent Sunday at her home in the village.

Mr. J. Burton of Toronto was in the village on business on Monday.

Mr. J. Skinkle of Peterborough was a guest at his home in the village over the week-end.

Rev. J. Fenwick, Toronto, is a guest in the village.

Mr. Everett Robinson of Peterborough spent a few days in the village visiting friends.

A service of intercession was held in the Baptist church on Wednesday evening.

Rev. J. H. Slimon desires to thank his many friends in Lakefield for their kindness and to express his appreciation of the spirit of Christian sympathy which prompted their action.

The W. A. had their weekly meeting at the home of Mrs. Marling.

Miss Ida Lynn of Peterborough was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Trude Waldon on Sunday.

The A. Y. P. A. have received acknowledgements of the Christmas parcels from the following soldiers: Lce. Corp. Gordon Crawford, Ptes. H. Pemberthy, W. Robinson, Wilbert Webster and Albert Ball.

Mr. Alvin Grahame spent a couple of days in Peterborough on a visit to friends.

Mr. Jas. Campbell, who was called to Brampton owing to the serious illness of his son, Mr. James Campbell, Jr., has returned home and reports his son out of danger.

Mr. T. C. Ridpath of Lethbridge, Alberta, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ridpath.

Mrs. A. J. Kidd and Miss Myrtle spent a few days in Norwood visiting relatives.

Mr. Robert Patton of Toronto, who has been a guest at "The Grove," has returned home.

Miss Eva Campbell is visiting Peterborough friends.

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

The Canadian Standard Efficiency Tests program, which was held at the Y. M. C. A. last night proved very interesting. The first observation test interested the boys very much. The test consisted of twenty-five articles placed on a table covered with a cloth, the boys standing around the table. The cloth was removed for one minute while the boys observed the articles. The articles were then covered, and the boys required to write from memory what they had observed on the table. A number of the boys were successful in naming twenty-four of the twenty-five articles in this test.

The second test required the boys to go into a room for half a minute and when they came out make out a list of the furniture and articles they had noticed.

Next Wednesday the boys will have the pleasure of hearing Major O'Flynn of the 247th give a practical talk on the methods of trench warfare and the fighting in general on the Western front.

Tonight at 7:30 the senior employed boys life problem club will meet, and at 8 o'clock the gymnasium class.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

There was a lively business done on hay at the market this week, and despite the fact that plenty was offered it sold quickly. The demand for straw is good also.

Very little livestock is being shipped out. The local butchers have a hard time getting enough to supply their trade. The prices on the outside market are still high.

There is no change in the price of hogs, although the market is very firm.

The egg and butter market is very much lower at Toronto and Montreal.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, Jan. 25. — Two hundred horses in all were taken by the French army inspectors in Toronto last week at the Repository, Union Horse Exchange, and McGregor's. A couple of loads were sent West through the agency of the Repository, one load to Rosthern, Sask., and the other to Moosejaw. The city trade is more active, with Simpson's sale of horses at the Repository a source of attraction for horsemen. There were 27 horses sold which were discarded from the city delivery service to make room for motor trucks, and these brought an average of $135. A large number of these horses were purchased by Eastern Ontario men, and some of them went to Grafton. The general horse trade for local account showed some livening up.

Good shipments have been made to the Union Horse Exchange for this week's trade from Mark Crompton, Coulter Bros., Thos. Jackes, Thomas Slater of Chatham, and Williamson Bros. About twenty horses were sent to different points in the West last week from the Union Exchange. The prospects appear to be good for an active trade throughout the spring months.

REDUCING THE MEAT BILLS

"LEFTOVERS" IF PROPERLY TREATED ARE VERY TASTY.

The meat bill is the first place for the average housewife to look for large expenditures, and this is largely because Canadians have not yet learned the art of using everything that is left over.

It is not an attractive combination of words, "left overs," when applied to to-morrow's luncheon or dinner, but when used with judgment, one's most intimate friend would not recognize them.

In the first place impress upon yourself the fact that the best chefs in the world—the French never throw away even a teaspoonful of vegetables. Everything is saved and transformed into some delicious tid-bit—not to-morrow, as the uninitiated have a prejudice against "hash" and other homely dishes. But if a day or two elapse between the roast and "Marguerites" the family never knows that the much lauded "French creation" is a concoction of Jane's, made from a small piece of the mutton or a croquette or any bit of meat which was left over, a few of the outside pieces of celery, scraped and cut very fine, a couple of tablespoonfuls of tomato, a cup of soup stock, and some cold mashed potatoes.

To three cups of cold mashed potato add sufficient flour to make a rather stiff dough; turn on a board and roll to the thickness of an inch, then with a round cutter about three inches in diameter cut into rounds. With another cutter, three sizes smaller, cut the centres from the rounds, taking care not to cut all the way through; take out the potato with a fork and bake potato-cakes on griddle until a golden brown. Place in oven until ready to use. Mince the meat and add it to the celery, which has already been cooked until tender. Make a sauce of the soup stock and tomato, thickening with a heaping teaspoonful of butter and one of flour rubbed to a smoothe paste; when cooked to the consistency of very thick cream add the celery and meat. Allow this to get very hot, then season with salt and a dash of cayenne pepper and paprika. Fill the potato cakes, heaping the mince a little. Serve on platter with sprigs of parsley.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

T. R. AND A. A. SENIOR O.H.A. TEAM HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Toronto Team Will Give Soldiers Tidy Battle and Fans are Assured of Red Hot Contest

The 228th Batt. team of Toronto will be unable to come to Peterborough for a game with the 247th seven tomorrow night, but Major O'Flynn has arranged for the T. R. & A. A. seniors to appear here. This arrangement will insure a real battle for the Soldiers and will provide a good hockey bill for the fans, who have been looking forward to a game in which the locals would have to extend themselves all the way.

G. H. B. Insole, secretary-treas. of the 228th team, writes Major O'Flynn:

Sir: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd inst., and regretted very much the necessity of wiring you today as I did. However, the unforeseen has happened.

Our battalion goes on "last leave" on Friday afternoon, and it is very probable that we will be on our way about the middle of next month.

I showed your letter to our Commanding Officer, Lt.-Col. Earchman, and while he would have liked to have our boys do battle with your team, still, he could not give us the required permission under the circumstances.

I sincerely trust that your team will "clean up" the opponents, not only in all future hockey matches, but in the "big game" also.

Play Postponed Games

There are a great many postponed scheduled games to be played and the management are requesting the skips to have them played off as soon as possible.

(Lindsay Warder.)

After a hurried luncheon the Lindsay knights of the stane returned to the arena and took on two strong rinks from Peterborough, skipped by Alex. Kay (an old Beaverton curler) and W. D. Campbell. Ice No. 5 and ice no. 2 were used respectively, and the progress of the play was watched with interest by a large gallery. Peterborough got on to the rune of the ice in quick fashion, even before Lindsay curlers got the hang of the kinks, and also got a firm hold on the chalk. Skip Campbell started off with a 4 and Skip Kay with a string of 1's. At the halfway mark Lindsay curlers were 15 down, but there was no let up. In the Beall-Kay game the "breaks" went contrary to the Lindsay aggregation at every end and President Beall was unable to get his head up. Kay, on the other hand, was playing a magnificent game and seldom missed a shot. His rink also played their rocks well and placed them were required. They were particularly adept at piling stones in front of the circles (long and short guards) and blocking the "T." The score was considerably reduced at the last two ends when Beall tallied a 5 and a 3, being three down at the final.

In front of the chamber of horrors, however, the battle was of the right royal kind. Campbell got away to a flying start and gave Lindsay little chance to grab the crayon. Skip Campbell followed the "plugging" game, his men getting them through with ease and skill. At one stage of the game Carley came within an ace of counting a 7 end, missing the shot by getting a trifle light in weight. "Moose" came back, however, with a will at the finish and managed to drift in a 6 end on the final count, which placed him one to the good on the board. His men played hard throughout the game.

FORESTRY THAT PAID

REFORESTED AREAS IN SCOTLAND OF GREAT USE IN THE WAR

A Canadian, a member of the 244th Forestry Battalion, wrote from Scotland: One of the first things which strikes the "Colonial" upon entering the wooded areas here is the absence of windfalls and underbrush, the ground being clean like a park. This condition is largely due to the fact that areas are reforested ones, and the stands for the most part are as yet far from mature, and are in a very healthy condition. The stands are composed nearly altogether of lodgepole pine and larch. One can see some white birch and a little white fir in certain localities.

On one of the operations where cutting is being carried on the stands are of two ages, that is, sixty-five and one hundred and fifty years. At sixty-five years of age the pine may give ten thousand B.M. per acre, considering the closeness of utilization, while the hundred and fifty year old stand should yield about twenty thousand B.M. One hundred and ten trees to the acre seems to be about the average.

The larch appears to be reproducing very well from its own seed, but of course there is no reproduction from the pine. The British Government advances money to landlords for reforesting purposes at a rate of 2½ per cent. Approximate cost of reforesting an acre in Scotland is $125, and from observations on an operation it can be seen that at sixty-five years of age an acre will give an approximate return of $250. Taxes on wooded areas must be considered in any such computations.

FEATS OF SIGNALLING

Long Distances Annihilated in War by Curious Methods

The report that at the Battle of Ishtib a Bulgarian cowherd signalled news to his military countrymen relative to the position of the Serbian battalions by moving five cows about in various ways on the top of a hill, recall similar peculiar signalling feats in war.

The Basutos, for example, practically anticipated "wireless telegraphy." That is, striking heavily on a huge drum of goatskin which is placed on a special spot another Basuto at a distance can gather the purport of the message by placing his ear close to the ground to catch the vibrations; and then he, in turn, passes the message on. So quickly can this be done, owing to the peculiar configuration of Basutoland, that during the South African War the Basutos were said to know all about big battles long before the people in Cape Town.

Of course, given suitable climatic conditions, the military heliograph can transmit messages over enormous tracts of country, and the record is probably held by Captain Sadler, of the 6th Dragoon Guards, who, by this means, succeeded in South Africa in sending a message direct a distance of 130 miles.

CANADA'S FIRST V.C.

END OF FISHER, THE MACHINE GUNNER OF ST. JULIEN.

Lance-Corporal Fred Fisher, V.C., the first Canadian to win this decoration during the great war, resided in Toronto and was killed at St. Julien. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fisher, Westmount. Corporal Fisher was a second-year student at McGill University when he enlisted with the 13th Battalion. The decoration was sent to Mr. and Mrs. Fisher with a personal letter from his Majesty the King. The account of the deed which obtained for Corporal Fisher the Victoria Cross appeared in the Official Gazette as follows:

"On April 23, 1915, in the neighborhood of St. Julien he went forward with a machine gun, of which he was in charge, under heavy fire, and most gallantly assisted in covering the retreat of a battery, losing four men of his gun team. Later, after obtaining four more men, he went forward again to the firing line, and was himself killed while bringing his machine gun into action under very heavy fire in order to cover the advance of supports."

According to further details given by his officer, Capt. James Ross, who buried the hero after the battle, Corp. Fisher kept constantly in the front line, working his gun against the enemy, and doing his utmost to stem the onrushing tide of Germans. As his lines were forced farther and farther back he returned again and again to a new place at the post of danger, and carried on until he was killed.

CANADIAN NIGHT RAID

Excitement and Dangers of a Raid by Dark

In a letter home a Canadian boy tells in part as follows: "Are you ready, Mr Millar?"—the colonel was speaking to the scout officer. "Yes, sir, everything correct." They line up —these select ones who are to "go over" to-night. And a favorable mist covers the earth. One can see the chaps look at the prospects with the joy of an old salt when he scents a good breeze. Give us a night when the moon is obscured by a fog and the conditions are ideal for a surprise attack. The flares are gone up, the bullets are cracking across, the machine guns are rattling—and out they go, across "no man's land," taking advantage of shell holes or tall grass to avoid being seen. Always crawling, and to the Huns we are snakes in the grass.

We get to within 20 yards of the enemy parapet, but his sentry has not seen anything unusual. And now for the ticklish part. Up and run—run—run—climb into the trench and then hell is loose. Bombs are hurled, revolvers come into play. One sees blood. Fight, yes, fight it is—no thought of death—no hesitation—just a stand-up scrap—and then we hustle a prisoner or two over the parapet.

The little band straggles back to our lines. Generally, each man gets back as best he can. It may be we have some of our wounded to bring over, and how solicitous one chap is for another. Then, the glad handshakes, the stories, a cigarette, maybe a song, the fondling of souvenirs, and sleep. Such is a night raid somewhere in Belgium.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS' FLAG

In the courtyard of Chelsea Hospital a company drawn from the remnant of the first Newfoundland Battalion received from Princess Henry of Battenberg colors and a silver shield given by the women and children of England through the League of Empire. Many wounded Newfoundlanders paraded. Nearly every man in the battalion of honor had seen active service. They were all young, many of them cod fishermen and "lumber jacks."

The setting for the ceremony was perfect—the old chapel in the rear, with its torn battle flags of 300 years and tablets of Crimean heroes. In front of the steps were the heaped drums, where the standard-bearer knelt and where Colonel Whittaker acknowledged the gift.

Present to Commons

This handsome Mace was presented to the Canadian people by the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London, Eng., for use in the Ottawa House of Commons to replace the one destroyed in the Parliament buildings fire. It was given in appreciation of Canada's part in the Empire's war.

BELLS AFTER DARK

"A Lot of Tommy Rot," Said Vicar, When Warned

A police constable told the Enfield Bench that when be had informed the Rev. E. Coulthard, vicar of Winchmore Hill, that he would be summoned under the Defence of the Realm Act for allowing the bells of his church to be rung after prohibited hours, he replied: "It is a lot of tommy rot."

The vicar said the churchwardens were responsible, but, in reply to the Bench the constable said the churchwardens put the blame on the vicar, and refused to give their names and addresses. The chairman said the Bench considered the vicar was responsible and not the churchwardens, but as it was the first offence the summons would be dismissed.

NEIGHBORLINESS IS SPIRIT OF THE EMPIRE

Soldiers at the Front are Forming Opinion for Canada by Letters Home Says Peter McArthur.

Toronto's imperialists had a novel experience when an address on their favorite theme was given them by Mr. Peter McArthur, the farmer-poet and litterateur who in his newspaper sketches and books sings the praises of country life, and sounds the slogan, "Back to the Land." He claimed some authority to deal with topics of Empire, for, as he humorously said, he had had a unique experience in the study of Empire problems, having been "dead broke" in all the great centres of Anglo-Saxon civilization. This had given him the unusual opportunity of studying imperial problems from the bottom up, instead of the usual way, from the top down, with a return ticket in one's pocket.

The public opinion by which the problem of democracy in the Empire will be solved is now being formed, he said, not so much by press or platform or pulpit as by the letters from the boys at the firing-line or on their way there. Hundreds of thousands of these letters are penetrating to every community of the country, giving first-hand impressions of Canadian boys on coming in contact with the old-world civilization; and something is happening that is entirely in accord with the genius of the Canadian people.

Leaderless, But Genuine

We are having a great force developed which is entirely leaderless; nobody could have planned it; no one foresaw it; but we are having at the present moment a democratic conference regarding the affairs of the Empire. Our boys are meeting their fellows in the old-world, and the impressions they receive they transmit to us, with the result that public opinion is forming rapidly and becoming very coherent. While we are all interested in the periodic Imperial Conference, and look for the accomplishment of great things from it, it is well to remember that the public opinion by which the men of that Conference must stand or fall is now being formed by the democratic conference of the boys at the front.

Humble Builders

He told how Neil McAlpine had saved the Talbot settlement in Western Ontario by refusing to sell his precious store of wheat, the whole 3,000 bushels of which were given to the settlers in time of stress on the basis of bushel for bushel, to be returned from next harvest. McAlpine, as described by an Irish Catholic who profited by his loyalty and goodness, was "a Presbyterian on Sundays, but a good neighbor all the rest of the time." McAlpine, said the speaker, was a true Empire-builder, helping his neighbors in time of need; and this will be the spirit of Empire after the war. The speaker thought the inner history of Canada had never been written, for thousands of men like McAlpine were never mentioned in histories.

FRENCH AND CANADIANS

Many Points Covered in Letter From Canadian Surgeon

Major N. K. McIvor, a Winnipeg surgeon, writes from the front: "The French army, of whom we have seen a great deal lately, are grand, simply wonderful. They, too, are optimistic, in good spirits and will fight to the last ditch. The French army have nothing but the best to say about the Canadians, and they work exceedingly well together. We fare well for eats, of course when we go to the front line trenches it is hard tack and bully beef. It is great stuff to stick to you and carry you through.

"Write often, as letters are like 'manna' after hard days' work, just a bracer to run over them. It is remarkable what a tremendous amount of shell fire you can go through without getting hit, but if you happen to get in the way of one of those shells, well your death and funeral takes place at the same time."

PROGRESS MADE BY ST. PAUL'S CHURCH IN YEAR

Annual Reports Show Healthy Financial Condition---Active Work Conducted Along Many Lines.

The members of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church who attended the annual congregational meeting last evening in the Sunday school hall had many reasons for grateful thanksgiving owing to the fact that the reports presented were most encouraging in character.

Reports were presented covering all branches of the work of the congregation. These showed that many lines of activity were being conducted and that much interest was being taken in the work.

Sheriff James Hall opened the meeting. Mr. Jas. H. Connal was elected to the chair. The report of the Session was presented by Mr. Jas. Dutton. It traced the growth of the congregation. In 1876 the membership was 412 with about 200 families. The current revenue consisted largely of pew rents and was $2107, and the contributions for missions and schemes of the church $976. In 1896 the membership had reached 755, and the contributions for ordinary revenue $1102. In 1916 the membership had reached 1,004 and the receipts for ordinary revenue $8,839.05, and receipts for missionary purposes $6,201.88; making total receipts of $15,040.93, not including other considerable sums of money raised through the separate organizations of the church, such as $1,671.06 raised by the W. M. S., $940 raised by the Red Cross Society, $257.67 by the L. A., and $143.63 by the choir, making a grand total of $18,053.30, with still some miscellaneous receipts, including some from the Sunday school not reported. The report stated that appeals to the congregation on behalf of any worthy object, missionary or otherwise, always met with a hearty response.

A general visitation of the members of the congregation by the men of the church was made in December with gratifying results. During the year there were added to the church on profession of faith 19 and by certificate 38. There were removed by death 15, and by certificate 29. Three members lost their lives on the battle fields of France, Stewart Anderson, Laidlaw Anderson and Angus McIntosh. About 120 had enlisted from the church.

The members of the Young Men's Bible Class had commenced to raise a fund for the sending of a missionary to the foreign field as soon as some member of the congregation offered their life for this work.

Financial Statements.

The financial statement was presented by Mr. Wm. Scott. The envelope and open colections amounted to $7,124 and special collections were taken of $866.75 to reduce the deficit and $847.50 for the mortgage debt, making an additional sum of $1,714.25. The expenditures amounted to $8,408, in addition to which $1000 was paid on the mortgage debt, leaving a balance on hand of $87.95. The mortgage debt, which a few years ago was $15,000, has been reduced to $6600.

Missionary Givings.

The report on mission funds presented by Mr. Wm. Madill showed open collections of $3,775.42 and receipts from other sources, making a grand total of $6,281.88. The following allocation of funds was made: Montreal, Queen's, Knox, Manitoba, Saskatoon and Robertson Colleges and Westminster Hall, $370; home missions and social service, $2688; special missionary work, $1000; foreign missions, $1502; widows' and orphans' fund, $72; aged and infirm ministers' fund, $95; Point aux Troembles School, $170; Deaconess Home, $25; Sunday school and the young people's societies, $115; Assembly fund, $70.88. Total $6107.88. As a result of the visitation of the congregation in December the members had pledged themselves to give $500 more to missions, and approximately $1000 more to current revenue.

Sabbath School Report.

The superintendent of the Sabbath school, Mr. A. Mowat, reported for the Sunday school. Pupils enrolled, 409; average attendance about 260. Two members attended 52 Sundays, five attended 51 Sundays; two attended 50 Sundays, and ten received certificates for memory work.

The financial statement for the Sunday school was presented by Mr. H. O. Fisk. It showed receipts of $601.80, including $200 from the board of managers. After deducting the expenditures there was a balance on hand of $122.70. The receipts for missions amounted to $566.70.

Women's Missionary Society.

A splendid report was presented on behalf of the W. M. S. by Mrs. R. Harstone. At the special thank offering meeting in October $872.35 was raised. Membership, 133.

The financial statement of the W. M. S. was presented by Mrs. Samuel McKee, treasurer. It showed receipts of $1671. Of this, $1606.76 was transferred to the Presbyterial treasurer and the balance used for other missionary work.

An excellent report on behalf of the Ladies' Aid was presented by Mrs. A. Mowat. The treasurer's statement was preesnted by Mrs. E. F. Mason. The receipts amounted to $257 and the expenditures to $220.

Red Cross Work.

The report of the Red Cross Society as presented by Miss Nina Davidson showed a splendid year's work had been accomplished. During the year year the following were made: 183 hospital night shirts, 125 day shirts, 129 pairs of pyjamas, 70 dressing gowns, 798 pairs of socks, 337 sheets, 130 pillow covers, 2,533 towels, 1,437 bandages, 433 gauze vests, 5,088 hospital handkerchiefs, 60 small cushions and pillows, 48 personal property bags, 776 mouth wipes, 289 face cloths, also 14 fomentation cloths, wristlets, toques, knee caps, etc.

The financial statement from the Red Cross Society was presented by Mrs. W. R. Turner. The receipts amounted to $940 and the expenditures to the same amount less a balance on hand of $271.61.

Mr. John Allan gave the report and financial statement on behalf of the choir. There were 32 members in the choir.

The work of the Fraser Mission Band was reported on by the secretary, Mrs. L. LeClair.

Mrs. W. F. Nelson read the report of the Junior Mission Band (Faithful Workers).

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the members of the choir for their faithful work and a special vote of thanks to Miss Allan.

Officers Elected.

The following were elected to the board of managers: For three years, Messrs. J. H. Connal, T. A. S. Hay, F. Mason, W. H. Hill. For two years, Mr. James Best. For one years, Messrs. J. W. McDermid and James Skinner.

Messrs. W. Madill and W. H. Hill were re-elected to the board of Nicholls Hospital and Miss Dickson was elected to the board of the Protestant Home.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late Dr. R. F. Morrow took place this morning from his late residence on Dalhousie St. to the G.T.R. station and thence to Lindsay, where interment took place.

About twenty-five Masons and Oddfellows accompanied the remains to Lindsay, where they were met by about the same number of the members of sister lodges who marched with the funeral to the cemetery.

The funeral services at the house and at the cemetery were conducted by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D.

The pall bearers were Messrs. A. A. Fowler, Samuel Taylor, P. Alexander, William Hill of Peterborough, Robert Preston of Midland and David Clarke of Hamilton.

Trinity Sunday School

There will be a business meeting of Trinity Sunday School in the basement of the church at 7 o'clock tonight.

50 NATIVES DIE, 200 HURT MUCH PROPERTY DAMAGE

Earthquake on Island of Balis in Malay Archipelago

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Fifty natives were killed and 200 others injured in an earthquake on the island of Bali, in Malay Archipelago, according to a despatch from Amsterdam to the Central News. More than a thousand houses and factories and the native temples were destroyed. The Governor's palace was seriously damaged.

Firemen in Role of Chimney Sweeps

The fire department were called to Euclid avenue, East City, yesterday afternoon. The alarm came in over the telephone that it was a chimney fire, so the truck and a couple of men went to quench the blaze. The two firemen were very careful not to cause any unnecessary annoyance to the lady of the house. They took down the pipes and discovered the flue filled with bricks and mortar. After seeing that everything was all right the fire fighters were given a message. "Tell the chief that if he does not see that my chimney is cleaned when I send word I will report him."

It seems that a small boy left word at the fire hall a few weeks ago that a lady on Euclid Ave. wanted the chief to go and clean out a chimney. The firemen treated it as a great joke for a while, and the representative of the East Ward on the department was told to look at it the first day he was on leave. The fire alarm beat him to it.

VEGETABLES AS MEDICINES

Housewives should make it a point of serving plenty of fresh vegetables. Give less meat and more vegetables and the health of the family will surely be improved.

That "broom of the stomach," spinach, is particularly valuable for women all run down. It is rich in iron. To eat this vegetable means taking iron in a natural way instead of in the form of a drug.

In cooking spinnach never put water in the pot. Wash the vegetable thoroughly and put over the fire. It will create sufficient water to cook itself, and the virtues will not be thrown down the sink. Let those who hesitate to cook spinnach this way for fear of burning try it. They will be astonished at the amount of water seen after the cooking. Less salt should be put in when boiled this way for obvious reasons.

Cabbage, cauliflower, and the cabbage family generally are excellent for purifying the blood, and may be eaten freely in some form or another all through the year. Raw, ripe tomatoes are a remedy for billiousness and will be far better for the stomach than the calomel and other drugs which are often put into it to cure dizzy spells and kindred ills. The tomatoes should be eaten with the addition of salt and pepper only, neither oil nor vinegar. In fact some people consider tomatoes are far from improved by the addition of vinegar, and prefer them without.

Onion is an excellent tonic for the nerves. A steady diet of onions for a few weeks will make a nervous, dyspeptic a new person again. Other vegetables good for cases of nerves because they enrich the blood, which nourishes the nerves, are peas, beets, carrots, and artichokes. Thin persons should eat plentifully of these vegetables if they would make rich, red blood.

For torpid liver there is nothing better than diet of dandelions, using the water they were boiled in for making into a syrup to be taken also.

Celery eaten regularly will be very beneficial to those persons having a gouty tendency or who are troubled with rheumatism, while those who suffer from sleeplessness should eat freely of lettuce late in the day, because the milk contained in the leaves is a sedative that calms the nerves and creates a drowsiness.

Waterloo County Council endorsed the memorial of the Women's Suffrage League in favor of the franchise for women.

PROGRAM FOR ANNUAL MEETING OF LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

As already announced, the annual meeting of the Council of Women will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Green Room of the Y. W. C. A. All are cordially invited to come and to identify themselves with some branch of the many important and interesting departments of work open to the consideration of women. The following is a part of the program for tomorrow:

The president's annual address, which will deal with plane for increasing the value of women's services to the Empire.

Mrs. Douglas, of the Y. W. C. A., convenor of the immigration committee, will report on the recent investigations made regarding the immigration of undesirable girls and women to Canada.

Mrs. Mowat will report the work of the playgrounds committee and the formation of the Playgrounds Association.

Dr. Jessie Birnie will speak regarding the work of the citizenship committee.

Delegates will be appointed to attend the Social Service Congress to be hold in Toronto next week.

The officers will be elected for 1917 and a number of new resolutions of importance will be brought up for consideration.

A NOVELTY INDEED

A sham fight by the Scouts at the S. A. Temple, together with drills, both by the Scouts and Guards, will constitute one of the most interesting evenings one could well attend. A house put up for the purpose will be charged and set on fire inside. Trenches will be then built and charged. The wounded will be cared for by the Red Cross nurses and the stretcher bearers will be on hand to carry away the wounded to the base. All this will be enacted in a spectacular manner at the S.A. Temple this evening at eight o'clock. Everybody is invited.

HE BARRAGE FIRE AND THE CHARGE TO FOE'S TRENCHES DESCRIBED

ance-Corp. W. A. Reid, Formerly of Peterborough, Tells of His Experiences in the Trenches of France

Lance-Corp W. A. Reid, of the 3rd Batt., son of Mrs. E. G. Reid, ermilion, Alberta, but formerly of terborough, has written a wonerfully descriptive letter on his exriences in the trenches of France, d it will be found interesting to his iends here. He says:

Dear Mother: Here I am again ack in good old Blighty. And do u see where I am? When they ld me on the train last night that e were headed for Edmonton I early fell out of bed, but I guess is burg was old when the Hudson y Company first thought of estabhing their fort on the Saskatchean.

I spent two very pleasant days in oulogne and was rather sorry to ve. But France is not England and dream of every wounded soldier to get to Blighty. There is someing about this little old island at grips a man. The history and mance of it have grown into every it.

I suppose you want to know about y trip over. I think I will go back Tuesday morning and give you e whole of what I saw, which is, all, a very small part of the hole story Here let me remark in arenthesis that a new day has dawn since I wrote the above and in night a Zeppelin was brought wn in sight of the hospital. I did ot see it. I spent the night in a ierd nightmare—an orgy of burstg shells, flying shrapnel and dead dying men. I expect the cheers millions of watchers contributed much of the noise I heard in y dreams.

Well, now for the story. I must it all details or this letter will ever end. We went into the trenches t Monday night—one week ago—ecting to go over the parapet at wn next morning. A special trench ad been dug by night out in No 's Land and into this the attackg party filed shortly after midight. The work of our airmen on e Somme has been magnificent. Not n enemy balloon or phone had disvered that little trench and any ells that landed near it were acdents. Very grateful we felt to our rmen when word came that the atck was postponed until 12.30. All orning we crouched in that little ench and all morning our artillery ayed on Fritz's trenches. The ady pound, pound, pound that 's crows' feet beneath the eyes eath and makes gibbering manis of strong men.

Slowly the morning dragged on wo Fritz balloons appeared and ere hauled down suddenly as our lanes approached. Shortly afterward third came up, remained stationy for a few minutes, burst into ames and plunged to the ground. en stirred and swore with wholearted satisfaction. Officers and N.C. .'s called warnings in guarded ices. The movement stopped. silnce reigned again our our little ked trench.

Noon came. Strained faces whiten beneath the grime. Men swore ftly and drenched their rifle bolts ith oil. All the time the artillery pt up its terrible hammering. At .30 came one of those inexorable that will occur in nearly evy bombardment. In the heavenly a long sign of relief shuddered the trench. But it was the before the storm. Only a few ds. Then rifle fire broke out our lines. They're beating it aly. Every man's hand was on his fle, every eye was watching for signal to move.

The Barrage Fire

Then, all hell broke loose. Rifles. achine guns and field guns flung a ld mantle of sound over No Man's Land, in which no individual sound was audible. Our barrage had started

Under the barrage system, I must explain, our artillery throws a heavy curtain of fire on to the enemy's front line under which the infantry advances across No Man's Land. Then the barrage moves back and the infantry follows. There is no wild charge. The barage moves one hundred yards in two minutes and the men must move equally slowly or they'll run into our own fire. Watches in hand, the officers waited for the time to attack. It came. A wave of the hand and we were out. Oh, mother, I wish I could describe the advance over the four hundred yards that separated us from the Huns. Britain's bulldog blood has suffered nothing in the custody of Canada. Canada's sons would walk into the blood-dripping jaws of hell and snap their fingers at the wolf fangs closed on them. As calmly as if on parade, that long irregular line moved forward. Firing, walking forward, firing, forward again, and all the time that infernal noise. Great shells dropped only a few yards away, hurling men, and mud, and shrapnel into the air, but they had no individual sound—one got the impression that they were silent. Men fell here and there, shells burst and blotted out several at a time, but not a man faltered, not one looked back. A tin hat (shrapnel helmet) flew high in the air just ahead of me and I found myself wondering about its owner. To my right a man suddenly dropped his rifle and beat the air frantically with his hands as if he had run into a swarm of bees.

In Fritz's Front Line

And then we were up to the barrage. If men were only machines and could be controlled by levers the barage system would be all right. But they are not. Full three minutes before the barrage lifted we were in

GOOD ROADS

A DEPARTMENT ENGINEER AT COUNTY COUNCIL TONIGHT.

The members of the County and City Councils will meet at the County Council Chamber this evening to discuss the Provincial Government's plan of county and suburban roads.

The Minister of Public Works has sent down one of the department engineers, Mr. Geo. Hogarth, to explain the proper plan of road building, and at the same time give the people's representatives any information that they may require.

The meeting will be held at eight o'clock and anyone interested in the improvement of our road system is invited to attend.

HANDEDOVER TO MOTHER'S CARE

DECISION IN THE CASE OF ALICE TOWNSEND.

COBOURG, Jan. 26. — Yesterday in the County Judges' Criminal Court Alice Townsend, a 20-year-old girl, whose home is in Norwood, appeared before Judge Roger on a charge of abandoning her infant child in the village of Hastings last summer. As the girl is not any too bright-minded she was allowed to go on suspended sentence, her mother being present and promising to look after her.

Suffolk Coast is Shelled by German Vessel; No Casualties

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 26.—An unidentified German vessel shelled the Suffolk coast of England last night. There were no casualties. The following official announcement was given out today: "A small unidentified German vessel approached the Suffolk coast last night and fired a number of shells, only a portion of which reached land. There were no casualties and only insignificant damag."

28 MACHINES FOR GUYNEMER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 26.—For the third successive day Lieut. George Guynemer is mentioned in communications from the war office. Today's announcement credits him with having brought down an airplane on the Somme front. This brings up to 28 the number of airplanes destroyed by this pilot.

ONE OF THREE ENLISTED BROTHERS IS WOUNDED

Pte. Elmer Brown Hit in Hand and Back.

Mr. A P. Brown, 517 Weller St., was notified this morning that his son, Pte. Elmer Gilkinson Brown had been wounded in the hand and back and was in No. 22 General Hospital at Camieries. The date of the casualty was Jan. 18. It was only two weeks ago that a letter was received from Pte. Brown stating that he was well and ready for the fray.

Mr. Brown has two other sons in the overseas forces, Pte. Kenneth with the 20th Batt., and Pte. Cecil, who is in training at Seaforth, Eng. He enlisted with the 196th Western University Batt.

Ptes. Elmer and Kenneth Brown enlisted with the 93rd Batt., but in being transferred Elmer was drafted into the 21st and Kenneth into the 20th.

Officers and men of the original 39th Batt. and 93rd Batt., in England, have been merged into the 6th Canadian Reserve Batt.

Capt. J. H. Burnham speaks in Sudbury in the drill hall on Sunday evening next at the request of the citizens in aid of recruiting, which has become such a live question.

Every day is bringing in new recruits to the Armories and the officers are jubilant. The added area and the splendid officers of the 247th Battalion are making it much easier to induce relatives of young men to have them enlist with the unit.

Yesterday three men were taken on the strength:

Pte. William Charles Brown, of Douro.

Pte. William Gordon Harrison, of Omemee.

Pte. Charles Earl Quackenbush, of Oak Lake.

Miss Florence Wilson, R. R. No. 6, Peterborough, has received a reply to an inquiry regarding Pte. Jas. Henry Ward, stating that there is no record of the soldier having been killed in action.

Col. and Mrs. Stevenson received a letter this week from their son, Lt. Stevenson, "somewhere in France." The letter was dated Dec. 31st, and stated that he was in good health. Lt. Stevenson is in close touch with Lt. Worth and some other officers who are detailed to train drafts of troops in trench work.

Ptes H. Payne and F. Moon, of Lakefield, are among a party of wounded Canadians who reached Quebec yesterday.

Lt.-Col. J. J. Glass, O.C. of the 252nd Batt., Lindsay, spent a few hours in the city this morning en route to Ottawa.

KIND WORDS FOR JUDGE RUDDY

The North Ontario Observer, published at Port Perry, says editorially of His Honor Judge Ruddy:

All welcome Judge Ruddy back to his native county, more particularly under so auspicious circumstances and all likewise congratulate him on his preferment. That the appointment is a judicious one there is no question. The representatives of the North and South Ridings of the County of Ontario certainly did themselves credit in making the recommendation, while the Dominion Government in making the appointment, did honor, not alone to the appointee, but to the County over which he has now jurisdiction as well.

NEW COMMAND IN EAST AFRICA

GEN. SMUTS TO ATTEND IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Lt.-Gen. Hoskins assumed command in East Africa last Friday, succeeding Gen. Smuts who comes to attend the Imperial Conference in London. An official statement today regarding operations there says along the Lower Rufiji River Germans are raiding in the direction of Utete and Utembe Lakes, our advancing columns capturing parties, including prominent European officers. In the western zone strong enemy forces are retiring to the south. One detachment numbering 289, with the commanding officer, surrendered after one week's investment, handing over a field gun and two machine guns.

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK WITH HEAVY LOSSES AT VERDUN FRONT SUCCESS ONLY AT HILL NO. 304

Made Four Attacks Along Line from Avocourt Wood to Dead Man's Hill---Berlin Claims Five Hundred Prisoners.

SUCCESS ON OTHER FRONTS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 26.—On the Verdun front last night Germans made attacks at four points between Avocourt Wood and Dead Man Hill. Today's war office announcement says the Germans were driven back with heavy losses, although they penetrated advanced trenches near Hill 304.

In Upper Alsace Germans left their trenches at points to attack, but were checked by French artillery.

The statement says that the Germans who attacked on the Verdun front yesterday were compelled to return to their trenches, except certain detachments who were successful in penetrating some of our advanced positions in a section of Hill 304. The enemy during this attack suffered very heavy losses and left numerous dead in front of our lines, particularly in Avocourt Wood. On Wednesday and Thursday night French bombing squadrons dropped a great quantity of bombs on various stations and barracks behind German lines.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—French trenches on Hill 304 northwest of Verdun were stormed yesterday by German troops along a front of sixteen hundred metres, the war office announced today. Approximately five hundred prisoners were taken by the Germans, who also captured ten machine guns. The French failed in a counter-attack at night.

RUSSIAN POSITIONS CAPTURED.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—(Official.)—On Prince Leopold's front engagements on the River Aa yesterday again resulted in complete success for the attacking East Prussian divisions, in the capture of further Russian positions on both sides of the river.

On the east bank strong hostile counter-attacks failed. Five hundred prisoners were brought in.

On the Roumanian front, in Archduke Joseph's section, in the Bereck Mountains attacks by several Roumanian companies in the Kasino valley were repulsed.

In Mackensen's section there is nothing to report.

RUSSIANS MADE MILE ADVANCE ON RIVER Aa

BUT COUNTER-ATTACK BY GERMANS FORCED WITHDRAWAL.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 26.— A War Office announcement says Russian troops in two sectors of the Riga region caried out successful offensive movements yesterday, advancing at one point east of the River Aa for about a mile. A subsequent counter attack by the Germans resulted in the withdrawal of the Russians.

WORK FOR FORMATION OF WORLD PEACE LEAGUE

On Plan Advocated by President Wilson

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MANCHESTER, Jan. 26. — The Labor Conference in session here today adopted a resolution urging that all British representatives at the Peace Conference should work for the formation of an international league to enforce the maintenance of peace on a plan advocated by the president of the United States and approved by the British Foreign Secretary.

The resolution also demanded tha the British plenipotentiaries shoul include an adequate number of parliamentary representatives of organized labor.

INCREASE IN SALARY

County Magistrate Langley appeared before the County Council this afternoon and applied for an increas of salary. He submittd that the present salary, $600, was not commensurate with the duties or dignity of the office. The allowance of $200 which is made for his office and travelling expenss did not nearly cover the actual outlay. The present salary had been fixed in 1884 and is the minimum allowed to any county magistrate.

The matter was referred to the finance committee.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1917.

THOSE SENATORIAL GRAPES.

THE SENATORIAL bunch of grapes hangs high and far out of the reach of our evening contemporary that accordingly sets up a cry for someone to pull down the luscious fruit. It is hard to believe that it is a commendable public spirit that actuates The Examiner in this matter. Its old disposition to breed trouble in the ranks of its oponents, to demand of them what verges on the impossible, and to assail a certain individual, its malice against whom it has never been able to conceal, crops out again more glaring than ever. This affair with regard to a senatorship for Peterborough does not happen to be The Examiner's kettle of fish, and it only complicates matters when it volunteers a hand in the boiling process. No man can be charged fairly with neglect of duty if he fails to land the prize for his district. The impression is general that our contemporary is not so concerned in securing new honor for the constituency as it is in attempting to work up prejudice against the Federal representative. The wily Jacob could change his skin, but otherwise was unable to conceal his identity. Every word he uttered aroused the suspicion of the victim of his guile.

MEN FOR HOME DEFENCE.

CANADA HAS ENLISTED 404,000 men since the war broke out. Of these, 281,000 have gone overseas and 10,000 more are ready to leave for Europe. There will be nearly 60,000 left in the training camps or on guard duty in Canada. Besides these Canada has sent 5,000 men to the naval service, 1,200 to the Imperial mechanical transport service, and 3,000 to the munitions plants in England, all of whom, with perhaps the exception of the latter class, should be reckoned as Canadian recruits. At the beginning of the war there were 20,000 reservists, British, French, Russians and Italians, a considerable army in themselves, who left for service under their various flags.

A home force at a time like this is imperative. Men must be kept under arms in Canada so long as the war lasts. The country is never safe from invasion, and it would be folly for the military authorities to leave the nation unprotected. All the men now under arms have enlisted for overseas service.

The last of these men can be sent to Europe and their places easily filled by putting the Militia Act in operation. No new enactment authorizing conscription is required to raise men for home defence. Every man of military age can be called out for home defence, just as every eligible man can be required to do jury duty or to put in statute labor. One hundred thousand men can be impressed into the service by this means and this would release for overseas duty the last soldiers in our training camps or guarding public works in this country.

Beginning to despair of ever prevailing upon the Government to resort to conscription, the people the country over are demanding that at least the Militia Act shall be given effect. It would surely serve to get the halting young men into uniform, and after they had been given a term of military life the chances are that the majority of them would consent to enlist for duty in Europe.

WHY PEOPLE SICKEN AND DIE.

LET AN EPIDEMIC sweep over the city, and the startled populace will at once begin to assail the members of the medical fraternity. "Why," they ask, "do not the doctors keep us well?" Then some cynic will propose that physicians be paid on the Chinese plan, receiving compensation only so long as those under their care remain in good health.

Even if the doctors were lacking in professional skill, that fact alone would not be sufficient to account for the prevalence of disease. Ask any physician, and he will tell you that the fraternity can accomplish little without the co-operation of the public. If he is an honest man, with the true progressive spirit, he will admit that the science of which he is a student is yet in its infancy and that there are maladies with which the doctors are unable to cope. Smallpox and typhoid fever may have, to a great extent, been shorn of their terrors, two distinct triumphs in medical art. But pneumonia and cancer will not be conquered until the medical science produces a man who can discover the long-looked-for specifics. The healthiest people, those who live the cleanest and most moral lives, contract pneumonia and speedily pass away while the attending physician stands helpless at their bedside ringing his hands. He cannot tell why. All he can do is to offer some general suggestions in the way of precautions against contracting the disease, which is regarded as the captain of the ghastly agents of death.

Cancer, the most dreaded of all human maladies, is no respecter of persons. It falls upon the just and the unjust, upon rich and poor alike. Moral cleanliness, hygiene, will not ward it off any more than it will prevent pneumonia. The profession is yet in the dark with regard to its nature, cause and preventative measures, although eminent practitioners have devoted years of study to the disease and have experimented in vain with so-called cures.

Private virtue and civic righteousness can accomplish wonders in the way of making a community healthy and happy. The other day a deputation of altruists went to Ottawa to request legislation to check a disease that is said to be becoming alarmingly prevalent in Canada. This contagion can be prevented altogether by right living. The difficulty is that the purist objects to any education on this delicate subject.

The Public Health Act of this Province was designed to save the people of Ontario from the results of their own ignorance. If every provision of that law is faithfully carried out, such diseases as are classed as preventable would in a short time become matters of history. The law provides for an official inspection of milk, for example. Here in Peterborough this part of the Act has been a dead letter for the past six months, and the people have been obliged to purchase their supply, trusting in Providence and the honesty of the dealer. It seems, however, that the members of the Board of Health have at last realized their responsibility in the matter and that a thorough system of milk inspection is to be inaugurated. The public will then have the same assurance of safety that has always been vouchsafed them as they use the city water.

A city ordinance forbids the use of ice cut on Little Lake for any but cooling purposes. The Provincial Health Act forbids any dealer from cutting ice that is intended for sale, on any body of water until he first receives a permit from the Board of Health within whose jurisdiction he resides. Are these regulations observed either in spirit or letter in our own city?

Virtuosity on the part of the doctors may be required, but virtue on the part of the people is an essential to guarantee public health.

THE LATE S. H. O'CONNOR.

THE LATE S. H. O'CONNOR of North Monaghan, but formerly of Ennismore, who died Thursday morning, goes to his grave followed by the respect and the genuine regret of every member of the circle in which he lived. In very truth he was one man in a thousand, a model citizen in every way. Starting life without any assets save his native equipments, he scored success in everything he undertook, and was regarded as one of the best farmers in Eastern Ontario. He was a faithful and efficient member of the Ennismore council for a number of years, and was a sincere church member without being intolerant.

Happy indeed is the man who finds his life work as did the late Mr. O'Connor. In his own sphere he was a leader, and his example remains as one worthy of emulation by all those who survive him.

WORK IS WANTED, NOT WORDS.

THE PRESENT SESSION of Parliament has so far been nothing but a war of words, an electioneering campaign in which the Opposition seek to make capital for themselves out of the war. All the charges that they bring against the Government, all the arguments which they advance, have already been dinned into the ears of the long-suffering public. If the members of Parliament on the Opposition benches understood the present temper of the Canadian people they would curtail their flow of vapid oratory and consent to permit the business of the nation to proceed.

The Liberals in the House should suppress their egoism sufficiently to realise that at this particular time the Canadian people are vitally more concerned with the men in uniform than with a disgruntled political faction intent on nothing so much as recapturing place and power. The men shivering in the trenches in Flanders are more interesting than is a party gnashing its teeth in the chilly shades of the minority side of the House. The success of the Allied arms is of more moment than the fortunes of the followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. There is only one party seriously considered by the public, and that is the war party. A politician, amateur or professional, is an individual of little importance these days when compared with one of Canada's young men wearing the uniform of the King.

Parliament has been called together to advance the cause of the Allies, not to waste time in wearisome and senseless debate. All the money that can be raised is required for war purposes. The country has none to waste on an exhibition of party spleen that would be out of place even on the hustings. When Canada counts her alien foes by the millions, this gathering of her elected members to devise ways and means to overcome the enemy should be something better than a bear garden.

MEN LAUGHED AT WILSON'S NOTES AND CAN RESPECT FORCE ONLY

The London Globe, asking President Wilson what he had done "for justice and humanity, for the rights of the weak or the honor of the strong that you should now presume to school us in the mightly conflict to which we are committed, and from which you most carefully have held aloof," says he did not protest against the invasion of Belgium and wrote a note when the Cunard liner Lusitania was torpedoed.

Continuing, the newspaper says:

"And then you wrote a second note, and then a third, because you were seeking the suffrage of electors in whose ears the last cries of their drowning countrymen were smothered beneath the tinkle of piling dollars."

"You did not dare resent the piracy and murder and now, forsooth, we who have given our best and bravest by the hundred thousand and treasure by the thousand million to save the world, we must at your bidding lay down our arms and dream with you your foolish dream of peace.

"You and the great nation whose chief magistrate you are, stirred no finger to save public law from being violated. You may say, and say truly, that the United States had not the power. How, then, can you ask us to trust our lives and liberties, the future of our race, the safety of our Empire and the destinies of all mankind to the flimsy guarantees with which you would buckle the peace of the world?

"The men who tore up the scrap of paper; the men who laughed at your notes and sunk fresh ships while you were thinking of fresh phrases, will respect force and nothing else."

Victory Essential

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"President Wilson is many thousands of miles away from the spectacle of the war and he is addressing an audience to whom German savagery and German treachery are no more than a cinematograph film. We have the sword in our vitals, and are, by his leave, better judges of how to secure it so that it shall not come there again.

"Peace presents no attraction for us so long as it would leave the perjured enemy with fleets and armies ready to spring again as soon as we appeared to be off our guard.

"Victory is for all of the Allies the first essential of safety. After that we can talk about permanent suppressions of war at our leisure."

NOTHING LIKE RIDDLES TO TEACH CHILDREN-TRICKS OF LANGUAGE

Have you ever observed how interested children are in answering—or trying to answer—riddles? From the age of 4 to 10 or 11 years the average child takes huge delight in puzzling out conundrums.

"Ask me a riddle, father," is his insistent request. He is almost equally pleased at being able to communicate to others riddles he has heard from playmates

Parents who have forgotten their own childhood think this interest frivolous and time wasting. They regard riddles as of no use whatever. Herein they are exceedingly mistaken.

They should rather rejoice when children are intensely interested in riddles. For riddles serve some really important ends in the education of children.

Not least important, they help to exercise and develop a child's sense of humor. They quicken his perception of contrasts and resemblances. They develop imaginative power.

And they compel the child really to think. Ask a child a riddle—as: "What is the difference between a jeweller and a jailer?" This is what happens:

The child gets a definite and fascinating starting point for the weaving of a complicated web of logical thought. He mentally shifts back and forth, noting similarities and incongruities, until at last he possesses a definite mental pattern with he answer worked in it.

Perhaps his answer is wrong. No matter. He is quite willing to begin all over. And if, finally, he has to "give it up," the correct answer will be lastingly impressed on his mind.

Through riddles, in fact, children are not only quickened in humor, imaginativeness and reasoning ability; they also gain helpful information.

So impressed is one educator by the development value of riddles that he seriously suggests their systematic use as an aid in teaching children spelling and grammar. But he deprecates formal drill.

In other words, let riddles remain what they purport to be— merely amusing puzzles. Don't turn them into means of conscious instruction

Bear in mind always, however that they can have and do have, great significance as means of unconscious education. Therefore encourage your little ones to ask and to try to answer riddles.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

The new Emperor of Austria and his wife ar splendid linquists and she seems to be specially fond of the English tongue; when the new Emperor used to be complimented on his English he would explain that she always made him speak English in their courting days, which accounts for the fact that he expresses himself more gracefully in that than in other languages.

They have three small children; the eldest boy is just four years old—in fact, though he probably does not appreciate it, he celebrated his fourth birthday by becoming heir-presumptive to the Austrian throne.

Though his good humor and winning manners made him popular in the army during his training, the Emperor Karl possesses no military talent. His strategy while in command of the Austrian army in recent campaigns in the Trentino and Galicia has been highly unsuccessful and has had the effect of embittering many of his subjects against him.

Owing to his love of simplicity he is accustomed to go about without attendants, and sometimes even without money. One day he was passing the church of St. Stephen in Vienna, he suddenly thought he would climb to the top of the steeple. When asked for eight cents, the price of admission, he discovered that he had no money, and gave his name instead. The attendant was at first incredulous, and asked a policeman to identity "the young man without eight cents." Finally the heir to the throne was allowed to gratify his whim, in spite of his penniless condition

The Empress resembles her husband in unassuming gentleness, love of animals and children, and unselfishness. Under happier conditions and in a less responsible position they would make an ideal couple, and would probably win the lasting respect of their people. As it is, however, they find themselves he med in by discord and disaster; t Empire is almost ruined, the ir grasp of Germany is upon it.

To free Austria-Hungary from Kaiser's fatal influence and bri safely out of the dangers which set it, both from within and fr without, would need a man of alm superhuman strength and judgm —and such the Emperor Karl m emphatically is not.

What is the Difference?

When a man deserts his wife and children, leaving them without support, the world regards him with contempt.

What is the differnt between desertion and death, if the wife and children are left without support, in either case when the husband and father failed through negligence to provide for them?

The above may sound a little harsh; I guess it does; but it may not have struck you that way before, and if the husband is insurable, is there really any difference?

Answer this vital question now that your attention has been called to it, in a practical way, by writing, telephoning or calling on the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada as with its Eighty Odd Millions of Assets, the largest amount held by any Canadian company, there is no safer, sounder or more generous and faithful custodian to be found to administer your wishes with regard to your wife and children.

NUMBER FORTY-TWO

By Edna Deane Merriam

(Copyright by W. G. Chapman)

When the uncle of Willis Templeton died, leaving ten thousand dollars "to his beloved nephew," the latter felt like the richest man in the world.

He did not start out on a mad spendthrift riot. That was not his natural pace. He had missed real home life since his parents died two months previously. Young Templeton quietly set out to find a wife. He was not after style, money or position. Some sweet humble little woman who could appreciate a comfortable home was his ideal.

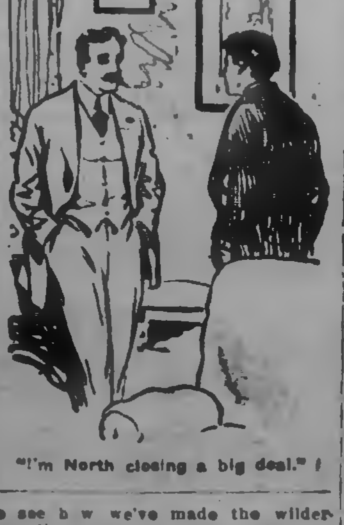
"There seems to be none such in Elsdene," he decided, after every fortune-hunting girl in the country had set her cap for him.

"Business is what you want to think of, old boy," declared his lawyer, a young man who was really loyal to his interests.

Willis considered many business propositions. Then came a wonderful chance to increase his few thousands to a million, according to Vance Trafton.

This latter was a cousin. He had been a scapegrace in his youth. Later Willis had heard he had figured as promoter and speculator. He had appeared at Elsdene about a month after Willis had been pestered to death with mean, indigent and really deserving relatives. He had more or less got rid of most of them according to their deserts. When Trafton appeared, it was an enjoyable relief to Willis to find someone who was not scheming to beg or borrow of him.

"I'm north closing a big deal," reported the fashionably dressed relative who bore all the earmarks of permanent prosperity. "Went to Florida ten years ago, bought one thousand acres of swamp land at two dollars an acre. We've sold it all out at twenty and I'm trying to buy a tract from a man in the city. You'd ought to see how we've made the wilderness blossom as the rose. Think of it—ninety thousand pineapples this year's crop, some of them weighing as much as nine pounds. Juicy, mellow—I want you to come back with me and see a real climate, Willis."



"I'm North closing a big deal."

By degrees the wily, specious Trafton worked on Willis until the latter was actually anxious to buy an interest in the wonderful proposition. It was finally agreed that he should invest eight thousand dollars for a one-fourth share in the new land about to be opened up.

"I'll go to the city and arrange to get the deeds for the land," announced Trafton. "In the meantime I'll have a choice half dozen of our pineapples shipped to you, just to show you what magnificent fruit we raise."

In a day or two along came a crate directed to Willis. As he opened it, wrapped in tissue paper were half a dozen pineapples. Certainly they were superior and standard. More than ever in love with the proposition, the elated Willis was about to hasten to distribute the luscious fruit among his friends and possibly influence other investors to go into the enterprise, when he noticed a neat-looking card in the bottom of the crate.

Beside it lay an unstamped letter. It was simply directed to "Miss Landon." The card read "Acme Fruit Co." and gave an address in the city. At one end was the written notation: "Packed by No. 42."

In a moment somehow the suspicions of Willis were aroused. The thing didn't look straight. Had Trafton simply gone somewhere and bought any old fruit to palm it off on an investor victim?

"It doesn't square up right," decided Willis, and straightway started for the city.

He found out where the fruit company named had its warehouse. It was a busy place devoted to the specialty of packing fine tropical fruits. Willis saw the manager. He was soon convinced that the crate of pineapples had been shipped to him on a casual order two days before.

"They came from Florida?" inquired Willis.

"Oh, no., We get all our pines from Central America," was the amazing declaration.

And who was No. 42? Ah, yes—one of their fruit packers, Miss Landon by name. Could she be seen?—for Willis had opened the letter to find that it contained an offer of marriage from one "Richard Martin."

Miss Landon was not at work. Address—yes, such and such a number on a certain street. Thither Willis proceeded. There was a streak of romance in him. An important letter with great news for Miss Landon had in some mysterious way got into the fruit crate and miscarried. This Miss Landon had saved him eight thousand dollars. He felt grateful towards her interested in her.

Willis located Miss Landon's home in an upper flat of a neat little house. A good-natured old lady was in charge. She invited Willis in, saying that Miss Landon would soon be home. She had gone with her two little brothers to visit a sister who worked in a photograph gallery.

"I have been tidying up for her," explained the old lady. "Not that her flat needs much of that, for she's the cleverest, neatest little dear ever was. She's a jewel, she is. Supports the two little ones and housekeeps. Such bread as she makes! Such dainty wholesome meals! She teaches them nights. You'd ought to hear them sing! She's saving up to buy a piano bless her."

Certainly the refined homelike air of the delightful little flat was soothing. Willis lingered. Miss Landon arrived.

Bluntly he told her the whole story. He handed her the letter. He was sorry, as her bright gentle face grew upon him, that she had a lover.

"Oh, dear!" she cried, as she received the missive. "I've wondered where I ever lost it. It must have fallen from my pocket into the crate. I am glad to get it. A friend of my sister, a gentleman friend, asked me to give it to her. Now I can straighten up a tangle."

Then she, Lucia Landon, as Willis soon found out her name to be, was heart free! Somehow the discovery pleased him.

"Miss Landon," he said, "you can see what finding your card in that crate means to me," and he told of how he had nearly been swindled out of his little fortune. "I owe you considerable. I feel it my duty to send you a piano for your little musicians here. It only half expresses my gratitude for your intervention at a critical juncture in my business affairs."

Lucia demurred, but Willis was determined. He sent the piano the next day. Then he went back home to have it out with his false-hearted relative. Then he found himself strangely restless.

Those little singers! How were they getting along? The city and that little flat in it proved an irresistible magnet.

He found the Landons happier than ever, the flat more charming. Its dainty mistress welcomed him like the lady she was.

"She is the girl I have been looking for," he told the old lady friend of Lucia one day.

"Why don't you tell her that?" intimated the good old soul archly.

"I will," resolved Willis. He did, and the result was that he gained the dearest little wife in the world.

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM TO-DAY

SONG OF MANY PARTIES BECAME EMPIRE'S HYMN.

Ven. Archdeacon Cody of Toronto gave an address on "The History and Present Significance of our National Anthem." Strangely enough, he said the origin of both words and music is hidden in obscurity. In 1545 the watchword given in instructions to the British fleet was, "God save the King," and the response was, "And long may he reign"—possibly a beginning of some formal expression of national patriotism.

The development of the national hymn was traced in detail by the speaker, who pointed out that the composition as now sung is the result of many changes. Its history wonderfully represents the spirit of caution and compromise that marks the English race. Instead of striking out on some new line they take something that lay ready to their hand and adopt it, and adapt it to the changing circumstances. Now it is sung in the interests of King James as against the gunpowder plotters, now it is sung in the interests of James the Second against King William the Third; then it is sung as the battle-song of the Hanoverians against Jacobite plotters and pretenders; and at last, forgetting all the detail of its history, it is the voice of the deepest patriotic sentiment of the whole race.

The first verse arose in days when the doctrine of the divine right of kings was strongly held, and the prayer for the King is couched in the strongest and most fervid form; but to day we interpret this in a more constitutional and democratic sense, and we regard the King as the embodiment of the unity and the genius of our whole Empire. The third verse had its origin in the days of the constitutional and limited monarchy of the Hanoverians, and it does not pray for the King in the same resolute way as the first but we pray that God will endow him with choice gifts that he may exercise aright his great gifts; then there is the truly constitutional phrase, "May he defend our laws," etc. So the Anthem represents caution and compromise, variety in unity, the linking together of things, which, when pushed to logical conclusions, might seem scarcely possible.

MISS LLOY GEORGE'S FUN

Father Says He Hasn't Met a Woman Who Can't Speak For Herself

Miss Lloyd George, in opening a church bazaar at Watford made a happy hit with her first words.

She said: "I asked my father to compose a little speech for me before I left home, but he refused. He said that he hadn't yet met a woman who couldn't speak for herself." Miss George said that she hoped the stall-holders would be more eloquent and less nervous than she was.

Mrs. Hedley Le Bas, who was in the chair, told an amusing story of Mrs. Lloyd George's encounter with a Hertfordshire working man very anxious to know what her husband was doing with all the money he got.

"Where does this fourteen million go?" he demanded.

"Well," Mrs. Lloyd George replied, "it goes for insurance and old age pensions and the Navy."

"I understand that seven millions go to the Navy and six for old age pensions," the questioner went on. "What about the other million?"

"Oh, please believe me," cried Mrs. Lloyd George, "I haven't got it."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

INFANT WELFARE—ARTICLE No. 4.

HAVING DEALT with the subject of artificial feeding by means of modified cow's milk, let us return to what has already been pointed out to be the best and most convenient food for the baby, viz., Breast-milk. The mother's milk is the best in every way. It is fresh, clean, and always on tap. It is the least expensive food which can be given. It prevents certain diseases such as diarrhoea and cures these diseases when they occur in babies who have not had breast milk. It increases the resistance of a well baby to disease; and it helps a sick baby to recover from all kinds of illness.

The Nursing Mother. The mother should remember that the nursing of her baby is her most important business in life for the time being. Everything else must be secondary to it. Food, exercise, and outdoor air are all important to the supply of breast milk. Her food should be of the best quality, easily digested, and in addition to three regular meals a day she should have a lunch in the middle of the forenoon, afternoon, and at bed-time. These lunches should consist of milk or gruel. She should have about a quart of liquid food daily in addition to the three regular meals. In some cases it is of advantage for her to take a slice of bread and butter and a glass of milk during the night. As a rule, ordinary simple foods taken by the mother will not upset the baby, but if any are found to do so she had better avoid them. Certain drugs are excreted in the breast milk, so it is advisable not to take drugs except on the advice of a physician. Nothing upsets a baby more quickly than a nervous, irritable, or angry mother. Fatigue of mind or body reacts upon the infant. If mentally upset the mother should give the baby one teaspoonful of lime water mixed with one teaspoonful of boiled water before the next nursing.

The Mother's Nipples. The nipples should receive attention. In order to prevent cracking it is useful in the last month of pregnacy to apply the following mixture each night:—

Bismuth Carbonate—One drachm.
Castor Oil—One ounce.

These ingredients should be thoroughly rubbed up together in a clean glass mortar and kept in a wide mouthed glass-stoppered bottle.

The nipples should be washed before and after each nursing with boracic acid solution. The nipples sometimes crack at the top or at the base where they join the breasts. The danger of cracks in the nipple itself is that they may lead to infection and abscess in the breasts. The base cracks are very painful. The best preventive of cracks I have found to be "Wansborough's lead shields." These are little hats of pliable lead resembling more than anything else the type of low-crowned hat worn by some Anglican clergymen. They should be washed in hot water, and after nursing one placed over each nipple. The inventor claims that their value rests in the formation of a lactate of lead which is antiseptic (that is a destructive agent to germs). While this may be so, I am satisfied that the protection against the friction of the clothing and the action of dirt is quite important. In a long experience I have found the use of these shields a sure preventive against the cracking of the nipples with the attendant pain and infection. If cracks do occur it is useful to wash them with 70 per cent. alcohol and paint with compound tincture of benzoin (Friar's Balsam) twice a day. Until the cracks are healed the baby should be nursed through a rubber-topped nipple shield, which must be carefully washed and cleansed with boiling water and bicarbonate of soda before and after each nursing.

Composition of Breast Milk. Breast milk is composed of fat 4 parts; sugar, 7; proteid (or albumen), 1.50; salts, .20, and water, 87.30, making up 100 parts. The best indication that the breast milk is suitable is that the baby thrives upon it. If the mother is underfed and tired, she should have more fatty food such as the yolk of eggs, cream, and a little bacon. If the mother is too fat, the amount of meat and fatty foods should be lessened and the exercise increased. The quantity of milk is increased by frequent nursing, but the interval should not be less than three hours after the second month. It is also increased by adding fluid to the diet. Malt extract, stout, beer, or porter are of no value in improving the mother's milk and should not be used.

When Breast Milk Should Not Be Used. Breast milk should not be discontinued for trifling causes. Too many doctors are prone to allow the mother to begin artificial feeding. Unless there is some real good reason the mother must continue to nurse her baby. A short acute illness is not a sufficient reason.

In Tuberculosis and chronic wasting diseases, nursing from the breast should be stopped.

(To Be Continued.)

Expedited Munitioning

SIR HARRY DRAYTON

Chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission was one of the public men of Canada who by reason of his position was able to influence the Dominion's war efforts. One of his notable acts was to secure a radical lessening of passenger traffic on many lines so as to hasten the transport of raw and finished materials for the making of munitions.

Major O'Flynn, manager of the 247th hockey team, was much disappointed when he received word this morning that the 228th Batt. team would not be able to fulfil their date here tomorrow night. Parry Sound team will try and be here to give the soldiers a battle.

Anyone who purchased tickets for the 228th game can have their money refunded or the tickets will be good at the next game.

Study Spoils Beauty

Hard Intellectual Work Not For Women, Physician's Opinion

Modern girls are spoiling their beauty by intense intellectual effort, according to an article by the well known dermatologist, Dr. Louis Brocq, in the Medical Bulletin.

"I've been 30 years practising," he writes, "and I've witnessed a gradual deterioration in feminine physical characteristics.

"Young women nowadays are deformed; they stoop pronouncedly; they're hollow-chested, and their complexion is unhealthy. This I attribute to excessive brainwork.

"Women ought to study less if they're not to lose their beauty altogether."

Another authority, Dr. Bouchet, says married women are more beautiful than younger spinsters, adding:

"The saying that, 'women who want to be beautiful must have three children' is true.

"Woman is made for maternity. She mustn't devote herself to hard intellectual work."

FOOL-PROOF POISON

Absent-mindedness Could Not Excuse Mistake in This Case

The latest thing on the drug market is "foolproof" bichloride of mercury. During the last year or so there have been so many cases of accidental poisoning from this dangerous but highly effective antiseptic that manufacturers racked their brains to produce a tablet that could not be mistaken for anything else—even in the dark.

"Foolproof" bichloride of mercury was the answer. The tablets are strung permanently on a thread, like beads, and in addition they are dispensed in a bottle having a distinctive shape—unlike the ordinary bottle. Furthermore, the tablets themselves have a peculiar shape, are bright blue in color, and each one is labeled "poison."

The manufacturers say, and it seems with reason, that a person would have to lose all his mental faculties in order not to be able to detect these pellets from headache or other tablets. He might not notice the shape of the bottle or the peculiar shape of the tablet, its color and marking of "poison." But he would not be expected to ignore the string, which must be cut before the tablet is detached.

It is easier for a woman to conceal her love than to hide her indifference.

Seven-Million-Ton Monument

The greatest monument in the world is the Great Pyramid of Egypt, which was built nearly 6,000 years ago. It was built by Cheops, King of Egypt, who, following the example of previous kings, wished to have a magnificent tombstone, so that he would be remembered. It is certain that the thousands of men who were engaged in building it worked under the lash. The result is, Cheops is always put down as a tyrant.

According to Herodotus, the ancient Greek historian, 100,000 men were at work on it for twenty years. It covers an area of thirteen and a half acres, and contains 7,000,000 tons of masonry. It was built in layers, over 200 in number, and then the edges were filled in to make the sides smooth. The stone used varied in weight from two tons to sixty tons. When it was built it was about 480 feet high, and the sides were each 775 feet long.

Ella was arranging her mistress' hair one afternoon when she mentioned that she had heard Miss Ellen sing in the parlor the evening before.

"How did you like her, Ella?" asked the mistress.

"Oh, mum," sighed the maid, "it was grand! She sung just as if she was gargling!"

Julia rushed to her mother one day in a most excited frame of mind:

"Oh, mother, we've had the best time! We've been playing postman, and we gave every lady on the block a letter."

"But, dear, where did you get the letters?"

"Why, we found them in your trunk in the garret all tied up with blue ribbon!"

ELECTED DIRECTOR OF EAST PETERBORO' A. S.

Mr. Thomas Miller of Douro was elected to the directorate of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society at the annual meeting, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. J. W. Rorabeck. All officers were re-elected.

It was recommended that the prizes for horses and cattle be increased and also that two more classes be added in sheep.

On motion, it was decided to hold a standing field crop competition again this year and that white oats be the variety of grain.

WON THIRD PLACE IN LIVE STOCK JUDGING.

The team of three young men, Messrs. Wm. Barrie, Theodore Douglas and Percy Moore, who represented Peterborough county in the stock judging competition at Ottawa winter fair last week, succeeded in winning third place. Teams were entered from twelve counties and the contest was a keen one. Dundas county team of young men took first honors and the silver cup by 2046 points out of a possible 3000. Lanark county boys came second with 1996 points, and Peterborough county third with a total of 1950 points. The classes were dairy and beef cattle, horses, sheep and swine, with regard to the breding and market qualities of each. Fifty points were given for placing and fifty more points for reasons. The local team exceeded the other eleven teams in placing the most correctly but fell behind in giving their reasons, which was perhaps due to nervousness. Our boys, however, demonstrated the fact that they know a good thing when they see it and are to be congratulated on securing third position.

Individual prizes were also given in various classes. Peterboro county, true to its pre-eminence in dairying, furnished the first prize winner in dairy cattle, Wm. Barrie carrying off the honors and incidentally a $10 bill, against a field of 35 competitors. Besides this the local boys also won prizes in the other classes, but the full results have not as yet been received.—Norwood Register.

PREMIER RECEIVES CALL TO LONDON CONFERENCE

Cable Message Urges Him to Leave for England at Earliest Possible Moment- -Conservative Member Favors Coalition.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26 —Parliament is expected to adjourn on Feb. 9th to enable the Prime Minister to attend the Imperial war conference in London. Sir Robert Borden received last night a cable urgently requesting that he shall arrive in London at the earliest possible date.

It is impossible for him to leave Ottawa until the war appropriation has been voted and arrangements made for the ordinary expenditure of the government during his absence. But as these matters cannot be taken up until the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne has been concluded it is anticipated that the Opposition will join with the Government in bringing it to a close as early as possible next week. Sir Sam Hughes, however, will speak on Tuesday, so that it will probably be Thursday before the conclusion of the debate. The continuance of the debate means so much time taken from the period assigned for the deliberations of the war conference.

In the House of Commons Sir Robert intimated his acceptance of the offer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to have the war vote and enough of the general estimates to carry the Government to the end of June to pass the House. He observed that outside of the borrowing bill, similar to that of last year, the only Government measure would be the consolidation of the Railway Acts.

Urges Coalition.

W. F. Maclean, South York, made an earnest plea in the House for national unity, which, he said could only be brought about by the formation of a coalition government.

The Liberals further showed their hand when Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux agreed with Mr. Maclean that a national government was necessary, but claimed that it could only be obtained by a general election, which would call Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the Premiership.

A Declining Industry That Must be Revived

In the 80's when Canada's sturgeon fisheries were first being exploited commercially, the flesh of the sturgeon sold for four or five cents per pound, and the prepared eggs, or caviare, for ten cents per pound. The fishery was prosecuted very energetically, and, in 1897, when the record output was attained, caviare had advanced in price to 25 cents per pound. Later, as a result of continued overfishing, the fishery became virtually depleted, and sturgeon flesh and roe are the most valuable products of Canadian waters.

The sturgeon has been accused of predatory habits, but has been acquitted of this charge by the foremost Canadian scientists. Every portion of the fish can be utilized for the manufacture of some valuable commodity; there is absolutely no waste. To permit such fisheries to become extinct, unless detrimental to others of more value, is commercial waste and inefficiency.—Conservation.

Strange Bamboo Trees

Certain species of Bamboos flower only once in about fifty-five years, and, strangely enough, all the trees in a locality flower about the same time. Those in Burma began flowering in 1915. The last time this species flowered was in 1859-60. They will die and those that spring from the seeds born of this flowering will take their places and will not flower until about 1970. They may flower sporadically at other times, but the seed does not mature, for the bamboo cannot fertilise itself.

USEFUL HINTS FOR SOLDIERS

Here are a few facts that will help you to judge distances. At thirty yards, assuming that your sight is of the average strength, the white of a man's eye is plainly seen, and the eyes themselves up to eighty yards. At one hundred yards all parts of the body are seen distinctly, slight movements are perceptible, and the details of the dress can be distinguished. At 200 yards the outlines of the face are confused, and rows of buttons look like stripes. At 400 yards the face is a mere dot, but all movements of the legs and arms are still distinct. At 600 yards details can no longer be distinguished. At 800 yards the men in a crowd cannot be counted, nor their individual movements distinguished. At 1,000 yards a line of soldiers resembles a broad belt. At 1,200 yards cavalry can be distinguished from infantry, and at 2,000 yards a mounted man usually appears a mere speck.

Lieut.-Col. W. J. Green, of St. Thomas, is recovering, not dying, from pneumonia, as was reported.

BRITAIN'S SUPERIORITY IN THREE MAIN POINTS

Major-Gen. Maurice Comments From Military Side

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The army's views of peace discussion were expresed today by Major-General F. B. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the War Office, who declared the position of Great Britain was closely analogous to that of the Federal States in the American Civil War at its most critical phase, inasmuch as the British, like the North, possessed three great points of superiority—the blockade, man power and resources of wealth. Gen. Maurice said:

"I cannot say much about actual military operations, as 'General Winter' has taken charge of all fronts, even in Mesopotamia, where heavy rains prevent operations. But I do want to say something about the peace discussions, again brought to our attention by the President's message to the Senate. My comments are entirely from a military standpoint.

Not Yet at the Limit

"If I am correctly informed by extracts from various American papers, it seems that a certain section of American opinion holds that with traditional British bulldog obstinacy we are keeping up a hopeless war without any chance of a favorable termination. The military facts do not sustain such an opinion. The Associated Press may recall the first interview I gave it after the Somme offensive began. I was asked point blank by the correspondent if 'the great push had begun,' and I replied that if by the big push Great Britain's maximum effort were meant, my reply must be no. And in recalling this I might say I was looking a long way ahead. The condition of Britain, if an historical analogy is followed, may be compared with the position of the Federal States at the critical stage of your last great war.

U.S. Blockade Hurt England

"The North had been very unfortunate in the early stage of the war, but, like the British, it possessed three great points of superiority, in the blockade, man power and wealth resources. We started unprepared. We had to make a great army from a very small one, and not only had to supply this vast army, but had to find suitable commanders, as, recalling your history, you will remember the North also had to do. Our blockade is causing some inconvenience to the United States, but your Civil War blockade caused actual starvation in Lancashire, when the mills were compelled to close by lack of cotton.

"In man power we certainly have not reached the zenith, while the progress of the present war loan will show our wealth still ample for our purpose.

Army Against Peace

"People who are closer to public opinion than I tell me the vast bulk of our people are not ready to conclude peace. Undoubtedly a small section of our public consider our chances of victory so hopeless that they are willing to make peace on almost any terms, as were certain groups in the Northern States. If the idea that we are stubbornly fighting without hope of victory is at all prevalent I am sure it will be useful to call the attention of your readers to the above Civil War analogy. Quoting a higher authority than myself, in the form of General Haig's last ~~despatch, you~~ can see that the army would consider peace at this stage of the war nothing short of a crime."

MRS. JARVIS, BOX 288, PENETANG, P.O., ONTARIO, says: "It is a pleasure to write and tell you what Dr. Cassell's Tablets have done for my baby. When only five months old he was taken ill. I had medical advice for him, and [illegible] I had [illegible] food, for which he was treated, but he did not get any better, only worse. I tried several special foods, but none of them would stay on his stomach, and he became so thin that he seemed just skin and bone. He only weighed ten pounds. We never thought poor baby could live, but one day I chanced to hear of a baby's case almost like mine, that had been cured by Dr. Cassell's Tablets, so I got some for my baby, and I am thankful I did. After a few doses the nervous jumps he had suffered from stopped, and soon he was almost well. I have given him the Tablets during teething, and find them very soothing. He is a bonny boy now, quite cured, and weighs twenty-five pounds at twelve months old."

THE BARRAGE FIRE AND THE

Fritz's front line. There was little resistance then. A bunch of bombers flung hand grenades until not a man was left, an isolated scrap here and there, soon over, and the trench with a couple of hundred prisoners was ours.

Then followed a few fervid hours of desperately hard work, attending wounded, sending prisoners back and putting the trench in shape for defence. When darkness came a working party was sent out to dig a communication trench to the rear. By the light of his flares Fritz saw us and opened an enfilading artillery fire. One sergeant and several men were killed and we had to retire. I reported to the officer and went back with orders to wait till the fire slackened and then go out again. Half an hour later we were at it again. What we had previously done had been very thoruhgly undone but we went to work. Then Fritz discovered us again, and leaving three dead men and carrying two wounded, my little party once more went back to the trench.

While I was reporting to the officer, a large chunk of flying dirt hit my head. Sick and dizzy, I lay down in the bottom of the trench.

About this time Fritz decided to wipe that piece of trench off the map. Crash! Crash! Crash! With nerve-shattering regularity the great shells landed along the trench. The air was full of flying pieces and the trench was full of dead and dying men. Reinforcements came along and paused while the officers consulted. Moaning pitifully, a wounded man crouched down beside me. Crash! Crash! Crash! The strain of lying there waiting for death was terrible. The reinforcing party got orders to move. Some little confusion in the dark caused them to bunch right in front of me. "Spread out lads; open out along the trench." But the N.C.O. was too late. A shell crashed into the trench and a score or more of men paid the supreme price. My first thought was the certain knowledge that I was dead; also that I was glad of it. I think it was a hot stream pouring over my face and head that roused me. My head was pinned tight to the ground, a weight presed terribly on my chest. I could not move my arms, nor, at first, my feet. A few seconds' work got my feet through. Somebody passed along the trench; I cried out in a voice I did not recognize as my own, but with head lowered the man flew past that place of horrors on the run. Ensued a frantic struggle on my part to rid myself of my burden of dead men. I succeeded, rose to my feet and stood still. The sight that met my eyes in the starlight will be with me as long as I live and breathe. In front of me the shell crate six feet deep or more and blown clear of everything in the bottom, but around the top a score or more of stark, silent figures that had been men but a short time before, while bodies, pieces of bodies, single bodies, piles of bodies, all stark and still not a sound broke the silence while I stood there—not a shot, not a shell. For a few seconds some magic held held up all the hellish forces that were playing over that tortured land.

I waited, scarcely breathing, for something. Waited, it seemed minutes, but could only have been seconds. Then it came invisible, intangible, but nevertheless very real Something came to that place of desolation, stopped a moment and passed on again, and I was the only living witness!

A shell crashed into the earth close by; the vicious "ping" of the sniper's bullets and the death rattle of the machine guns joined the chorus. The shell had lifted. I went down the trench to find the stretcher bearers.

And now, mother, I had better quit. If nurse comes along she'll find my temperature up and my pulse going about a hundred to the minute. I should not be writing of these things at all, but sleeping or waking I cannot stop thinking of them; so why not write?

Don't worry about me the least bit. I'm not at all badly hurt and don't send any parcels, as I'll be out of the hospital before they could get here. Write to the address at the head of this letter and if I'm not here they will be forwarded.

"Mary West," by the way, is the name of the ward I'm in. — Your loving son, Wallace.

Some people dread the idea of wearing glasses for the first time, fearing that it will alter their appearance. Dr. Fowler's extremely clear "PEBLO" Lenses, mounted in his light, neat gold mounts, and properly fitted to the face are so inconspicuous that they seem to belong there at once and are really more of an ornament than a disfigurement. MR. BURNHAM'S REMARKS AT INTERVIEW

Members of the City and County County have returned from Ottawa, after interviewing the Government with the request that the work necessary for the completion of the Trent Canal be rushed.

In introducing the deputation, Capt. Burnham said that the Midland district had felt that in the past sufficient attention had not been paid to it by Governments and it was only after the most strenuous efforts on the part of Peterborough that Hydro was introduced into Eastern Ontario. With regard to the immediate completion of the canal, it was necessary to remember that an after-the-war reconstruction policy must be developed now and it was in accordance with this policy that Peterborough and the Trent Valley District generally asked for the immediate completion of the canal. Once the threads of industry were destroyed or permitted to fall, it would be almost impossible to pick them up again after the war. There was a limit, therefore, to the economy which the Government should practice in providing for war. If the Government wished to plead that it was difficult to finance any contracts at the present time owing to the fate that Canada was spending $1,000,000 a day in military matters, Capt. Burnham said that he was prepared to say that he could arrange a loan to the Government to enable them to put the contract through and that no hesitation of a financial character should, therefore, be felt by the Government in regard to these necessary contracts.

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

In spite of the great weather for skating and outdoor activities and hockey, the gymnasium classes for boys are exceptionally well attended and great interest is being shown in the work and in the leagues. Last night in the first league game, the Tigers won from the Senators. The Tiger players had no trouble at all in finding the basket and had a fair share of luck. In the last game McLeod's Indians won from the Athletics and succeeded in pulling up to within 6 points of the latter in the league standing. In the Junior Collegiate race, the Braves continue to lead, a big factor in their success being the fact that their players turn out faithfully and as attendance counts this adds points every day.

In the high jump this week Harry Tuphope won in the Employed Boys Class with a jump of 4 ft. 8 in.; F. Green second, 4 ft. 7 ins.; F. Rutherford and J. Thirnbeck led the Junior Collegiate class, both jumping 4 ft. 6 in.

Tomorrow morning the Dodgers meet the Cubs in baseball and the Giants and Braves play basketball.

Monday night's games: Tigers vs. Athletics; Senators vs. Indians.

LARRIMORE'S TRUMP

—By—
Allan Inglis

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman)

The prison gates closed behind Larrimore. He was free. Nobody had come to meet him except the reporters, but that caused Larrimore no distress. Of course, Laura would not have come to the prison gates. She had pride, and, though he had been unjustly condemned, Laura was not going to publish her shame before the eyes of the newspaper men.

Larrimore had done no wrong. True, he had beggared a few score of women and trusting men who had put their all in his wildcat scheme, but, then everybody did things like that every day in the course of business. The five years in the penitentiary that he had served had been a gross injustice. Larrimore felt no degradation. He meant to repeat his trick, but more craftily, in order to secure the funds to start things going again.

Still, he was thinking, as he sat in the train, a lot of things which distressed him; and yet he could not shake them out of his mind. He had gone to the metropolis twenty years before, a gawky farmer-boy, to make his fortune. He had become wealthy in an incredibly short space of time, for Larrimore was quick to adapt himself to the dubious ways of finance. In ten years he was married and had a house on the avenue.

He had married the daughter of his employer. He had not loved Laura exactly, but she had thought he had. No children had come to them, and of late years Laura had seemed dissatisfied. Larrimore had lavished money upon her and had never known what ailed her. But then he had not understood her.

After his marriage he seldom went home. He made his old mother an adequate allowance, but he had not seen her for three years before he was sentenced. With his connections he could not afford to have it known that his mother was an illiterate old woman. Laura had never seen her; Larrimore had been ashamed to let her know. And when he was sentenced Laura had, by his orders, written to the old woman that they were going abroad to live. Larrimore had provided for his mother before his conviction. He hugged that thought to his heart. He was a pretty decent sort of a man.

He was thinking, as he sat in the train, a lot of things which distressed him.

Still there had been trying episodes, which, as a man of the world, he had found difficult to explain to his wife. For instance, old Mrs. Larrimore's letters. The old woman had been growing lonely. She wanted to come to town and live with her son. Of course, that was impossible, and he had told his mother so frankly. But Laura had seen one of the ill-spelled letters [illegible] and Larrimore had been ashamed.

"You see, she never could learn to spell very well," he explained to his wife. "We are of good family, but mother was always the dunce at school."

The look in his wife's eyes when he apologized for his mother had vaguely annoyed Larrimore.

After his conviction Laura had come to see him regularly each three months. Three months before his sentence expired she had told him that she thought it would be no use their living together. The house had been sold and she was living then in a boarding house. Larrimore had not answered her, because he meant to go to her as soon as he came out of prison and explain that he would be a rich man again within a year, and that he could provide her with every luxury. That would alter his wife's decision, he knew.

Nevertheless, when he got out of the train he was dissatisfied with himself. Something of conscience had begun to prick the thick skin of the man. When he called at the boarding-house he discovered, to his dismay, that his wife had gone away. A letter was handed to him, and the door closed on him. Larrimore did not mind the closing of the door; he went into the park and read the letter.

"I am leaving you for ever, Henry," his wife had written, "because I cannot live with you again. For years I have borne your callousness, but my eyes have been opened. You are the most selfish, worthless man that ever lived. I am going to the last place on earth where you will think of looking for me."

The letter was signed simply "Laura."

None of us is so bad but sooner or later the day comes when we see ourselves in the mirror of our souls. Larrimore said afterward that it was the reading of this letter which shook down the palace of his colossal self-conceit. He sat for hours in the park, dazed with the hideous self-revelation.

And then, when the meaning and purposes of his life had been revealed to him, a sudden realisation of his unworthiness came home to him. The false gods that he had served stood out, abominable idols. Life had meant nothing to him at all. He had fought his way above the bodies of all who should have been dear to him. Nobody on earth had ever cared for him, or ever would.

Except—his mother.

And, like the prodigal in the parable, except that the more loving parent remained alive to him, Larrimore said.

"I will arise and go unto my mother."

He thought of the old woman whom he had neglected, whom he had supplied with everything that was dross and failed in the gold of love. Tears blinded him. The man's selfishness fell from him like a husk.

The following morning he took the train out to the little village where his mother lived. And as he dismounted upon the platform a great terror came over him that his pilgrimage was vain, and his mother dead.

He hurried up the well remembered street. He reached the little cottage. The place was occupied. He knocked. An old woman with white hair came to the door and peered at him with her dimming eyes. And Larrimore gasped out his repentance and fell upon the floor before her.

For the better part of an hour he kneeled at her feet, sobbing out his sorrow, his shame, while the wrinkled old hand gently caressed his head. He told her everything, his sentence, his shame, he begged her for forgiveness. He wanted only to devote the rest of his life to making her happy. And with awe he realized her simple faith when she said to him:

"I think, my dear, that all these troubles have come upon you to make a man of you."

It was sweet to be in the little home again. It was sweet to turn for sympathy and understanding to the only being who had ever given either to him, who understood the natural goodness underneath the rind of selfishness that he had accumulated in the struggle of life.

"Mother, I am going to take care of you," he said at length, "and—"

The door opened softly, and Larrimore, looking up, saw Laura standing before him. One glance at him, one incredulous look, and the two children were kneeling in other's arms at the white-headed woman's feet.

SIR WILFRID IN CLOSE CORNER

DISLOYAL SPEECH SAID TO HAVE HIS SANCTION.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—At a meeting at St. Rose, in the County of Dorchester, Mr. Danjou, a lawyer from Rimouski, speaking on behalf of the Liberal candidate, Lucien Cannon, repeatedly stated that he was speaking in the name of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and that national service meant conscription and Canada's participation in the war should stop at once. Mr. Danjou used Sir Wilfrid Laurier's letter to Mr. Cannon in his address. At St. Anselme Mr. Lapoiate, M.P., appealed to the electors in the name of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The above report is absolutely confirmed by a telegram to the Prime Minister from Hon. Mr. Blondin, who was present at the meeting and personally heard the language used.

AN ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The Sodality of the church of the Immaculate Conception held the first meeting of this year recently and the officers and councillors were elected. Vice-President—Miss Irene Kylie.

Secretary—Miss Leona Hummel.

Assistant secretary—Miss Kate Tobin.

Treasurer—Miss Madge Kelly.

Assistant treasurer—Miss Genevieve O'Heron.

Councillors—Misses Lottie Hogan, Kathleen Hennessey, Nellie Brady, Lillian Coughlin, Mary O'Heron and Genevieve Sullivan.

OBITUARY

ARMOUR WEIR.

Madoc lost a very useful and highly esteemed citizen on Thursday last when Mr. Armour Weir was called by death. The late Mr. Weir was born at Hazzard's Corners 67 years ago, and with the exception of a few years spent in Bruce county, his life was spent in or near Madoc. He took a very intelligent interest in public affairs. For several years he was a member of the municipal council, taking a special interest in streets and sidewalks. He was a member of the A. O. U. W., and was highly esteemed by his brethren in that fraternity. In religion he was a Presbyterian and for some years served on the board of management in St. Peter's Church. Four years ago his health began to decline, and about a year ago he found it necessary to retire from business. His long illness he bore with Christian fortitude. He leaves behind him to mourn their loss a widow and large family: Mrs. Butcher, Peterborough; Mrs. G. Foote, Madoc; Mrs. Sutton, Norwood; Mrs. Booth, Syracuse; Mrs. Williamson, Lethbridge; John, Norwood; William, serving with a Canadian battalion overseas; Lela, at home, and Ida, of Norwood. —Madoc Review.

KENNETH JAMES ROWLAND

Kenneth James Rowland, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Rowland, of Downey's Corners, died yesterday afternoon.

The funeral took place to the Little Lake Cemetery this afternoon.

JAMES GRADY.

The late James Grady, who died in Toronto on Wednesday, 24th inst., was well and favorably known here, having been born and raised in this city. He was 42 years of age. For the past fifteen years he had resided in Toronto, being engaged as a marine engineer. He leaves a widow and six children. Deceased was the only brother of Mr. Will Grady, of Claraday. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Grady, Lock street, to Sacred Heart Church and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

J. E. C. Daoust was elected president of the Montreal Chambre de Commerce.

LANGUAGE OF THE HORSE

Words of Command go Back Many Hundreds of Years

In commenting upon the dialect words used in the world of agriculture in olden times a writer in "Country Life" states that the terms used in directing laboring horses go much further back than Anglo-Saxon or any definite language; they are probably the instinctive sounds made by earliest man as he drove his beasts, which have crystallized into the uncouth words used by every plowman. They vary slightly in different parts of England, for while a Yorkshireman will say "gee" when he wants his horse to turn to the right, in Cheshire he will say "gee-ho," in Gloucestershire "woot," in Kent "woot" or "gee-woot," and in Hampshire "woag." To turn to the left in the same counties in the same order is "half," "woa-beck," or "haw," "coom-yeh," "wol" and "come-hither." To go on is commonly "gee-hup"; while "wo-ho," "whol," "wey" and "woa" are the sounds that salute the ears of the intelligent animal when he is requested to stop. The word "aver" for farm beasts in general and work horses in particular which is still used in the North of England occurs constantly in that "Seneschaucie, or Office of Seneschal" which was the guide to good husbandry in the Middle Ages.

Some people attempt so much that they never get anything finished.

MANY INDIANS ARE FIGHTING

REDMEN HAVE PROVED THEIR LOYALTY TO OUR CAUSE.

That about 1,200 full-blooded Indians have enlisted for overseas service since the war commenced, that at least one has received the Military Medal for bravery, that the various reserves have contributed more than $6,000 towards various patriotic funds, and that altogether the Indian population has evinced a gratifying spirit of loyalty, are the most interesting features of the annual report of the Indian Department, just published. It is also interesting to note that the Indian population has increased from 103,531 in 1915 to 105,561 in 1916.

It is stated in the report that nearly one-half of the total strength of the 14th Battalion, Haldimand Rifles, has been recruited from the reserves of Eastern Ontario. There are 65 Indian members of the 52nd (Ontario), commonly known as the "Bull Moose Battalion." The Bruce Battalion has 55 Indians from the Cape Croker Reserve, where the total population between twenty-one and sixty-five is only 108. Eighty Indians were recruited from the remote region of the Hudson Bay.

In all about 1,200 Indians have enlisted. They are distributed by Provinces as follows: Ontario, 862; Quebec, 101; Manitoba, 89; Saskatchewan, 57; Prince Edward Island, 34; British Columbia, 17; Nova Scotia, 14; New Brunswick, 12; Alberta, 9, and Yukon, 2.

Of the number eight are commissioned officers, as follows: Capt. George Smith, 4th Battalion; Capt. Ormond Picard, 12th Battalion; Capt. Charles Smith, 114th Battalion; Lieut. Cameron D. Brant, 4th Battalion (killed at Ypres); Lieuts. Millon Martin, James D. Moses, John R. Steacy, and C. A. Cooke of the 114th Battalion.

A notable demonstration of the traditional loyalty of so distinguished an Indian family was the death in action at Langemarck of Lieut. Brant, who was a great-great grandson of the famous Captain Joseph Brant, who rendered such valuable service to the British cause in 1776. Two other lineal descendants of the great Chieftain, Corporal Albert W. L. Cain, 4th Battalion, and Private Nathan, Montreal, were severely injured at Ypres.

Private Belanger, an Indian of the 52nd Battalion, has won the high honor of the Military Medal for bravery. His brother was severely wounded.

Private W. F. Lickles, a Six Nations Indian of the 48th Highlanders, is a prisoner of war at Gottingen Camp. Private Alex. Moore of the 28th Battalion, a nephew of the Chief of the Norway House Band, is also a prisoner of war in Germany.

The Indians who have gone to the front, the report states, have displayed qualities of courage, endurance, and intelligence that have placed them among the most valued members of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. They excel as sharpshooters.

The Indian women have also given evidence of patriotism in a more humble way. They knit socks and supply comforts for the soldiers.

Toward the Patriotic, Red Cross, and Belgian Relief Funds the Indians have supplied $5,890.

In addition to that amount the Chippewas of Caradoc offered $200, the Mohawks of the Bay of Quinte $100, the Obildgewong $200, and the Rice Lake Indians $100. It is a touching testimony to the loyalty of the latter, and it is noted that "the department was unable to accept them, as the bands in question could not afford the expenditure."

READ THE REVIEW

Parliament is now in annual session, which promises to be one of the most important held since Confederation. Every supporter of the Borden Government, every person interested in public affairs should read The Review. This paper will have the best reports of the proceedings in the House. RECEIVES THANKS FROM HIGH SOURCE

Congratulations from Premier Lloyd George were received by the Labor Party conference in session at Manchester, Eng. The British Prime Minister expressed his approbation of conference's vote supporting co-operation of its members with the new Government, and with "labor's decision to take its share of the burden and responsibility in directing the affairs of the Empire during the great struggle for freedom and international right" now on.

The conference adopted resolutions declaring that the Government should formulate at an early date plans for safeguarding demobilized soldiers and workers in Government munitions plants against unemployment, reduced wages, degradation in the standard of living or pauperism following the war.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

Efforts are being made to get the Detroit seven here for a game. This is a fast team and would no doubt draw a large crowd of fans to the hockey arena.

FIRST NIGHT WINNERS REPEAT IN THE JUNIOR CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

George St. Methodists Won From East Side Seven

George St., 7; Mark St., 6.
Trinity-St. Andrews, 7; Knox, 5.

The Junior Church Hockey League provided lively entertainment for the supporters of the four teams at the rink last night. the curtain-raiser, which brought George and Mark St. Church teams together, being the main attraction. The George Street Methodists finally won out in overtime play, the score being 7 to 6. It was a great battle by the juniors.

The East City lads were leading by 3 to 2 at the end of the first period. George St. shot ahead in the second session and had the score 5 to 3 when the gong sounded for the rest. In the final effort the Mark Street seven played much the better hockey and outscored their opponent by 3 to 1. Gillespie tieing it up for the East Side crowd shortly before the sixty minutes expired.

Both teams missed chances to score in the first period of overtime and it was a fluke shot that finally beat Nellist and gave the game to George St., the bounding rubber off a play by Head and Rutherford finding its way into the nets.

The game was fast in spots. The teams changed form so many times that nobody could say which would win. One time the George St. seven would have the Easterners corralled at their nets. then the attackers would fade away and the line would come back with an offensive that would sweep their opponents off their feet. In line apearance, the losers looked pretty, their combination at times being fast and effective. They lost frequent opportunities to register in the third period because of slow work in front of the nets.

In the second period, when the George St. lads came from behind and scored three in a row, Graham contributed two of the goals on long shots.

The teams:—

George Street.—Goal, Rutherford; defence, Peever and Head; rover, H Graham; centre, Rutherford; wings, Graham and Helson.

Mark Street.—Goal, Nellist; defence, Record and Hagerman; rover, Cook; centre, Williams; wings, Quinn and Gillespie.

In the second game Trinity-St. Andrews defeated Knox seven by 7 to 5 after a hard contest. Trinity-St. Andrews scored the first two goals and were leading the Presbyterians until the penalties sent the Unionists to the fence and Knox tied the count at 5 to 5. Against the full team, however, the Southerners could not get through.

The teams:—

Trinity-St. Andrews—Goal, Pigeon; defence, Greene and English; rover, Henry; centre, Sodem; wings, Tudhope and Batten.

Knox—Goal. Mahood; defence, Moore and Rehill; rover, Doughty; centre, Wright; wings, Jackson and Clarke.

With fast work around the net the Mark Street lads would trim any team in the league. Their forward line with Williams, Cook, Quinn and Gillespie, is easily the most effective of the quartette.

George Evans of the 247th handled both games and kept the teams playing hockey.

George Street and Trinity-St. Andrew's are tie for first place with two wins. Mark Street and Knox have dropped two.

Nellist, in goal for the Easterners, had a bad night, and any kind of a shot could beat him

PLENTY OF FUN AT 247TH SMOKER AT ARMORIES

Strong Man Feats by Sergt. Lane Well Received.

The smoker given by the officers and men of the 247th at the Armories last night was successful in every way but one—the attendance was not as large as was hoped for. The entertainment consisted of splendid music by the band, wrestling, boxing, strong arm demonstrations and vocal selections.

In the centre of the drill hall a regular roped arena had been constructed with padded floors and all the equipment necessary for a good sparring match, and when the genial Major O'Flynn got through the ropes and called for the first bout, it was seen that he also was prepared to do the counting if it became necessary. The bouts were all of three rounds of two minutes each. Ptes. Pierce and Deline, who were the first combatants, stood up to one another like veterans of old. Both got in some good clips and were loudly cheered at the conclusion.

The wrestling match between Fagan and Dunnette ended in a draw as neither got a fall, Dunnette when put to the mat could not be moved from his stomach and when his opponent would get him in a partly turned position, a little squirm would put the other in danger.

Sergt. Lane, better known as Ajax, and trainer of the 247th O.H.A. team, gave a wonderful exhibition of the development of a strong man. Every individual muscle of his body was shown as it appeared with limbs in different positions. He lifted with ease a 200 lb. dumbell arm high above his shoulders with one hand. He was loudly applauded when he lifted six of the soldiers from the floor hanging on to a long dumbell. He toyed with one private with one hand just as easily as he handled the 100 lb bell, and concluded his part by breaking quite a heavy chair.

The bout between Corp. Jones and Pte. Carrol caused plenty of laughter and the audience were hoping that the timekeeper's watch would stop before the finish of the last round was concluded.

The concluding number was between two small boys for the "Swedish lightweight championship." The two lads went at it hammer and tongs. The huge soft gloves on small hands did away with any chance of injury and they went into each round with all the earnestness of a world's championship fight between two gladiators.

The 247th band closed the night's fun with the National Anthem.

THORNTON ON LINE-UP

For Game With T. R. and A. A. Here To-night.

Thornton will figure on the defence of the 247th Battalion team in their gam with T. R. and A. A at Brock street rink tonight, otherwise the lineup is unchanged. The Toronto seven will come to the city on the C. P. R. local, and the game will start at the earliest possible moment. For the entertainment of the crowd the 247th Band will be in attendance.

DARCY MATCHED WITH AL McCOY

NEW YORK. Jan. 26—The announcement that Les Darcy, middleweight champion of Australia, and Al McCoy of Brooklyn finally had been matched for a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden March 5 was received with satisfaction in sporting circles here. The Australian is to receive $30,000, the sum for which he had been holding on before agreeing to make his American debut. McCoy is recognized by many as the middleweight titleholder by virtue of having knockd out George Chip, who later suffered the same fate from Darcy in Australia.

And flour by any other name would savor the high price of wheat.

CURLING

Three inter-rink matches were played at the rink last night, one less than schedule. There ere a great many postponed games to be played and the board of management hope that the skips will ararnge to have them played off as early as possible, as the ice is fine.

ADVANCED GIRLS WON BY 15 TO 9

INTERESTING BASKETBALL GAME AT Y. W. C. A. GYMNASIUM.

The advanced class and the senior school girls played an interesting game of basketball at the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium last evening, the advanced girls winning by 15 to 9. The girls displayed considerable skill and knowledge of the fine points of the game.

It is hoped soon to have a league under way. The Collegiate girls, who use the gymnasium on Wednesday evening, are developing some good players and will enter a team.

Miss Littlefield, physical directress, refereed the contest last night.

NOSE INJURED

GOALKEEPER LEES HURT AT KINGSTON.

KINGSTON, Jan. 26.—The senior O. H. A. game here last night resulted in victory for Toronto Riversides, who defeated Queen's 3 to 2. Lees, the Queen's goalkeeper, had his nose broken by a hard check and delayed the game. But he came on again and played great hockey to the finish.

The primary members of Miss Ida Turner's music class gave a delightful piano recital at her home on Gilmour Street on Saturday afternoon last. Master Charlie Cowling was presented with a prize for obtaining the most marks in the last term of music, while Master Gerall Routly came second on the list. The afternoon was brought to a close by a musical spelling match.

Miss Frances Thrall of Norwood, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Nicholls Hospital, is progressing favorably.

Miss Harriet May of Toronto is the guest of Miss Burnham, Weller St.

The ladies of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E., will hold a tea tomorrow afternoon at the Empress Hotel grill-room.

The 57th Chapter, I. O. D. E. tea, which was held yesterday afternoon in the spacious dining-room of the Masonic Hall, George street, was a great success, both in attendance and financially.

The tea table, attractively decorated with a most beautiful basket of ferns, on either side of which stood two large silver candelabras with red candles, was presided over by Mrs. H. Rush. The hostesses for the afternoon were: Mrs. (Col.) Stevenson, Mrs. (Major) Hounsell, assisted by Mrs. C. E. Jamieson, Miss Collins, Miss Gladman, Miss M. Rush and Miss Worth. Miss F. Burnham acted as treasurer, and Miss A. Braund contributed many fine selections on the piano during the afternoon.

The marriage took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lawrence, Welland, of their youngest daughter, Zella Juanita, to John G. G. Frost, B.A., Sc., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Frost, Tweed, Rev. G. K. Bradshaw officiating. The bride, attired in a gown of crepe de chine over silk embroidered lace, was given away by her father. Mr. and Mrs. Frost will reside at 77 Griffith St., Welland.

Miss Constance Boulton, Toronto, leaves today to attend the banquet given by the Canadian Society of New York at the Baltimore Hotel. Miss Boulton is the first lady that has been asked to address the society and for the first time lady guests are being invited.

The marriage took place in Coleraine, County Derry, Ireland, on December 19th, of Dr. C. Stewart Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Wright, Garden Hill, to Miss Meta M. Rankin.

Mrs. A. B. Spillman of Hastings spent the day in the city.

Dr. T. H. Hassard of Markham is in the city.

Mr. W. E. Brewster of Campbellford is in the city.

Dr. H. A. and Mrs. Turner of Millbrook were visitors to the city today.

Mr. Geo. Hogarth of the Highways Branch of the Department of Public Works, Toronto, is in the city. He will address the County Council this evening.

A special meeting of the Canadian Kitchener League is called for Tuesday afternoon, January 30th, in the Oriental Tea Room, at 3 o'clock. It is important that every member be present.

Mr. E. T. Malone, of Toronto, director of the Toronto Loan and Savings Co., is in the city attending the annual meeting of the company.

Mr. R. Tivey, Stanley Ave., is progressing favorably after his recent accident.

Mr. Herbert C. Cox, manager of the Canada Life Assurance Co., Toronto, is in the city attending the annual meeting of the Toronto Savings & Loan Co.

SALE OF THE REID STOCK

Tomorrow will witness further reductions on the Reid stock. This sale is enjoying great popularity and doubtless it will continue to do so during its duration. The people of the city are finding desirable garments at surprisingly low prices. Tomorrow there will be many price features.

PETERBOROUGH PIONEER DEAD.

The death occurred in Toronto on Tuesday of Martha Donaldson, widow of the late Silas Fisher, of Hamilton township, after an illness of about two months. Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. Donaldson and was born in Ireland in 1837, coming to this country with her parents when a young girl, the family settling north of Peterborough.

MUST GET LICENSES

Chief of Police Thompson has received the 1917 tags and numbers for the holders of carter licenses. He has also the oval number plates for autos carying passengers.

The police are preparing a complete list of all delinquents and will issue summonses if the licenses are not promptly attended to.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Hastings county council voted to the 254th (Quinte) Battalion $2500 to use in organizing that unit.

While engaged at the blast furnace of the Algoma Steel Corporation, E. Provost, aged 24, met his death while tightening up a door of one of the furnaces while the pressure was on.

All of which is respectively submitted.

F. Isabel Hay.
Conveuor of Knitting Committee

Mrs. Hay reported having visited the hospitals, making 18 calls on soldiers, providing flowers and magazines.

Flowers had been sent to a number of homes by Miss Maud Rush, convenor of that committee.

The chapter voted the sum of $25 to the Sailors' Relief Fund.

It was decided to send 126 pairs of socks to the War Contingent Association for distribution.

An autograph quilt is to be made and sent Major the Rev. Canon Davidson for hospital use.

A systematic collection of scrap paper is to be arranged for.

The monthly meetings will in future be held on the fourth Thursday at 3.15 p.m., instead of in the evenings as formerly.

The annual meeting of the chapter will be held in the Y.W.C.A. on Monday, February 26th.

Kitchener League

The Packing Committee of the Canadian Kitchener League will meet at the Oriental on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 30, for the purpose of preparing another shipment for the Peterborough boys in the trenches. Will those who are knitting kindly send in all finished articles before this date, as the league is anxious to have a real large shipment. If we could but realize what a warm comfortable pair of socks must mean to our boys in the trenches these cold, stormy days, there would be a shipment every day instead of every two weeks.

EAR IN REVIEW

The annual congregational meet- g of Knox Church was held on esday evening. There was a good tendance of the members present ho took a lively interest in the re- rts submitted from the various de- rments. The Rev. J. A. MacKenzie esided over the meeting which was ened by the singing of a hymn and ayer by Mr. J. F. Morrison. The essage from the session as submit- d by Mr. T. R. Kennedy referred part to their work during the ar, and their thankfulness for the essing of God which has manifestly sted upon their efforts. The mem- ers on the roll at the present time e 520, an increase of 60 during the ear. There are now over 100 mem- rs who have responded to the call the Empire and are wearing the ing's uniform. The report of the oard of managers as submitted by obert Mulligan, chairman, and J. . Buyers, secretary, reviewed the ork and viewed with satisfaction e results accomplished. That the ongregation has prospered is quite vident, as the auditors' and treas- rers' reports show the finances very tisfactory with an improvement of 5 per cent. on the current expense ccount. The thanks of the board ere tendered to Rev. J. A. MacKen- e, the Ladies' Aid Society, the oung People's Guild, Men's Bible lass, the Berean Bible Class and ther organizations for their valu- ble assistance and co-operation.

Mr. T. Carpenter, treasurer, su- itted his report, showing revenue 5528.06, and expenditure $5,250.62. alance $277.43.

Mr. W. Watt, missionary treasur- r, submitted his report, showing venue $766.87, as against $603.83 1916, an increase of $104.04.

The report from the Sunday School epartment was read by Mr. Roy aing. The enrolment for the year as 550 and the average attendance was very good. The report, in part, ongratulated Mr. M. Clark, general uperintendent, and his staff of as- istants and teachers on the excel- ent manner they have controlled heir classes, which have all perman- nt teachers. The financial statement of the Sunday School was read by Miss Jessie Miller and showed the re- eipts $500.86, expenditure $438.07; alance, $62.79.

The report of the primary depart- ment of the Sunday School was read by Miss M Cunningham The mem- bership has increased under the su- perintendence of Miss M. A. McDon- ald and staff of five teachers. The re- ceipts were $53.12. The report of the omen's Missionary Society was ead by Mrs. J. F. Aflin, showing a uccessful year under the leadership of Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Mac- Donald. Clothing and supplies had been shipped to the north-west and

COUNTY ROADS SYSTEM MADE CLEAR BY ENGINEER

Good county roads under the county roads system was the object of a very representative gathering of the City Council, County Council, property owners and autoists at the County Council chamber last night. The deputation was introduced by Mayor Duffus, who stated that they were one and all anxious to see the roads of the county and city built under an approved system. The time for preparing for good roads had arrived. Some of the cities and counties of Ontario had adopted the county and suburban roads systems and he thought that as the province was willing to assist in the matter that it was consistent with good business to be prepared to take hold as soon as finances levelled after the war, and the city was ready to co-operate with the county at any time.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., felt sure that the members of the County Council were impressed with the necessity of good roads. The city was as much interested in good roads out of the city as in it. They were as important as a new industry.

Col. J. W. Miller had travelled a great deal over the roads of the province. There were bad roads in the city and county. It was due to lack of system. He hoped to see it taken hold of so that the roadways would be as beautiful as the homes. Good roads were the best advertisement that a county could have.

Mr. E. A. Peck was very much interested in good roads. At the present time the main question was who was responsible for the maintenance. The day had passed when the farmer was required to look after them. A new system was being adopted, where the main highways were being looked after by the peo-

MURDERER IS CAUGHT

Stewart Left Hiding Place in Barn.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WINDSOR, Jan. 27.—Jas. Stewart, who murdered Inspector Jackson of Winnipeg on a C. P. R. train near here on Thursday, was arrested this morning. He had been hiding in a barn on the outskirts since, but hunger and craving for drugs drove him out this morning. He went to Essex Hotel, registered as James Emmerson, breakfasted, and went to a room. Councillor Lew Smith of Leamington recognised him and informed the police, who entered the room and took him before he had time to reach his revolver.

Last year on this date it was mild, with rain, up to 41 degrees, and wheels in general use. Most likely snowfall after this. —W. P.

TRIAL SET

Lands Flooded Above Buckhorn Dam.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 27 — This morning Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and R. J. Plaiston, for the Government of Canada, appeared before Judge Audette of the Exchequer Court on the return of a summons to fix the date of trial of Hopwood vs. The King.

An order was granted to set down the trial for Feb. 26 at 11 o'clock.

This is a test Trent Canal case of flooding lands above Buckhorn dam, which it is claimed was raised when the dam was rebuilt.

These claims have been pending for years and will all come in under this case.

RUSSIANS ON RIVER AA ARE REINFORCED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 27. — Russians in the Riga region have reinforced their lines east of the River Aa, says today's army headquarters statement.

Raiding operations have taken place along the Roumanian front. There is nothing new on Von Mackensen's nor on the Macedonian fronts.

The French made a fruitless attack last night against positions on Hill 304, and another early this morning. Attacks by the British and French on the Somme front were also repulsed.

DRESDEN ARSENAL BLOWS UP KILLING 1000 WOMEN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 27. — The Dresden arsenal has been blown up and one thousand women and young girls killed, according to a letter taken from a German soldier dated Dec. 30th. The letter was written from Dresden, and the writer said that all windows within twelve miles were broken by the explosion.

The writer added that the authorities were keeping the news secret, and no railroad tickets were being issued for Dresden except for urgent reasons.

PTES. FRANK BIRDGENAW AND FRED WICKER KILLED

Two members of the original 93rd Batt. are today officially reported killed. They are Pte. Fred Wicker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wicker, 317 Mark Street, and Pte. Frank Birdgenaw, son of Mr. John Birdgenaw, 281 Perry St.

Wounded in Legs.

Word has been received by Mrs. A. J. Lashbrook, 493 Aylmer street, from her husband's mother that her son, Pte C. Lashbrook, has been wounded and is now in hospital in England. Pte. Lashbrook enlisted in August 1915, and went overseas with the 59th, and while in England was with the 39th. Later he was drafted to the 2nd Bn.

Must Go Overseas.

Officers now occupying positions with battalions will have to go overseas. Those returning from overseas for leave or convalescence will be given the positions now occupied by those who have not yet gone overseas. This is the new regulation proposed, to be announced shortly. Transfers by those who could have gone overseas to local battalions have irritated those already overseas, who have made complaint.

Parade to St. Andrew's.

The 247th Battalion will parade to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

Now Lieut. Latimer.

Sergt. Harry Latimer has been promoted to lieutenant and attached to the 247th Battalion, according to district orders today.

Two Americans Join.

Havelock is again to the front with recruits for the 247th Battalion. This morning two men from the village signed up and are now wearing the khaki. They are both of American birth, but have been working for some time in Havelock. The recruits are Pte. Frank Stanley of Milwaukee and Pte. John Baxter Bernard, Richmond, Va.

Major R. E. Porter of Kingston has been appointed commanding officer of the 252nd (Victoria and Haliburton) Batt., succeeding Lt.-Col. J. J. Glass, who resigned.

MR. GILLESPIE MAY BE SHELVED TO MAKE ROOM FOR GORDON

That is the Plan on Foot Among Local Liberals---R. R. Hall to Lead Forlorn Hope Against Capt. Burnham---Southwest Toronto Tactics to be Tried Here.

G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., will not be the nominee of the Liberals for another term in the Legislature, if the plans of G. N. Gordon and other party leaders are carried out to a successful issue. The project on foot is to retire Mr. Gillespie and give the nomination to Mr. Gordon, thus leaving the Federal field clear for R. R. Hall, who threatens to lead a revolt if he is not named for the Dominion Parliament. Conferences of the workers are being held almost nightly, the favorite place of meeting being in Mr. Gordon's law office.

The city solicitor is not satisfied with holding that office, besides being a member of the school board. His ambition for parliamentary honors is well known. In 1914 he aspired to the nomination, which finally went to Mr. Gillespie. At that time the Rowell policy to abolish the bars was the paramount issue, and a candidate of pronounced temperance views was essential.

Mr. Gordon, in conference with the leaders, declared himself in favor of the Rowell compromise temperance plank, but even at that failed to land the nomination. The big-wigs of the party decided that the lawyer, who was recognized as the legal champion of the liquor men, would hardly fill the bill and hold the temperance vote.

Times Have Changed.

Times have changed since the election of 1914. The experiment that worked out so successfully in Southwest Toronto and in North Perth may be repeated in Peterborough. Mr. Gordon, it is figured, could swing the last of the liquor vote to the side of the Liberals.

Mr. Hall insists upon the Federal nomination. The party have little hope of capturing th riding, but Mr. Hall is willing to make the run, even if he is defeated, in order to keep himself in line for future honors and to retain his position as the recognized local leader. A year ago he was counted out at an informal caucus in which Liberals from Ottawa took a hand. His violent threats of reprisal on that occasion brought about a change in the program, as it was realized that he was not to be downed without a struggle.

Mr. Graham Takes a Hand.

When Hon. Geo. P. Graham was in the city two weeks ago to address a recruiting meeting in the Grand Opera House he combined political business with patriotic duty. Mr. Graham had a conference with both Mr. Hall and Mr. Gordon, and it is generally believed that the proposed terms of peace between the two were not only approved but were actually arranged by him when the sacrifice of Mr. Gillespie was decided upon.

It is well known that at the recent municipal election Mr. Gordon had the entire party machine at work to secure his return as a member of the School Board. The different ward organizations worked for him and the secretary of the Liberal Association was one of his most active and enthusiastic supporters. Mr. Gordon demonstrated the advantage of organized effort even in a local election. That and the plumper vote carried him through in triumph. His workers at the polls played their best card when they advised the electors who were friendly to him to vote for him alone. At that time the Federal nomination was the real prize in sight, but events have necessitated a change in the program. Mr. Gordon is reconciled to going after the lesser honor because he is satisfied that the party has a better chance to score in the provincial than in the Federal field, and he is not making any campaign for the honor and the excitement of leadership alone.

Mr. Gillespie Popular.

Mr. Gillespie has a host of friends and admirers who are satisfied with the record he has made, and who will not submit quietly to see him shelved even to make room for the man who already holds two offices in the city, one of them a salaried position, and who is not satisfied even with that.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. I. Richardson Celebrate To-day

RICHARDSON—BIGGER—Jan. 27, at St. Bride's, by the Rev. W. H. Falloon, A.M., incumbent, Isaac, youngest son of the late Mr. John Richardson, of Croxton, Staffordshire, to Julia, second daughter of the late Mr. John Bigger, of Capel street, Dublin.

The above was the marriage announcement of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Richardson, 541 Homewood avenue, who were married on January 27th, 1867, and who are today celebrating their golden wedding. Members of their family and relatives will meet for dinner at 5 o'clock, and this evening a reception, to which a number of friends have been invited, will be held at the home.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson came to this country in 1873, and have lived in this district for forty-four years, the greater part of that time in Peterborough.

The wedding announcement was clipped from the Liverpool Mercury of January 28th, 1867, and has been carefully preserved by Mrs Richardson.

Citizens will join in extending to the bride and groom of fifty years ago best wishes for a happy wedding celebration and many more years of health and happiness.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 1917.

ASSAILING THE FEDERAL MEMBER.

THE EXAMINER last night had another twaddling attack on the member for West Peterborough for "butting in," as it expresses it, when E. M. Macdonald asserted in Parliament that the Canadian soldiers were not receiving proper medical treatment in the hospitals in England. Capt. Burnham challenged this statement, defied Mr. Macdonald to cite one case of a soldier making a complaint, and declared from his own personal knowledge that the wounded soldiers were well satisfied with conditions.

The Examiner seems to have a distorted idea of military ethics. There is nothing in the code to prevent a soldier discharged from hospital to camplain of his treatment if he is disposed to do so. Men have come back to Peterborough from military hospitals and not a word has been heard from one of these except in appreciation of the manner in which they were cared for. The hospital records, too, show that over 90 per cent. of the lives of those wounded in battle are saved by the hospital staffs.

Should Capt. Burnham have remained silent in the House and permitted another member to traduce the service? The care of the wounded is one of the features of the war that will always stand as a monument to the credit of the British.

The Examiner insinuates that the hospital service is inadequate. What will puzzle the most of us is how a newspaper can take such a stand and then have the supernal nerve to ask young men to enlist, when the chances are that they will be neglected in case they are wounded.

WHY AN ELECTION?

A BYE-ELECTION campaign has been in progress in Dorchester for the past two weeks, and the issue will be decided at the polls today. The eyes of all the people the country over have been centred on that constituency, all ears have been set to catch the sounds of the conflict.

There have been bitter elections in Canada, but perhaps none to equal in acidity the one which closes today in the Quebec riding. Albert Sevigny, recently appointed Minister of the Interior, was obliged to go to his constituents to have his appointment confirmed. Lucien Cannon resigned his seat in the Quebec Legislature to oppose him. He has conducted a campaign distinguished for the malice of the charges which he brings against not a cabinet minister alone, but against the Borden Government. He sets up the claim that the war has not only been mismanaged, but that Canada's participation in it was unwarranted from the start. He declares that the country should not submit to the National Service canvass, which he tells the electors is simply the forerunner of conscription. Canada, he believes, should retire from the war forthwith, sending not another man to Europe and spending not one more dollar in the cause. In all of these statements he quoted Sir Wilfrid Laurier as his authority, and read at his meeting letters from his leader approving of his candidacy and wishing him success.

If an election for the Dominion House held in a single constituency excites so much ill-feeling in the country, what would be the situation if the entire country was engaged in a general election? All the work undertaken to prosecute the war would be stopped, recruiting would be abandoned, whether for the army or the navy, neighbor would be set against neighbor, and race arrayed against race more bitterly than ever.

War is bad enough even when the scene of hostilities is thousands of miles away. A general election would bring its actual horrors right to our doors. The present is no time for unseemly internal strife. When union of energies and spirit is essential. The spectacle of Canada disrupted by an election would be one that would bring new hope and new comfort to the enemies of the Empire.

SUPPRESSING LOCAL NEWS.

WHEN a deputation of city officials and private citizens leave on a business trip to some other point, they invariably surround themselves with an air of mystery, and the local papers are asked to say nothing as to the nature of their mission. This request is generally complied with, as the deputation set up the argument that this course is necessary to conserve the interests of the city.

The delegates go to Ottawa or Toronto as the case may be, and meet the men they set out to interview. The Ottawa and Toronto papers cannot be made parties to the conspiracy of silence, but they forestall the home journals by publishing the details of the matter under discussion. The home papers are left in the lurch and their readers in the dark, until they get the information to which they are entitled from outside sources.

This suppression of local news is fair neither to the newspapers nor to the public. The latter are entitled to full information, and it is the business of the formtr to supply it. It is no more just to them to request them to withhold a matter of general interest than it would be to ask a merchant to delay the sale of any article in stock at a time when the demand for it is greatest. The worst feature of such a policy, too, is that it fails to accomplish the very object aimed at by the men who promote it.

The other day a deputation went to Ottawa to urge that construction work be resumed on the Trent Canal. The strongest argument advacced was one to which the papers were asked to make no reference. The papers complied with this request, but those of Ottawa and Toronto were not bound by the agreement. The newspaper readers of Peterborough, in order to get the full facts of the case as presented to the Minister of Railways and Canals, were obliged to seek it in outside journals. The scheme failed, too, because the information which it was designed to suppress reached the world in spite of the attempts at secrecy. The delegates were in much the same position as the hunted ostrich which thrusts its head into the sand and imagines that its entire body is concealed from its pursuers.

If any outside municipality casts covetous eyes upon a manufacturing plant in Peterborough, a dark lantern brigade cannot head off their efforts to induce the firm to change their location. The designing municipalities are not so easily frustrated. With regard to the particular case in mind, every town and city board of trade is familiar with the situation, and all the silence that can be imposed upon the local press will not affect the final issue.

The city or one of the commissions figure on buying a piece of property for public purposes. When it comes to the question of location the gag is applied to the press, the reason given being that the owners of the land on which the civic eye is cast will run up the price if they are apprised that there is a demand for it. Whether the papers preserve silence or not there comes a time when negotiations are opened, and by no plan ever devised can the property be purchased while the seller remains in the dark as to the purpose for which it is intended.

None of the papers would object to this placing the candlestick under the bed if any purposo in the interests of the city were served thereby.

HAD A RECORD YEAR.

WITH EVERY INSTITUTION, financial and otherwise, in the city enjoying a year of unparalleled prosperity, it will be no surprise to the public to learn that the Toronto Savings and Loan Company made during 1916 the best record in its history. At the annual meeting held yesterday, the thirty-second yearly report of the directors showed net earnings of $148,485.28, this with the balance of $87,661.78 on hand at the beginning of the year making a grand total of $236,147.06. The sum of $100,000 has been distributed in dividends at the rate of 10 per cent., a similar amount has been added to the reserve fund, thus leaving $36,147.06 to be carried forward to profit and loss account.

Surely this is a record of which any institution may well be proud and which establishes the fact that it rests on a firm foundation. It is an institution, too, in which the masses of the people are interested, so that the showing made is all the more gratifying. To Manager W. G. Morrow and his efficient staff all credit is due for the success achieved, and their unanimous re-election shows that their efforts are appreciated by their associates. A glance at the list of directors for 1917 is sufficient to convince everyone that the Toronto Savings and Loan Company's affairs are guided by able and substantial citizens.

STUDYING TWO LANGUAGES.

ONCE WHEN THE LATE Goldwin Smith was introduced to make a speech at a meeting of the Canadian Press Association, the chairman referred to him as "a master of the English language."

The cultured man of letters was one of those thorough students who, as they pursue their study of any subject, realize more and more their own limitations. He modestly disclaimed the honor that had been so politely tendered him in perfectly good faith.

"If I could live one thousand years," he said, "I believe I could in that time manage to learn something of our language." Here was a man who knew his subject, a man who refused to adopt the narrow policy of the grammarian who lays down a few set rules and imagines he has the language at the tip of his tongue and the ends of his fingers when he complies with the code.

And yet we have in our own province wiseacres who make light of the academic difficulties that beset the rising generation. They not only profess to believe that a school life of about ten years is all-suffidient in which to acquire a working knowledge of English, but would add another form of speech to the subjects taught in even the lower grades.

SHADY POLICE WORK.

THREE FOREIGNERS engaged in retail trade in a small way were recently hauled up before a police magistrate in Toronto and fined for selling goods on Sunday. To secure these convictions the police resorted to the questionable methods of the private detective of dime story fame. A stool pigeon was engaged. This amateur sleuth went among the dealers in question and, represented himself as an honest workingman who had been engaged all Saturday night in the commendable vocation of making munitions, and was on that account unable to lay in his weekly supply of groceries and tobacco. Would the dealers help him out? They would, and they did to the extent requested. Then followed the complaints and the police court cases.

Things have come to a pretty pass, indeed, in Toronto, if the police, in order to preserve the majesty of the law, find it necessary to tempt people to commit offences. The aim of the police, as generally understood, should be to prevent all infraction so far as possible. Their business is not to test the moral stamina of citizens by placing temptation in their way. Chief Thompson's men could any night walk down George street, and, by provoking pedestrians into breaches of the peace, fill the cells at the station house and cause a boon in the business of the police court.

There will be misdemeanors enough in any community without having the officers of the law aid and abet in their commission.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Better Stay Out of It.

(Buffalo Express.)

A Turkish reply to the Entente note on peace has been sent to neutral countries. The Germans would be wiser to keep the Turks out of the discussion as much as possible. The authors of the Armenian massacres are outside the pale of civilization.

Consumers the First Consideration.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Mr. E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association, vigorously protests against the government's inquisitorial methods in regard to the investigation into the cost of living. He claims that the merchants are the highest assessed class in the country.

War Prosperity.

(New York Sun.)

To many Americans the war means only large profits, high salaries, good wages, bonuses and flush times generally. Prosperity, especially when it is inflated and follows a period of depression such as was setting in before the war, is a great deadener of concern for the future.

The roll call of affiliated societies was answered by short reports from the representatives regarding patriotic work done during the year. This was interesting and encouraging and showed that practically every member was answering the call for personal service either in Red Cross or other patriotic work.

Mrs. Robt. Harstone was appointed to attend the executive of the National Council of Women to be held shortly in Ottawa, while the president, Mrs. Neal, will attend the Social Service Congress to be held in Toronto next Thursday and Friday.

Two most interesting addresses were given, one by Mrs. Douglas, the convenor of the immigration committee, the other by Dr. Jessie Birnie, convenor of the citizenship committee.

The keynote of the president's address was service to the Empire, putting first things first, and not forgetting the carrying on of other useful and necessary work.

The work of the Council of Women was begun for the care, protection and uplift of women and children, and such work must be maintained even during the stress of war time. Mrs. Neal urged economy and thrift among housekeepers and workers.

Next meeting, second Thursday in February.

CHARGE DISMISSED.

W. Anderson of Havelock was discharged this morning by County Magistrate Langley. Inspector Stewart had laid a charge against Anderson for a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act, and at the trial judgment was reserved this morning.

After reaching Havelock liquor was placed in defendant's shed by an employe, and remained there about two hours, when the defendant took it to his cellar. The magistrate said he would be straining the law to make a conviction.

How to Cure Stomach Trouble

The Common Cause Is Lack of Blood—Therefore You Must Build Up the Blood.

There is the most intimate relation between the condition of the blood and the activity of the stomach. The blood depends upon the stomach for a large part of its nourishment; while every act of digestion, rfom the time the food enters the stomach and is assimilated by the blood, needs plenty of pure, well-oxidized blood. The muscles, glands and nerves of the stomach work only according to the quality of the blood.

The most common cause of indigestion is lack of rich, red blood. Not only does impure blood weaken the muscles of the stomach but it lessens the product of the glands of the intestines and stomach, which furnish the digestive fluids. Nothing will more promptly cure digestion than plenty of pure blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the safest and most certain blood-builder. A thorough trial of these pills gives a hearty appetite, perfect digestion, strength and health. Here is proof of the value of these pills in cases of indigestion. Mr. Daniel Dexter, Liverpool, N. S., says: "For several years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. I was greatly troubled with gas on the stomach which caused disagreeable sensations. I was also frequently troubled with nausea and vomiting, which were very distressing. As a result of my trouble my appetite almost completely failed, and what I did eat caused me constant pain. I was continually doctoring, but did not get any benefit, and had about made up my mind that I would suffer for life. One day a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and while I had not much hope of a cure I decided to do so. I had only taken a few boxes, however, when I found they were helping me. Very gladly then I continued the use of the pills, and in less than three months I was as well as ever I had been, able to eat a hearty meal, and to feel that life was again worth living. I had also been troubled from time to time with attacks of rheumatism, and the use of the pills cured this as well as the indigestion. It is now over a year since I took the pills and in that time I have had no return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: It is a very extraordinary fact that when the friends (?) of certain of our fellow citizens who want to be senators, or they will break up the whole "darned party" go into the press they take to The Examiner. You would think that The Examiner and its friends are so anxious to have a Conservative senator that they have no hope of having a Grit one.

Well, perhaps they are right. It is hardly likely that the Grits of Peterborough will have the opportunity in this generation, and it is as well they have reconciled themselves to that fact.

But perhaps it is only a bluff at Mr. Burnham, whose efforts in behalf of Peterborough have certainly been greater and more effective than those of any member we have ever had, and I say this without disrespect to any one. Not only that, but Capt. Burnham has worked and is now working for his country, for all Canada, and has not asked anything for himself. Go easy, Grit friends—the people are not fools and are not easily fooled, either, and don't you forget it.

SATISFIED CONSERVATIVE

Today's Story

A gentleman from Vermont was travelling west in a Pullman when a group of men from Topeka, Kansas, boarded the train and began to praise their city to the Vermonter, telling him of its wide streets and beautiful avenues. Finally, the Vermonter became tired and said the only thing that would improve their city would be to make it a seaport.

The enthusiastic Westerners laughed at him and asked how they could make it a seaport, being so far away from the ocean.

The Vermonter replied that it would be a very easy task.

"The only thing that you will have to do," said he, "is to lay a two-inch pipe from your city to the Gulf of Mexico. Then if you fellows can suck as hard as you can blow you will have a seaport inside half an hour."

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Milloy wish to thank their friends for the many expresions of sympathy and assistance offered them during their recent bereavement.

DRAUGHT VERSUS BOTTLED LIQUORS

Liquors in sealed bottles in cases cost one-third more than in draught, and the quality is no better. Why one-third more? Because you are paying for the bottles and the labor of bottling, for the same goods.

Following are some draught liquors, especially "Balmoral" Scotch, which we can highly recommend:

DRAUGHT SCOTCH

"Balmoral" Fine Old Scotch, 2 gals	$12.50
"Balmoral" Extra Fine Old Scotch, 2 gals	14.50
"Balmoral" Special Liqueur, 2 gals	16.50

---God's Out-of-Doors---

The Public Library Committee have recently purchased a complete set of Doubleday, Page & Co.'s Nature Books. These will be kept in the Reference Department and should be of great use in conjunction with the museum, to pupils, teachers and other nature-lovers, in helping them to identify specimens, to place them in their corect family and to learn about their habits and natural haunts.

Nature study rightly forms part of our Provincial education. There are few things about which healthy children (even cooped up in the heart of a city) show more curiosity and interest than about natural objects, especialy living things, beasts, birds, insects, fish, flowers and trees. We all know what a fillip novelty gives to our interest, but most of us forget that to children everything, even the commonest beast or flower of the field and the homeliest fowl of the air, is new and exciting. Even when they are nearly grown up and go further afield by wood or lake, especially camping, they are still like novices at original research and making discoveries day after day in the animal or in the vegetable kingdom. One of the first things the young discoverer clamors for is the name, and many a tender bud of interest has been nipped by the grown-up's careles or contemptuous admission of ignorance—"Oh, it's only a 'bug,' or a 'worm,' or a 'weed,' or a 'ground bird,'" as the case may be.

The Library possesses an excellent standard work in Richard Lydekker's New Natural History. This is thoroughly comprehensive, accurate, and up to date; it is well illustrated, too, and no greater master in the study of Zoology could be found than Lydekker, the author of one of the best histories of our domestic horse yet published in English. But the New Natural History is too scientific for any except adults and the most thoughtful of students; moreover, its illustrations are taken from all over the world, chiefly Europe and the Tropics.

What we needed for this group of readers was a popular work on the flora and fauna of North America. For those whose interest, once awakened, has endured, and who are steadily pursuing some chosen line of nature study, Lydekker's volumes form an admirable supplement to the Doubleday, Page & Co.'s nature library. These nature books deal entirely with the life of North America; they are fully, even richly, illustrated in natural tints by the three-color photography process; the letterpress is instructive and accurate, but not too technical to be understood. There are seventeen of these volumes, and nearly all are excellent, quite the best thing of their kind in the great book world.

A few years ago the present writer got the two volumes of this series by Holland, on Butterflies and Moths, for the use of a field club, and wrote to the late Professor Fletcher of Ottawa for his opinion of the choice. James Fletcher was one of the highest authorities in our Dominion, and his letter in reply brimmed over with good things: had such books come his way when he was a schoolboy, he would have been in the seventh heaven with delight; books with good colored pictures of beasts, birds, insects and flowers, before color-photography, cost from $20 to $100 a volume; nowadays parents, dominies, bachelor uncles and big brothers could make youngsters rich for life at an outlay of $3 or $4, the price of the Butterfly Book, or "Bird Neighbors," and ought to be ashamed of themselves if they lost the chance of suiting some such present to the taste of the little folk.

The beauty and truth of the color plates may be judged from the fact that practically all the butterflies of North America can be identified, even to the species; all the larger moths, most of the medium sized and less conspicuous, besides the genera at least of the smaller drabs and neutral-tinted sorts, from Holland's colored plates in the volumes on butterflies and moths. In Miss Blanchan's book on flowers, most of the showy wild flowers of Ontario will be found with most interesting descriptions; a special feature of this gifted authoress' writing on plants lies in her interpretation of flower structures as adapted to insect visitors; these guests are lured to the flower by its chalice of nectar, but have to pay for their sip of sweetness by becoming carriers of their host's pollen to other flowers of the same kind. Her books on birds have earned high praise and a preface from the editor of Recreation (G. O. Shields) as well

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, billous spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

RECEPTION TO COL. McMILLAN AND HIS PARTY

S. A. OFFICERS COMING FOR SERVICES AT ARMY TEMPLE.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY.

A great public reception will be given to Colonel McMillan tonight, both at the train and at the S. A. Temple, Simcoe street. Col. McMillan worked for twenty years in Australia, and has been recently transferred as second in command of Canada East, extending from Fort William on the west to Cape Breton on the east.

This is his first visit to Peterborough, and Ald. Duncan, chairman of the reception committee of the City Council will be on hand with the reception committee and will welcome Col. McMillan on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough generally.

The reception of visiting officers will also be a feature of the evening's program. They will include Brigadier Bellerldge, in charge of the young people's work for Canada East; Brigadier Morris, field secretary for Canada East; Adjt. Pelatree of Belleville; Mrs. Ensign Smith, of Kingston; Capt. Parsons, Capt. Leader, Capt. Keith, Capt. Johnstone, Capt. Laurie, Lieut. Kingston, Capt. Hargreave, Capt. Beer, Capt. Spooner, scout leader; Capt. Mopp, guard leader; Ensign Richards, of Montreal, and Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, D. C. for Eastern Ontario. Major and Mrs. Jennings will also come with the party and conduct the senior meetings at the Temple on Sunday. These are old officers of the corps and will receive a great welcome. The other officers will assist Commissioner Richards with the Y.

as from the father of aesthetic ornithology (John Burroughs).

"Bird Neighbors" describes 150 common birds of garden, orchard, field and forest, while its companion volume contains as many as 170 kinds of hawk, owl and game bird. Dugmore's name is now almost a household word for skill with the camera, and his "Bird Homes" reaches a very high order of excellence.

Nina Marshall's books on mushrooms and mosses are also very serviceable and the Reptile Book of Raymond Ditmars, both picture and writing, is full of fearful fascination. The author is a snake fancier and has collected for many U.S. scientific institutions. If you are tired of the dull monotony of mere living, and want something blood-curdling, read some of his pages of hair-breadth escapes from poison fangs; but, whatever you do, don't take up the page on Rattlesnake Jack just before bedtime. Poe's Murder in the Rue Morgue, or Kipling's Bertram and Bimi might spare you the horrors of nightmare, but not the Rattler.

Altogether, these additions to the library, linked with specimens taken or seen by the enquirer, or supplemented by the excellent museum over the library, should prove an invaluable boon to hundreds of our citizens, pupils, teachers and all genuine amateurs (i.e., lovers) of God's out-of-doors.

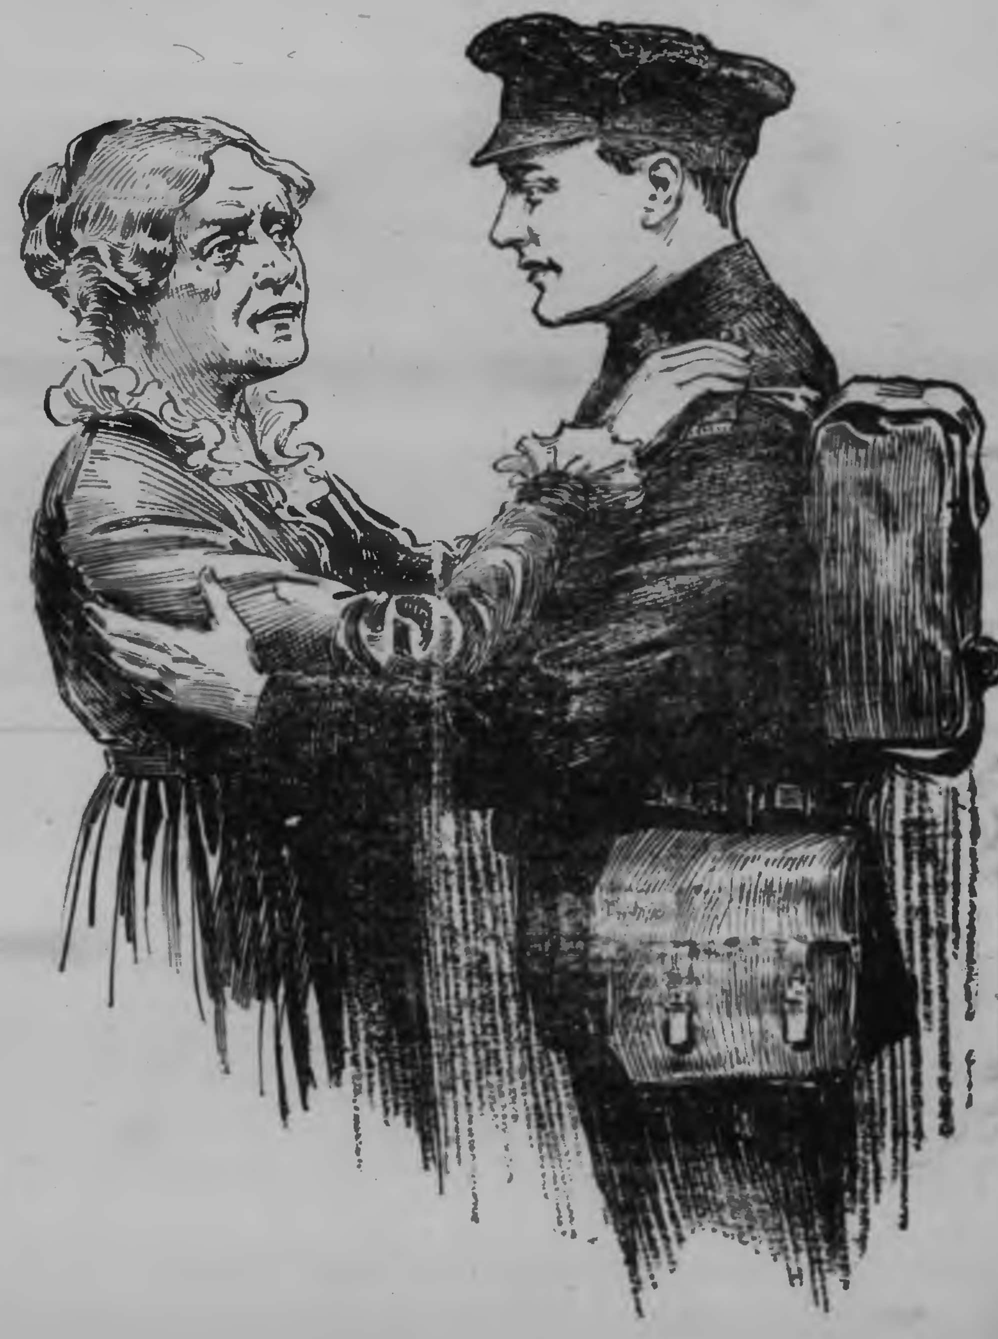
When a woman helps her husband do anything she always wants to do the bossing.

Some men make fools of themselves by doing the fool things they are asked to do.



Good-bye, Mother, Don't Worry!

Good-bye—trusting in God to bring him home to her safely—if that be His will.

Good-bye—trusting in you and me to see his Mother through while he, her natural support and defender, is somewhere in France, facing shot and shell for God, for right, and for native land.

In the name of Christendom, men and women, what sacrifice is this! What consecration to duty! What response to the call of the Motherland! What clarion challenge to the world to "Watch Canada!"

He goes—joy of his Mother's heart—idol of all her dreams from the day she bore him—hope and bulwark of her declining years.

He goes—and, Heaven bless his belief in us, his people—he goes, leaving his most beloved possession to our care and protection.

He trusts us. Who will fail him? What man or woman, rich with the possession of the memory of a Mother, will fail his Mother as a reward for her sacrifice?

This trust of our soldiers is a holy legacy.

Give to the Mothers of our soldiers in the name of your mother—as your testimonial to Canadian Motherhood. Give to

The Canadian Patriotic Fund

$6,000,000 must be raised in Ontario for this Fund for 1917.

Mothers, wives, and children of Canadian soldiers shall never say that their own people neglected them after their men went forward to suffer and to die.

Every case helped by the Patriotic Fund is carefully investigated. Only where assistance is really needed is assistance given. Everything humanly possible is done to avoid waste and prevent imposition.

GIVE AS YOUR OWN HEART PROMPTS YOU TO THE PATRIOTIC FUND

Ontario will be asked in January to assure the Canadian Patriotic Fund that it can depend on having six million dollars in 1917 for the families of Ontario's soldiers.

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC

Four million of these dollars must be secured from individual subscriptions. If there is no Branch of the Fund in your town or county send your subscription direct to the Head Office, Canadian Patriotic Fund Victoria street, Ottawa.

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE

Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

ALBERT VARNER

Buckingham, Que., May 3rd, 1915.

For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-tives". I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives", and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-tives", and you will get well".

The Wonder of the Musical World—Music's Re-Creation

Anna Case

Who is well called "The Miracle Girl of the Metropolitan." The comparison pictured here proved her living voice and Edison's Re-Creation were indistinguishable.

The NEW EDISON

Of all the wonders Edison has achieved, none have brought more unalloyed joy [illegible] his artistic triumph in the Re-Creation of Music. To think of it!—Through his patient experimenting and study, the world's greatest interpreters of music will never cease to charm the ear. Every shade and tone is preserved for immediate Re-Creation at your will. And this claim, by the way, comes from the most unprejudiced sources—

"Not Possible to Distinguish One from the Other"

—DETROIT FREE PRESS

This is the tribute of a noted critic, and is but one of the many enthusiastic endorsements of the press. It is convincing testimony of the vast difference that lies between the New Edison and the hundreds of makes of "Talking Machines" on the market. Only the New Edison could survive the supreme test of singing and playing in direct comparison with the living artist.

Stops that Pain in the Back

Pain in the back is one of the most common symptoms of Kidney trouble. Every movement becomes a torture, and if neglected, the disorder finally confines the sufferer to bed.

This is exactly what happened in the case of Mr. Arnold McAskell, of Hants County, Nova Scotia. He sought in vain for relief until he decided to try

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Before he had used one box he began to feel better. Two boxes entirely relieved him. And best of all, up to the time he wrote us, he had had no further sign of the trouble. Mr. McAskell concludes his letter of gratitude by saying, "I cannot say too much in favor of these great pills and would recommend them to anyone suffering from Kidney trouble."

Kidney or Bladder trouble may also take the form of swollen joints, rheumatism, Lumbago, gravel, irregularity of urinary system or constant headaches. Don't neglect these symptoms. Take Gin Pills in time and escape worse ills.

All dealers sell Gin Pills at 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. Or sample will be sent free upon request to

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

ALTERED APPEARANCE

Some people dread the idea of wearing glasses for the first time, fearing that it will alter their appearance. Dr. Fowler's extremely clear "PEBLO" Lenses, mounted in his light, neat gold mounts, and properly fitted to the face are so inconspicuous that they seem to belong there at once and are really more of an ornament than a disfigurement. Call and have him demonstrate this to your satisfaction.

MARKET PRICES

Cold weather conditions caused a small outside market this morning and prices were steady, with dressed meat a little higher.

Hay sold readily at $10 to $11 per ton.

There is a good demand for straw with only a few loads offering.

Wood is also in demand and dry wood particularly finds a very ready sale.

Eggs were lower and sold in some instances for 43, but most of the good fresh kind sold at 45c to 50c, according to size.

Butter was unchanged at 43c to 45c.

Not many fowl were on sale. There was a little of everything with prices unchanged from last week

Hogs are quoted at $13.50 for next week's delivery.

COUNTY ROADS

ple as a whole, the municipalities paying part and the Government paying their share. Just what plan the Government had for provincial highways was not yet complete

County Road System

Mr. Geo. Hogarth, who was sent down by the Public Works Minister to explain the workings of the county roads system, next addressed the meeting. He thoroughly explained in detail the benefits derived by the county adopting certain roads. This was the first step necessary. The department as a starter had figured that the county of Peterborough should adopt 140 miles of road as county roads. This was done by by-law and the roads th uassumed passed out of the control of the townships and were under the care of the county road superintendent. When this was approved of by the Lieut.-Governor in Council, the province paid 40 per cent. of the cost of construction and afterwards 20 per cent. of the cost of maintenance.

The experts of the department were at the service of any county at any time and when roads were being built a provincial inspector would visit them from time to time for the purpose of suggestions, particularly to new road superintendents. In Peterborough the Government had recommended a gravel road owing to the material being at hand, but if it was found easy to get crushed stone, th macadam road was the best. In suburban areas the tar macadam was recommended at a cost of only about 5c a square yard more than the good macadam roadway.

It was not the intention of the department to include all the county roads, but only the main market roads. The expenditure was paid out of the yearly levy except for such permanent improvements such as bridges and aboutments, for which debentures could be issued. The width of roadway recommended was from 7 to 10 feet wide and on each side a shoulder 6 to 8 feet, making a total width of 20 to 24 feet. Close to the cities or towns this was increased so that there would be 18 ft. of gravel surface with 4 or 5 ft. of shoulder, making a roadway of 26 to 28 ft.

Under Commissioners

After the county has adopted the county road system they can approach the council of any city or town and start a suburban road area. This covers the main roads for a distance of 6 to 8 miles and is under the control of three commissioners, one appointed by the county, one by the city, and a third by the two. These commissioners have absolute control over the roads designated. The province pays 40 per cent. of the cost and the city and county 30 per cent. each. The amount to be expended in any one year by the city is limited to half a mill of the levy.

Mr. Hogarth went into the waste of money on roads for lack of system and pointed out the satisfaction found in the 24 counties that had adopted the County roads system.

Short addresses in favor of the good roads system were made by Messrs. D. W. Dumble, V. Eastwood, C. J. Darling, W. Anderson, H. B. Rye, V. Eastwood, B. Squire, A. Weir and J. Young.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Hogarth for his splendid address.

If you would be happy don't purchase today and read the bargain advertisements tomorrow.

C.C. SESSION CONCLUDED

Special Session Will Be Called to Let Contract.

The County Council closed its January session this morning and the members left for their homes.

Reeve F. McKee, chairman of the printing committee, presented the report of his committee.

A special sesion of the County Council will be called by Warden Brown to let the contract for the reconstruction of the Court House. A special committee, consisting of Messrs. Anderson, Mathison, McKee, Darling and the Warden was appointed to get data, architects' plans, etc., prepared for the special meeting.

The county assessment will be adjusted at the same session.

Want to Tax Dogs

Reeve Rye fathered a motion to memorialize the Government to grant townships the same right to tax dogs as is now enjoyed by towns and villages.

The County Council yesterday afternoon adopted the report of the School Committee as presented by Reeve Griffith. It read as follows:—

That the reports of the public school inspectors be received.

Moved by Mr. Walsh, seconded by Mr. Eason, that the payment in lieu of Government grant remain the same as has been in the past.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Fitzgerald, seconded by Mr. Young, that the county increase their grant by 25 per cent.

The motion carried by vote of committee.

That $10 be granted to the county pupil receiving the highest number of marks at the entrance examinations, 1917

That Mr. Lees be paid the sum of $400 to cover all expenses, printing and postage in connection with the inspectorate and examination work.

That Mr. Broderick be paid the sum of $145 to cover all expenses, printing and postage in connection with the inspectorate and examination work.

That Mr. Lees be requested to be at his office in the Court House on Saturdays from 1 to 3 p.m.

That Mr. Broderick be requested to be at the School Inspectors' office in the Court House at least the first Saturday in each month.

MOCK PARLIAMENT

Military Service Bill at Opening Session.

The Mock Parliament opened the first session at Victoria Hall last night, when the Premier brought in his long-awaited Military Service bill. The Opposition was greatly handicapped by the unavoidable absence of its leader. After a short criticism of the bill by the acting leader of the Opposition, the Premier gave a very convincing speech outlining the objects of the bill, which brought down a flood of critism from the Opposition, but it was effectively met by members of the Government.

After taking the first and second reading, the house went into committee of the whole and passed the first two clauses. At ten o'clock the Premied moved the adjournment to February 9.

SOLDIERS DISPLAY GOOD FORM IN GAME WITH O.H.A. SENIORS

A 9 to 6 Victory Over Fast Team Flying T.R. & A.A. Colors.

Thanks to the T. R. and A. A. management, who escorted to this city last night a live sextette of hockey players, the fans saw a real battle at the rink, where the visitors met the 247th Soldiers and were defeated by 9 to 6. It was 4 to 2 for the Soldiers at the end of the first period and 7 to 5 at the close of the second session.

Crooks, Artindale, McLean and Hill, four regulars of T. R. and A. A., Smylie, of the Dentals, and Brikenden, a 228th player, worked for the visitors, and, as each man gave the best he had, the result was a tidy argument for the 247th talent. The locals more than tickled the home following with their showing and set at ease some of the doubting ones. The Soldiers looked good in all departments of the game—they displayed some lightning fast combination work, and none of the squad seemed to be worried by the stiff going.

One of the features of the contest was Jack Adams' unsuccessful attempts to gather a counter in the second and third periods. He had a dozen shots on th T. R. and A. A. nets, but couldn't get the rubber home. Exasperated at last, he threw away the hoodoo hickory and sought out another stick from the penalty coop. But it was of no avail. The Soldiers' left-winger's stars were twisted and there was nothing doing. He had two counters to his credit in the first period.

George Evans, who was going strong throughout the fray, got in the Petes' eighth goal on a nice piece of work. After grabbing the disc he slipped and fell on an open field, but recovered himself and bored the rubber into the netting, the shot upsetting Crooks. Evans loomed up well in several of the scores, either getting them by his own efforts or helping in combination plays.

Thornton also got a neat score in the third period when he fired from centre ice, the rubber eluding Crooks (who, by the way, put up a clever blocking game in the nets. Indeed, the work of both Crooks and LeGros was one of the brightest spots of the game.

Bobby Armstrong's activities last night were a joy to the crowd. The big fellow gave wonderful exhibitions of stickhandling, made all the more prominent because of the effectiveness of his play. He swooped about the ice, rushing, and dodging his speedy opponents, shooting on the nets, and not the least meritorious part of his performance was the absence of anything that tended to draw the censure of the referee. In this regard Armstrong is worth a dozen players who spend half their time in the penalty box.

Halpin was going in fine style and did excellent work, assisted by Flanagan, who performed in the first period, and Thornton, who played the next two periods.

Hill and McLean were the star performers of the visitors, both being speedy and aggressive throughout the entire game. Smylie, who worked at left wing, also displayed fast work.

The teams were:

T. R. and A. A.—Goal, Crooks; defence, Brikenden and McLean; centre, Hill; wings, Artindale and Smylie.

247th BATT.—Goal, Legros; defence, Halpin, Flanagan, Thornton; centre, Armstrong; wings, Halpin and Evans.

Referee J. P. Bond.

OSBORNE IS THROWN OUT

Juniors Get Another Chance to Win District.

Following an investigation by the O. H. A., the Peterborough-Oshawa junior O. H. A. games have been cancelled because it has been found that Osborne, the Oshawa defence man, is not eligible to play with the Oshawa team under the residence rule. He was working at Bowmanville up till September.

Oshawa will play here Tuesday night, and the Petes play in Oshawa on Friday, total goals to decide the winner of the district.

Believing Osborne to be ineligible to play with Oshawa, the local management wrote the O. H. A., requesting an investigation.

CURLING

Three rinks of Millbrook curlers came to Peterborough last night and indulged in a friendly game with the local sweepers. The visitors were a complete surprise and easily beat the Peterborough men.

It was a good game from a spectator's standpoint and not a little interest was taken in the game.

The skips and scores were:

PULPWOOD and PINE LIMIT

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to and including the 1st day of February, 1917, for the right to cut pulpwood and pine timber on a certain area situated on the Black Sturgeon River and other territory adjacent thereto, in the District of Thunder Bay.

Tenderers shall state the amount per cord on pulpwood, and per thousand feet board measure, on pine, that they are prepared to pay as a bonus in addition to dues of 40 cents per cord for spruce, and 20 cents per cord for other pulpwoods, and $2.00 per thousand feet, board measure, for pine, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque, payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten thousand dollars ($10,000), which amount will be forfeited in the event of their not entering into agreement to carry out conditions, etc. The said $10,000 will be applied on account of bonus dues, as they accrue, but the regulation dues, as mentioned above, will require to be paid in the usual manner as returns of cutting of wood and timber are received.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

Show Your Practical Sympathy with Slave-Raided Belgium

If ever Belgium needed sympathy—OUR sympathy—she needs it now! To the ravages of fire, sword and a savage, brutish soldiery, Germany has added deliberate, cold-blooded slave-raiding.

Over 100,000 Belgian workmen have already been snatched from their homes and taken into slavery in unknown places. The mothers, wives and children who beg for their release are driven back by the Huns in utter despair. Neutral protests have failed to change Germany's inhuman purpose, nor can the Allies free Belgian manhood until the Teutons are crushed.

But we can save the women and children through the neutral Belgian Relief Commission, which is feeding three million of them. We can express our indignation, and our sympathy with our Ally's wrongs, in a practical way, by giving more liberally than ever to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Make this a personal matter! Decide what you can afford to give, and send your subscriptions weekly, monthly or in one lump sum to Local or Provincial Committees, or financial aid given. The financial statement was presented by the treasurer, Mrs. Robert Mulligan, the receipts being $134 17 and $11 receipts in the expense fund.

Ladies' Aid Society

The report of the Ladies' Aid Society was read by Mrs. D Beavis. This has proved to be the most successful year in the history of the society and Mrs Watt, president, and the membership were congratulated on what they had accomplished, which had been of great benefit to the management. The revenue of the society totalled $941.26. The financial statement of the choir was read by Miss M. Crocker, showing receipts $40.23, expenditure $27 25; balance $12.98. The report of the Go Forth Miss Band was read by Miss M. Bulmer. The band retains its record of sowing seeds of kindness by the distribution of clothing and supplies. The financial statement showed receipts of $26.76. The report of the Volunteer Bible Class was read by Miss Beatrice McGill. The class, under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. A. MacKenzie, has taken up practical work, the sick have been ministered to by personal visits, and flowers and Red Cross work has become one of the regular activities. The financial statement showed receipts of $43.92.

The report of the A.S.K. Bible Class was read by Mr. D. J. McLeod. The A.S.K. Class is composed of young men under the able leadership of Mr. A. MacKenzie. There is a membership of 66 at present, 33 of whom have donned the khaki During the year the class sustained the loss of two of its charter members in the death of Everett Williamson and Robert Thompson, the latter being killed on the battlefields of France. The financial statement showed receipts of $73.09, expenditure $66.69, balance $6.40. Mr. W. W. Yale, treasurer of the Men's Bible Class, read the financial statement, which showed receipts of $169.59, and the retiring president, Mr. R. Hillier, was congratulated on the success the class had achieved.

The report of the Berean Bible Class was read by Mrs. Humpage. The class continues to do a good work under their teacher, Mrs. Rogers, and Red Cross work has engaged the members' time to the full extent and large quantities of hospital supplies have been forwarded. The financial statement showed receipts of $183.55.

62 on Cradle Roll

The cradle roll, as submitted by Mrs. J. F. Morrison, showed a membership of 62 names. Mr. H. J. McCannan, chairman of the property committee, submitted a report concerning the fitting up of the basement for Sunday School rooms at an estimated cost of about $1000. On motion the matter was referred to a committee to investigate and report to the board of managers. Dr J. Malcolm McCulloch stated that $1,000 had been paid on mortgage and the interest on balance fully paid up. The retiring managers were Messrs. H. J McCannan, F. J. Hall, W. Routley and Robert Mulligan, all being re elected. On motion the number of the members of the board was increased from 12 to 15.

New Board Members

The new members are Messrs. K. Denoon, R. Hillier and J. Buckham. The membership were unanimous in pronouncing the past year a very successful one in all departments of Knox Church.

During the evening Mr W. J. Byers of Brownton presented the treasurer with cheques from residents of his district and this brought forth general applause.

CAPT. BURNHAM SUGGESTS COMMITTEE ON LUNACY

When Mr. Turiff Brings Sensational Charges Against Premier Borden and Conservative Party---Alleged Plot Against Quebec.

OTTAWA, Jan. 27. — When Mr. Turriff made his sensational charges in the House against Premier Borden and the Conservative party, Capt. Burnham demanded to know his authority, but this the other refused to give until a committee was appointed to investigate.

Mr. Burnham-- Does he really think it fair to make that charge? Is it his code of ethics to refuse to give his authority.

Mr Turriff—I have offered the Solicitor-General, if he will appoint a committee, I will bring forward my authority. What more can the honorable member for Peterborough want.

Mr. Burnham—A committee on lunacy.

The charges made by Mr. Turriff were that the Conservatives and Nationalists were still in close alliance, and that three Nationalist ministers were kept in the Cabinet for the express purpose of discouraging recruiting in Quebec. The Government, he said, wanted Quebec to make a poor showing so they could carry the next election by violent appeals to racial prejudice in the English speaking provinces.

He said that Postermaster General Blondin had advised French-Canadians to skip across the border into the United States in case the Government adopted conscription. He further charged the Prime Minister with saying last summer to the Toronto recruiting league that if he had his way recruiting would cease and we would devote ourselves to development of the resources of the Dominion.

TORONTO SAVINGS AND LOAN COMPANY

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Toronto Savings & Loan Company was held at the Head Office of the Company, 437 George Street, Peterborough, on Friday, the 26th day of January, 1917, at 2 o'clock p. m.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

The Directors submit herewith their Thirty-second Annual Report showing the result of the business for the past year, accompanied by the balance sheet to the 31st December, 1916.

After payment of interest on Deposits and Debentures, and all expenses of management, there remain net earnings amounting to $148,485.28, which, together with the balance brought forward in Profit and Loss Account from the year 1915 of $87,661.78, makes a total of $236,147.06, which amount has been disposed of in the following manner:

(1) By payment of Four Quarterly Dividends at the rate of 10% for the year, amounting to	$100,000.00
(2) By Transfer to Reserve Fund	100,000.00
(3) By amount carried forward to Profit and Loss Account	36,147.06
	$236,147.06

The above addition to the Reserve Fund increases that account to $1,000,000.00, making it equal to the present Paid-up Capital.

All payments maturing during the year on the Company's investments have been satisfactorily met, and the rentals from the property owned by the Company have also been promptly paid. The books, accounts and securities of the Company have been carefully examined by the Auditors, and their report is attached to the Financial Statement.

RUSSIANS TOOK 30 OFFICERS AND 1000 MEN

F. H. DAWSON IS ELECTED SECRETARY IN PLACE OF HIS HONOR, JUDGE RUDDY

Liberal-Conservative Association Unanimous Choice of Popular and Energetic Young Member---Vote of Thanks to Retiring Official---No War Time Election Probable.

Frank H. Dawson was elected secretary of the Liberal-Conservative Association at a special meeting of the executive committee held Saturday night to choose a successor to Judge Ruddy, who, before his appointment to the bench, discharged the onerous duties of the office so satisfactorily The choice of Mr. Dawson was unanimous. A vote of thanks was tendered Judge Ruddy for his faithful services to the Association and this will be conveyed to him by his successor in office.

Mr. Dawson, the new secretary, is a young man, successful and ambitious and with a promising career before him. He comes of good Conservative stock, being a son of the late Adam Dawson, who had been a staunch supporter of the Conservative party throughout a long life that closed nine years ago. Secretary Dawson has been a Conservative ever since he was old enough to understand the term. He is optimistic, and above all else a clean and energetic worker for the party. His election was not only unanimous on the part of his colleagues, but will meet with the hearty approval of every Conservative voter in the city and county. While the secretary is supposed to be chosen at a general meeting of the Association, the executive have the right to fill a vacancy such as was caused by the appointment of Judge Ruddy, but there is not the slightest doubt that Mr. Dawson's selection will be unanimously endorsed at the first regular session. His election means the addition of young blood to the staff of officers, as Mr. C. Moore, the efficient president, is far from being a veteran in years.

No Election Probable.

A leading member of the executive gives it as his opinion that there is no probability of a provincial election while the war is in progress. This accounts for the fact that at Saturday night's meeting no action was taken to call a convention for the purpose of putting a candidate in the field for the Legislature. The present Government at Toronto holds a lease on office until June of next year, which means another session in addition to the one which begins February 13th. If the war is not over by that time, the term is likely to be extended, provided the Opposition consent. This consent is counted upon since the bye-elections in Simcoe and Toronto. The result of these contests has left the Liberals discouraged. Had they won, they would have insisted upon an election at the earliest possible moment allowed by law. Experience has taught them that the Hearst Government is sure of a temperance vote more than sufficient to offset the lost support of the liquor party.

The question of whether the Ontario Temperance Act is to be repealed or continued in force will be submitted to the electors in June, 1919. It may be that this question will be decided before an election is held. It would settle all doubts as to the sentiments of the electorate with regard to the stand taken by Premier Hearst.

QUAKER OATS COMPANY OFFICIALS IN THE CITY

A number of the officials of the Quaker Oats Co., Chicago, arrived in the city at noon today and were in conference at the local offices of the firm in the Barrie Building this afternoon.

The party consisted of Messrs. John Stuart, O. C. Kern, O. B. Holloway and W. L. Templeton.

Mayor Duffus and the manufacturers committee will likely get in touch with them at the earliest moment

The citizens generally would welcome the news that the company will commence the rebuilding of the plant at once.

QUEBEC VOTERS UPHOLD PREMIER'S WAR POLICY

Mr. Sevigny, New Minister of Inland Revenue. Elected in Dorchester By majority of 276.

STE. HENEDINE, Que., Jan. 28.—Hon Albert Sevigny, Minister of Inland Revnue in the Borden Cablet, was returned to Parliament yesterday, when the electors of Dorchester County, after one of the most strenuous battles in political annals in the Province, gave the new Minister a majority of 244 over his Liberal opponent, Mr. Lucien Cannon, former M.P.P. Sevigny's majority in 1911 was 322 He was given a public demonstration in the different parishes of the county on his way to Quebec after the election.

A later despatch of the Canadian Press gives Sevigny's majority as 276.

The Conservative parishes clung to Mr. Sevigny and were more Conservative than in the last Provincial elections when Mr. Cannon was elected by over 500 majority, while the Liberal strongholds of Ste. Germaine and St. Leon de Standon fell off in their majorities for the Liberal candidate.

HEARING ARGUMENT IN THE CASE OF LOCKIE AGAINST MONAGHAN

Judge Huycke is hearing the argument in the case of Lockie vs. the Township of North Monaghan at a special session of the County Court this afternoon. The suit was brought by Mr. Lockie, who claimed damage to his property when the township, it is alleged, changed the course of a creek in order [illegible] a roadway.

Peck, Kerr and McElcerry appear for the township [illegible] O'Connell and Joseph Wearing for the plaintiff.

500 CLUB BEING FORMED

No fraternal society, social club or organization of any kind merits the support of the citizens of this city at the present time more than a club whose duty it is to assist in the recruiting of men for the 247th Battalion—a unit of the army doing honor for Canada on the battlefields of France. Many hundreds of the citizens who have already done so much are still anxious to do more, and for that reason a club to be known as the Five Hundred Club is being formed for the purpose of co-operating with the 247th Battalion. This club will be organized during the week, and a most systematic campaign will be launched in the near future.

RUSSIANS MADE BIG CAPTURE OF OFFICERS AND MEN

Saturday's Fighting on Northern Roumanian Front Netted 30 Officers and Over 1000 Men.

BRITISH ATTACK POSITIONS OF GERMANS AT ARMENTIERES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, January 29.—The war office announces that during Saturday's battle northeast of Jacobeni, on the northern end of the Roumanian front, Russian troops captured thirty officers and over one thousand men.

BRITISH AND FRENCH ATTACK.

BERLIN, January 29. — British troops advancing in three waves, attacked German positions north of Armentieres yesterday, the war office announces.

On the Verdun front four attacks were made by the French. All attacks were repulsed.

ALBATROSS AIRPLANE BROUGHT DOWN.

PARIS, January 29. — (Official Statement.) — Numerous patrol encounters occurred last night, especially in the Champagne, at Eparges, and at various places on the Alsace front. A German attack on one of our trenches at Hartmans-Weilerkopf was easily repulsed.

Yesterday Lieut. Bastin brought down within our lines a German airplane of the Albatross type, his fifth.

Last night our airplanes threw down projectiles on railway stations at Athies-savy and Etreillers.

Fire Alarms.

The fire department were called to Albert Street this morning on what might have been a serious fire. The lady of the house put some wood in the oven to dry it out and the wood was ablaze before it was noticed No damage was done.

Three chimney fires on Saturday gave the firemen a little extra exercise.

William C. Anderson, Labor M.P., speaking at Leicester, said he was giving away no secret in stating that the population of the United Kingdom would at a very early date be put under a ration system.

There is a coal shortage at Fernie and unless supplies are received in a few days the city power plant and the public schools will be closed.

SOLDIER FROM CLARINA AMONG THE WOUNDED

PTES. DOAN AND MOORE ARRIVE IN TORONTO ON WAY HOME.

COMMITTEE FOR 247TH BAND IS APPOINTED.

This was an off day with the 247th Battalion so far as recruits were concerned. The officers hope to make up tomorrow in order that their weekly record will not fall below the high average

Tomorrow night Lieut.-Col. Ackerman and Col. J. W. Miller will address a meeting at Lily Lake.

The daily orders issued by Lieut.-Col. Ackerman have the following notices:

The following band committee is appointed: President, Major E. D. O'Flynn; members, Capt. M. G. Hamilton, Lieut. S. J. Dunsford.

Orderly officer for today, Lieut. J. F. Strickalnd.

Next for duty, Lieut. T. W. Quinn.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lt.,
Adjutant.

Positions for Soldiers.

Any other places open for returned men? Those advised of have been exhausted in a general way. It would be helpful if a few more places were available. Mention to the Patriotic Fund office what you have. Someone can be found to fit in. A couple of men are wanted to take places. These are advised to the office as for real soldiers That is the employer desires to help the man who has seen service. A mighty good thought, and we excuse him the reservation he makes. A young man, bright and adaptable, and who can take charge of the work of several girls. Nothing hard about the work, and the fact that the girls are nice people to work with is an additional inducement. A fair wage in it, too. Now don't all speak at once. But apply

Pte. Thomas Drain, of Clarina, who went overseas with the 93rd Batt., is officially reported wounded.

Ptes. F Moore and P. Doan, whose addresses are given as Lakefield, arrived in Toronto on Saturday, having been invalided home. Pte. Moore lost his right leg at Moffuet Farm during a bombardment and Pte Doan lost his leg in the fighting at Pozieres on August 31.

TRINITY CHURCH PASTOR FINDS MUCH IN FAVOR OF BALLOT FOR WOMEN

Are Showing Self-Sacrificing Patriotism in the War as Did Queen Esther Who Saved a Nation- -Tributes Paid.

Speaking on the subject of Equal Franchise at Trinity Church last evening, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., paid tribute to the women of the past and the present day and said that the women should be given the ballot if for no other reason than that for the great work they are doing in helping Britain to prosecute the war.

Mr. Wilson's opening remarks were on the Book of Esther, which he said was the least religious book in the sacred canon. the name of the Deity not being mentioned once. The book holds its place, however, because of the self-sacrificing patriotism shown in the story of Esther and her people.

The book is a striking eulogy on womanly courage. Queen Esther offered herself a sacrifice for her people. No sacrifice was too great; her wealth and royal position were nothing compared to the safety of her people.

She stands at the banqueting hall, her hand on the door, the words of high resolve on her lips: "If I perish I perish. How can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?" She won her suit and saved her people. She is only one of the splendid women of sacred story, said Mr. Wilson. Today we have a glorious array of noble women who are ready and willing to sacrifice for the salvation of the Empire.

Sir Jas. Bryce in his book "American Commonwealth," in the chapter on Position of Women, said: "No country owes more to its women than America does; it owes to them so much of what is best in social institutions and in the beliefs that govern conduct. What would he say if he were writing today of the women of England and Canada? Greater heroism and self-denial for the nation has not been seen since the days of Queen Esther. In all the past women have played an important part in the great movements of the nation—the abolition movement, temperance agitation, missionary work.

The devotion of British women to the cause of Empire today is one of the most hopeful features of the war—yet they are denied any part in directing the affairs of the Empire they are helping to save. Men of all classes or conditions, when they come to our shores, becoming citizens, are freely offered the franchise; men who cannot speak the English language, know nothing of British institutions; who may not be able to read or write in their own language; yet intelligent British women are denied the ballot and are classed with infants, imbeciles and aliens. And there is no reason why they should not vote.

Intellectually they are men's equals. Roosevelt said: "Equality does not imply identify of functions." They have ranked side by side with men of proudest names. Time would fail to tell of women like Sappho, who rivalled poets, and other who have excelled statesmen, mastered mathematics, routed armies, and led in great reforms. They are superior to men in taste. Her songs are sweeter and more tender, her epistles are brighter and more sparkling; her delineation of character more accurate and description of nature more perfect; yet she cannot be trusted with the ballot. And is it not absurd to suppose one who can produce and train poets and warriors, philosophers and university professors, has not in herself similar powers if properly developed? Women are the educators of men. School and college and the struggles of life have much to do with the forming of character; but the mother more. She lays her hand on the faculties when they are the most impressionable. It is almost impossible for a boy of ordinary abilities to be reared by a wise mother not to be somebody. The image of the mother goes into the structure of the soul of the child. Like the image of himself which Phidias cut into the buckle of his minerva which could not be obliterated and not destroy the stature. Yet she has nothing to say regarding the laws of the land which shall govern her child and her home.

Reformer of Men

She is the reformer of men. The old saying, "Society never rises higher than the mother in the home," is true. Imagine a community where the women have no love for art, music, science, literature, and all that is intellectual and ennobling, and you measure the social, intellectual and moral conditions of that community. They have led greatly in moral refoms; John Howard's wife led the way to prison reform. Florence Nightingale to war hospital reform; Agnes Jones to workhouse reform; Frances Willard to temperance reform among women.

The women of our Empire have done heroic things during this great war. Like Esther, they are helping to save the nation, and yet we cannot trust them with the ballot. Who are more interested? Surely they are as much concerned to keep the community clean and pure as the alien citizens who come to our shores The mothers, sisters and wives who have so heroically given their loved ones to the great cause have an interest in the affairs of the nation.

They say with Esther, "How can I bear to see the destruction of my kindred." Does anyone fancy that any of the great evils protected by law would be allowed to exist if the wives and mothers of the land had a voice in the Legislature?

The leaders of this equal franchise movement have not always been discreet; but just as discreet, likely, as any movement of men to obtain a great reform.

The placing of twelve women with banners at the gate of White House at Washington to proclaim their petition every time Mr. Wilson goes out or in, is not wise; it only injures the cause. Still, the great object is for the welfare of home and native land that they contend for their proper place in the state.

GAVE LIQUOR AT OWN RESIDENCE

NO CONVICTION IN LIQUOR CHARGE AT BETHANY.

Raymond Kincaid of Bethany appeared before Magistrate Jackman on Saturday to answer a charge for a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act. The constable laid the information believing that Kincaid had taken liquor from his house to another residence. The evidence brought out the fact that Kincaid had given a friend a bottle of liquor at his own residence.

The case was dismissed.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defendant.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JANUARY 29, 1917

A LOCAL HARTLEY DEWART.

MR. G. N. GORDON and the band of political workers who stand by him through thick and thin have once more inflatd the temperance issue and cast it into the political arena, there to be kicked about as of years ago by anyone inclined to take a shy at it. Shortly after the election of Hartley Dewart in Southwest Toronto, The Review stated that his success meant a disruption in the Liberal party, that one faction would soon insist upon Mr. Dewart as the leader, while a remnant would still remain faithful to Mr. Rowell. Events even now transpiring in Peterborough prove that this forecast was well founded. The discord here is already apparent. The present member of the Legislature, a Rowell supporter byond all question, is to be replaced by another of more elastic views, who will represent the element that would thrust Mr. Rowell into the ranks and put Mr. Dewart at the head of the forces. The old football game is to be resumed with Mr. Gordon first setting the sphere in motion as the kickoff.

The lack of sincerity of the Liberals in their temperance profession has again been demonstrated. When Mr. Dewart was elected on a platform in which Mr. Rowell's chief plank was replaced by one of vastly different timber, the present leader was placed in a quandary. His party had gained a recruit, and yet he was unable to express gratification upon the acquisition. He never found it in his heart to extend to the new member, branded with the same brush as himself, the courtesy of congratulation. A peace was patched up between them, and hand in hand they set out to work the destruction of the Hearst Governmnt. Mr. Rowell appealed to the temperance voters, Mr. Dewart to the anti-prohibitionists. The combination was tried in two ridings, and failed disastrously. It is not likely that an attempt will ever be made to repeat the experiment. Rowell and Dewart must in the future pursue their separate ways.

Which is the stronger in this riding? That question will be settled when the Liberal convention makes choice between Mr. Gillespie and Mr. Gordon.

This scrimmage for the nomination destroyes the last chance of the Liberals—if they ever had any—to hold the riding which they captured three years ago.

THE ISHMAELITES OF THE FUTURE.

"NOTHING should be too good for the soldier boys after the war," said Sir Sam Hughes, speaking from the pulpit of a Methodist Church in Ottawa. "[illegible] the best jobs that are going."

What will be the standing then of the man who hesitates now? If he is ostracized now he will be doubly so when the returned heroes are being rewarded for their valor. The slacker of today will be the Ishmaelite of tomorrow, with the hand of every brave men turned against him.

MR. SEVIGNY ELECTED.

MR. SEVIGNY'S ELECTION in Dorchester on Saturday means something more important than a personal triumph for the new Minister of Inland Revenue. It was the first contest since the war began in which the people had an opportunity to pass upon the policy of the Government. That that policy has been approved will please every Canadian except the hopeless partisan, and will encourage the Administration to persevere in the titanic task which the war in Europe has imposed upon them. It will have a tendency, too, to dispel the hopes of the self-seeking opportunists who would take a gambler's chance on regaining office by plunging the country into a general election.

The verdict recorded Saturday shows that the people have confidence in Premier Borden and in the Cabinet which he has selected to help him guide the country through the greatest crisis in its history. Mr. Sevigny was assailed as a Nationalist, branded by the Opposition as a traitor to the Empire, and two other Cabinet Ministers were included in the charg. Whatever views those men may have held in the past—and their opinions on certain public questions have beyond a doubt been grossly misrepresented—they are now anything but traitors to the cause that is costing the allied nations so dearly in blood and money. No Nationalist—giving that term its popular meaning—would remain in a cabinet that prosecuted a European war with the vigor with which the Borden Government has initiated and followed up the work. There can be no dissenters in the Premier's band of counsellors. All must agree upon any measure adopted. Messrs. Blondin and Patenaude have proved their sympathy with the Allies, and Mr. Sevigny was of the same mind or he would neither seek nor be selected for the position for which he was endorsed by his compatriots in Saturday's election.

The contest in Dorchester was one of the fiercest ever waged in Canada, and the issues were clearly defined. Lucien Cannon, the Opposition candidate, was the strongest available man, as he had been for years a member of the Quebec Legislature, resigning from that body to oppose Mr. Sevigny. He is the man against whom the charge of Nationalistic views could be brought with some show of reason. He declared that Canada was bound neither by sentiment nor other consideration to participate in the war. He would not send another man to Europe or spend another dollar for military purposes. He even objected to the National Service census, declaring that it was a preliminary step to conscription, the very suggestion of which he violently opposed. In every way possible he attempted to work up racial feeling against the Government.

But Mr. Cannon failed [illegible] what makes the election of Saturday especially significant. The rest of the Dominion has possibly erred with Mr. Cannon in interpreting the real spirit of the French-Canadians. They have just returned to Parliament on the first opportunity offered them a man who is not a Nationalist, but who has been a faithful supporter of the Government ever since the war broke out and who, as a cabinet minister, will have an opportunity to render the Empire more faithful service than ever. Quebec has certainly redeemed itself and given the lie direct to some of the aspersions that have been cast upon the province by outsiders, who maligned the race for their own selfish ends. Dorchester rejected a man who was opposed to conscription for another who, as a member of the Dominion Cabinet, stands pledged to that system if all else fails to achieve the temporal salvation of the Empire.

The political history of Dorchester shows that it has always been something of an uncertain quantity in an election. It has gone one way about as often as another ever since Confederation. Mr. Sevigny's election was not a snap victory in a solidly Conservative riding, and this makes the rsult all the more satisfactory to patriots who, regardless of politics, are behind the war policy of the Government.

Even in Quebec the Opposition appear to be losing caste. Saturday's defeat may effectually put to rest the agitators who would break into the work of Imperial defence by bringing on an election.

SIR WILFRID'S CHANCES.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER selected the Opposition candidate for Dorchester, supplied him with campaign thunder, gave him his blessing, and sent him into the fray properly accredited. In every moment of doubt, Mr. Cannon produced and read a letter from the leader endorsing him. Everything he said was, therefore, supposed to have Sir Wilfrid's sanction.

Cannon was defeated. Every vote cast for him was a vote for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Every vote polled for Sevigny was a vote for Sir Robert Borden and his war policy. Sir Robert and his policy won.

If Sir Wilfrid failed to carry a constituency of his own compatriots, in which he named the candidate, what chance would he and his party have in a general election?

MR. TURRIFF SEES THINGS.

MR. TURRIFF, a Western representative in Parliament, charges that Mr. Borden keeps three Nationalists in the Cabinet in order to discourage recruiting in Quebec, and so inflame the rest of the Dominion against those who hold Sir Wilfrid Laurier's stronghold. A commission to investigate the vision is demanded in all seriusness.

On the day after Mr. Turriff laid his charges a constituency in Quebec elected one of the so-called Nationalists, a man who stands pledged to hold up the hands of Sir Robert and who is to sit in a Cabinet that has promised to back the Allies with Canada's last man and dollar. That was the platform on which Mr. Sevigny was returned. The other so-called Nationalists have made recruiting speech in Quebec from the same hustings as Sir Robert Borden himself, at meetings in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused to take part.

And yet Mr. Turriff makes his wild charges and asks for an investigation. Is it any wonder that Capt. Burnham suggested the necessity of a committee on lunacy?

LIQUOR ADVERTISEMENTS AND THE MAILS

PRESSURE is to be brought to bear on the Provincial Legislature at the coming session to pass an Act making it a misdemeanor for any newspaper in Ontario to publish a liquor advertisement. Any such legislation would largely fail to achieve the object in view unless the Dominion Parliament supplemented it by denying the use of the mails to any liquor circulars or any newspapers outside of Ontario that carried liquor advertisements.

Here a difficulty will arise. No matter how favorable the sentiment may be for such an enactment, the agreements with the nations in the postal union must not be regarded as so many scraps of paper. To discriminate against domestic mail matter of this nature would hardly be fair, either. There should be no half-way measures. If it is designed to stamp out the traffic, the transportation companies should not be allowed to carry on this branch of their trade, if such trade is made illegal in other lines of industry.

A VOTE for Sevigny meant a vote for Sir Robert Borden and his war policy.

HOWLING AT the pantry door, what guarantee do the Liberals give that they would subside if admitted?

TALKING of Dominion-wide prohibition, the temperance people cannot hope to make Quebec dry without first making it mad.

THE DEFEAT of Cannon means as much for Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his lukewarm profession of devotion to the cause of the Empire.

HON. GEO. P. GRAHAM may have made peace between Messrs. Hall and Gordon, but it is a peace which does not guarantee victory for either.

JUDGING FROM the result in Dorchester, calling a political opponent a "d—d liar" and the like is not likely to become a popular phrase in campaign speeches.

THE VOTERS in the various constituencies, Federal or provincial, are disposed to insist upon the right to select their own candidate and to resent dictation from Ottawa.

THERE IS NOTHING hoggish about the Liberals in Parliament. They pass around from one to the other the pleasant duty of bringing charges against the Government.

Wit and Wisdom

Freddie, accompanied by his governess, was passing a street where a load of straw had been scattered in front of one of the houses in which there had been illness.

"Miss Manning, why did they scatter this straw about here?"

"Well, Freddie," she replied, "a little baby came to Mrs. Reed last night."

"My," said Freddie, "but it was well packed."

A Belgian cripple stamped about Brussels declaring, "We gave those Germans a rare hiding before they got to Brussels." He was hauled up before a stony-faced circle of German officers, who decreed, "You will be shot, unles you become a German."

The cripple thought it over and was sworn in as a German there and then. The chief German officer took him by the hand, saying, "You are a German now."

As he left, the cripple muttered, "Those Belgians gave us a rare hiding before we got to Brussels."

"WHY NOT FREE IRELAND?"

Since making his famous address to the Senate relative to world peace and the freedom of the smaller nations of Europe, President Wilson has been assailed with telegrams, the burden of all of them being: "You would free Poland. Why not free Ireland, too?"

WHAT GERMANY SHOULD DO TO PREPARE FOR NEXT GREAT WAR

In a letter to the New York Tribune written from Paris, Henri Basin quotes from the German newspaper, the Lokal Anzeiger, the statement of Walter Rothenau, who says that Germany began the present war too soon. Rathenau reveals to the world the fact that Germany seeks peace now only to prepare for another war and he offers suggestions as to what is needed in the way of preparation to assure a short campaign and decisive victory. Bazin comments as follows:—

Here in a nutshell, or "kernel," to quote frank Mr. Rathenau, is what Allied Europe has long understood, and what has not been truly understood in the United States save by a relative few.

It is the reason why the war would be continued for ten years if necessary by France, England and their allies. It is the reason why nothing short of the "knockout" will serve. It is the reason why any talk or effort for peace would be ill-received, even if backed by the best of motives and official sanction from the greatest of neutrals, or the smallest, or all the neutrals collectively.

The war cloud that hung over Europe for thirty years prior to August, 1814, must be dispersed finally and forever. The intolerable conditions prevailing must be finally made impossible of repetition. The horrors and miseries, the suffering and privation, the whole gamut of evil that no single individual can understand through reading the writing of another, that must be seen, felt, experienced through the senses to be grasped even in outer circles, must never again be a worldly portion.

This will only be possible through making war against war until a humane peace is the reward. It would be as impossible under a German peace as would a railway journey to Mars.

Germany realizes all I have here written in a sincerity beyond mere words for the telling. She feels her setting sun. She is reaching out at the two extreme extremes of the compass in vain effort to remedy that "beginning the war a year too soon."

One is her present huge peace propaganda in the United States. The other is her last supreme effort in the levee en masse, the deportation of the Belgian populace, the "kingdom" of Poland, and all the rest of it.

Neither scheme, neither plan, will avail. She feels it, and senses but a desperate postponement of the inevitable. The mills of the gods are grinding.

The article from the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger is but reiterative proof of open stupendous fact patent to individual or nation who will judicially examine the evidence at this 850th day of hostilities.

The fact is, the issue is no longer between the Allied and Central Powers. They but represent two ideas. One champions justice, humanity, civilization, the right of peoples, respect for moral law, and understanding as to definition of the word honor. The other has deliberately as aim the ultimate domination of the globe by a Prussianized Germany.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

One of the dark horses of the Great Push is General Sir Julian Byng. Sir Julian typifies Lord Kitchener, and is indeed one of the leading lights of the Kitchener school. I saw him at work in Egypt, where he was commanding the Army of Occupation. He impressed me at once as being a great general, and his subsequent handling of our forces in the evacuation of Gallipoli has more than ever verified the opinions I formed at first of him.

There are some soldiers who need all the reglia of rank in order to look the part. General Byng could never be mistaken for any other than a commander of a first-rate fighting force, no matter what garb he wore.

Before he attained to the front rank in his profession Fred Kitchen, the famous comedian, used to tour the Continent in an acrobatic turn with a partner named Royal.

One week they were at the Eldorado Theatre, Naples, and after the performance they went for a stroll along the famous embankment, known as the Waterfront.

"Pretty soon," says Fred in telling the story, "we reached a statue, and, lo! it nodded gravely towards us."

"'Did you see that statue nod?' said my partner.

"'I certainly did,' said I

"'Well,' said he, 'I'm going back to the hotel and to bed before I get run in. It's that confounded Capri wine.'

"So, ashamed of ourselves, back we went, and sneaked up to bed.

"But at breakfast next morning both of us seemed to be amazingly fresh considering our dissipation of the night before, and we could not understand why we had such good appetites until the waiter said:

"'Did the gentlemen feel last night's slight earthquake?'"

"I am proud to say that my grandfather made his mark in the world," remarked a conceited youth. "Well, I suppose he wasn't the only man in those days who couldn't write his name," replied his friend.

A railway timetable—Twenty minutes for dinner.

THOSE OLD DAYS ON THE FARM

"They ought to teach aviation in the schools," observed the man with the machine-cut hair.

"I suppose so," answered the man with the scissored locks, sadly. "They teach everything else nowadays; music and dancing, singing and cooking, candy making, wood sawing and gardening, and they play grand opera records and show moving pictures right in the schoolroom. Going to school must be enjoyable these days.

"Gee! I would have been tickled if I could have stopped rounding up a gerund or diagnosing a pluperfect participle, or purquing a partial payment example or locating the plains of Monomotopa, and gone out to hear Patti sing 'Annie Laurie' or 'Hear the dawn rise up like thunder,' or 'Du bist wie eine Blume.' No playing 'hookey' then."

"True!" said the man with the machine-cut hair, smiling over an unexpressed thought. "These are wonderful times!"

"And yet," continued the man with the scissored locks, "there are a few experiences of my boyhood days that make me glad I went to school at an earlier day. The children of the present generation can never know such joys as the old-fashioned 'thrashing.'

"When I was a boy we kept tab on the threshing machine as if it was Christmas. 'Where's she going now?' we would ask, as the old engine pounded down the road. 'To Tilson's'! Hooray! When the threshing outfit goes there we're in on it!

"While the threshing is going on out in the barn, the big dining-table expands through the living room, through the kitchen and out on the porch, and we youngsters race from the barn to the kitchen and back to the barn again. There are all sorts of things to watch and things to listen to, and goodies to eat everywhere.

"Mrs. Tilson sends me out to the barn to see how the wheat is turning out, and I dash away. Mr. Tilson is a busy man, a dirty man and a noisy man, and as unstable as a flea, but I get hold of him and hang on till he tells me what his wife wants to know.

"Then I speed back like a winged Mercury and dive in among the pots and pans, into some sacred place where only kids with messages are allowed to go, and I tell her that the wheat is turning out fine, and get myself hugged rapturously.

"Maybe you think there wasn't a thrill to those good old times," concluded the man with the scissored hair.

"Makes me happy to hear you tell about them," admitted his auditor, nodding in sympathy.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: The case of Hopwood vs. The King, or, in other words of Hopwood against the Government of Canada to recover damages for the flooding of his island in Chemong Lake by the raising (as alleged) of the new Buckhorn dam and the narrowing of its outflow in 1912, as compared with the old dam, is at last set down for a date, viz., February 26th, at the Court House, Peterborough, at 11 o'clock a.m.

Government commissioners, or valuators, usually try to block claims for damages, which are frequently fake claims, no doubt, at any rate in part. But often great injustice is done, and as I believe the report of the valuators is wrong with regard to these claims, I locked horns with the Minister of Railways and Canals who, however, was generous enough to give me the necessary "fiat" or permission to prosecute. Naturally, no claimant wanted to pay any of the expenses, hence I have had to pay court and my own legal agency fees, and I am not a bit pleased that my first "test" case turned out to be founded on erroneous information as to ownership. I had to get a new one.

Now, then, the point of this letter is that I hope all claimants for damages by the Buckhorn flooding in 1912 will be presen at the trial. It may be necessary to call them as evidence, but it will be at no risk of further expense to themselves.

While the case will turn on the alleged fact of a change in the dam, it is necessary to show that damages did result, or else the case will fall to the ground. We have had a long pull and a strong pull, and now let us finish by all pulling together to the extent of being present at the trial and on time.

SAVING MONEY ON FATS FOR KITCHEN

Vegetable Fats Often Cheaper Than Animal Fats --- How to Lessen the Butter Bill.

The fats we most commonly use are either vegetable or animal in origin. In the vegetable fats we have olive oil, cottonseed oil, the oils from various nuts like the peanut and several commercial preparations like lard in appearance, but which are directly vegetable in origin. Of the animal fats, butter comes first, then lard, "drippings," and the much discussed product, oleomargarine. In no one place in the kitchen is there such a chance to economize as in careful handling of this and frying materials.

The housewife who attempts to use all print butter in the cooking will run up a big bill and will [illegible] always give her family healthful foods. Many modern housekeepers seem too lazy to "render" various small quantities of fat and a shameful waste goes on of beef suet, pork trimmings thrown into the garbage. A better way to render small quantities of fat than the usual frying pan method is to put the kettle in a slow oven, which will render it just as perfectly without as much odor or unpleasantness. A good plan is to have four or five separate small cups to jars for each kind of fat to save and add to them whatever meat fats are left over.

Use Cottonseed Oil

Few housewives seem to like frying in a liquid fat like olive or cottonseed oil. But a good cottonseed oil or peanut oil makes the best of frying materials, and one generally far less expensive than lard or butter. Indeed, the dislike for a high grade of cottonseed oil must be overcome. It is not olive oil, but it is in itself a good oil and one which can find many uses in the kitchen.

Similarly many of the commercial vegetable products are more wholesome than lard and sell also at a lower price. It is only necessary for the housewife to look around a bit and find several good vegetable and animal oils and fats, which she generally overlooks. Because the ody demands more fat in winter does not mean the exclusive use of butter. It means saving fatty portions of meat, preserving themby useful rendering, and a wider use of many of the lesser known vegetable and nut oils.

Meat Rolls

Make fine crust as follows:—To one cup of flour add a little salt and two tablespoons of pure leaf lard. Cut shortening into flour with knife then rub in lightly with finger tips. Toss pastry out on floured board and roll thin. Cut in three-inch squares spread with cold chopped ham seasoned with peppers and a bit of sliced onion. Moisten with a little stock or milk and roll up like a jelly roll, pressing the ends tightly together. Bake in quick oven and serve hot. Apple sauce, apple salad, baked apples or pineapple salad go well with these.

ADVICE ABOUT SEWING

Snaps in several sizes come by the yard on black and white tape, and some of them are so small that they may be used invisibly on a flat seat. Have a band of them sewed on the inside of a skirt belt and a strip with balls to correspond on a shirtwaist and you will never be ashamed to turn your back to anyone. For plackets there is nothing better than clasps by the yard. Bias lawn comes by the piece and has numerous helpful uses. Broad belting for the raised skirt still worn is convenient for the home-sewer and gives the frock a professional look. The belting should be fitted as the skirt is attached and the top and placket finished before the bottom is turned. In turning the bottom to make it even nothing is better than a skirt gauge, which comes on a little stand, with a device for holding the marking chalk; its small cost makes it within the reach of all. In making the knickerbockers and blouses sew a small hook and eye to the elastic used; they may then be slipped in and out when laundered, and they will not need constant renewal.

DESSERTS AND CREAM

Many Dishes Improved by Addition of Ice Cream

Baked apples change from being an everyday good breakfast dish to a delicious dinner dessert when touched up with a tablespoonful of vanilla ice cream a-top each apple. Sponge cake is as good as pudding when served sandwich fashion with a layer of chocolate ice cream. Berries of all sorts are much more tempting when served with a sherbet made from their own juice. Cut up peaches are made delicious by a little vanilla or peach ice cream. Coffee jelly may be served to advantage with the addition of a tablespoonful of coffee ice cream. Even prunes, usually served only at breakfast, take on new possibilities when they are stoned and served with a garnishing of lemon juice.

On a good many desserts where usually whipped cream is served a touch of vanilla ice cream is much more attractive in the summer, and it can be made quickly and easily when cream heavy enough to whip cannot be obtained. For vanilla ice cream may be made without any cream whatever if an egg, well beaten is added to the milk.

Blueberry Cake

Take a cupful of sugar, add a beaten egg and a cupful of milk, a heaping tablespoonful of shortening, two cupsful of flour sifted with half a teaspoonful of soda, and a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Sprinkle a little flour on a cupful of berries and add them to the dough, but do not stir much after adding the fruit, else the berries will be broken. Bake in a shallow pan, cut the cake in squares, and eat hot with butter. If any is left, it may be served as a pudding with this sauce: Into a double boiler put a tablespoonful of flour and two-thirds of a cupful of sugar. Stir all together, and when the mixture is smooth and entirely free from lumps, add a cupful of boiling water, stirring until smooth and thick. Flavor to taste.

Be Ready For Picnics

What a pleasure it will be to be ready to join in the picnic spirit the next time the business members of your family express the desire to have dinner in the woods. It's just the simplest thing ever, too. Like all valuable accomplishments, however, it requires thought beforehand. The woman who has a real emergency shelf will always be ready to put up a luncheon that will delight both young and old. Summer extras to be added to the shelf are, pasteboard plates and spoons, as well as paper napkins, tablecloth and cups. Waxed paper is also a necessary addition.

DO YOU KNOW THIS?

A few drops of ammonia in a cup of warm water, applied carefully, will remove spots from paintings and chromos.

To remove fruit stains from the hands wash in clear water, dry slightly and then hold them over a lighted match.

After having the hands in soapsuds wash them in vinegar to make them soft and white and prevent their chapping.

To keep nickel and silver ornaments right rub them with a woollen cloth saturated [illegible] spirits of ammonia.

If th[illegible]r has een taken out of silk by fruit stains, a little amonia will usually restore it.

HISTORY OF SERIALS

It is said that the Old Lady of Shoe Lane, as the now defunct "Standard" was nicknamed, was the first English newspaper to print a serial story, although to-day the papers which do not are to be counted on the fingers of one hand. The distinction of being the first weekly to do so belongs to the "Sunday Times." The story was "Old St. Paul's," by Harrison Ainsworth, and the author of that stirring story got a thousand pounds for the serial rights.

A well known editor, now dead, tells a good story of when Trollope came to him to arrange for the appearance serially of "Doctor Thorn." The editor offered the author two thousand pounds, but the latter wanted three. To this the editor objected, and the novelist offered to toss for the other thousand. The editor objected, and the matter was settled amicably. "But I felt unsettled," goes on the editor. "I felt mean. I had refused a challenge. To relieve my mind I said: 'Now that is settled, come over to my club, where we can have a quiet room to ourselves, and I will toss you for that thousand with pleasure.' But Trollope wouldn't."

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was written as it ran, and the authoress intended to bring it to an end in twelve instalments. It ran to forty-three. For the serial rights Mrs. Stowe got $300, and thought she had done well. On the book she made $20,000 in six months on a 10 per cent. royalty.

The first title in "All the Year Round," in the very first number, dated April 30th, 1859, is "A Tale of Two Cities," and the opening words are, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." It ran for half a year, and was one of the most successful serials ever written.

STARS AND PLANETS

There is a good deal of difference, as science has found out, in the visibility of stars and planets when viewed through a telescope by daylight. This varies according to the color of the heavenly bodies. The red or yellow stars are much more easily seen than the white ones. Unless the telescope is focused with the greatest accuracy often an extremely bright star will be absolutely lost against a daylight field. As a general thing the planets are much less visible in daylight than stars. The reason for this is that the telescope diminishes the brightness of the planet's disc as well as of the sky, and, therefore, does not heighten the contrast as in the case of the star. Two of the planets, however, Venus and Mercury, are better observed in daylight than in darkness. Saturn on the other hand, can hardly be seen even through a five-inch telescope, except at night.

CURIOUS BELIEFS

Superstitious Londoners Believe in Certain "Cures"

A London paper says: Most numerous and perhaps queerest of all, are the "cures" which Mr. Lovett has discovered to be used by simple-minded folk in London for many of the ills the flesh is heir to. They include amulets made of amber or shaped like a heart to promote good health, flints for the gout, and bones and skins of cats for rheumatism. A necklace of blue beads is also regarded as a certain cure for bronchitis by many London people. Mr. Lovett says he has found 137 instances of the most implicit belief in this "remedy." But perhaps the most picturesque of all his discoveries of this kind is the following: Lovett was asked by a woman who dealt in second-hand clothes if he would like to know of a good cure for whooping cough? She told him she had cured several cases by cutting off some hair from the back of the neck of a child who was suffering from the disease, placing the hair between two pieces of bread and butter, and giving it to the first passing dog or cat! The disease would then pass from the child to the dog, and the former would be cured. It is amazing to find this belief, which is common to savage races in many parts of the world, existing in London to-day.

MOVIES OF CANADA

Shown to Thousands of People in the United States

Western Canada attractions are made known in all the chief centres of the United States in a more attractive form and on a more extensive scale than has been hitherto attempted. By means of the moving picture camera the life and resources of the West are shown over a circuit covering 4,000 theatres, and in this way many thousands of people are reached and interested in the Dominion who might otherwise only hear of the country incidentally. The films were taken under the auspices of the Grand Trunk Pacific and include a variety of pictures in the prairie harvest fields and through the Canadian Rockies. One of the most interesting pictures is the arrival of a fishing boat at Prince Rupert with 80,000 pounds of halibut on board, which enabled the photographer to secure a series of views showing the expeditious method of transferring the fish from the boat to the cars for Eastern shipment.

Separating Postage Stamps

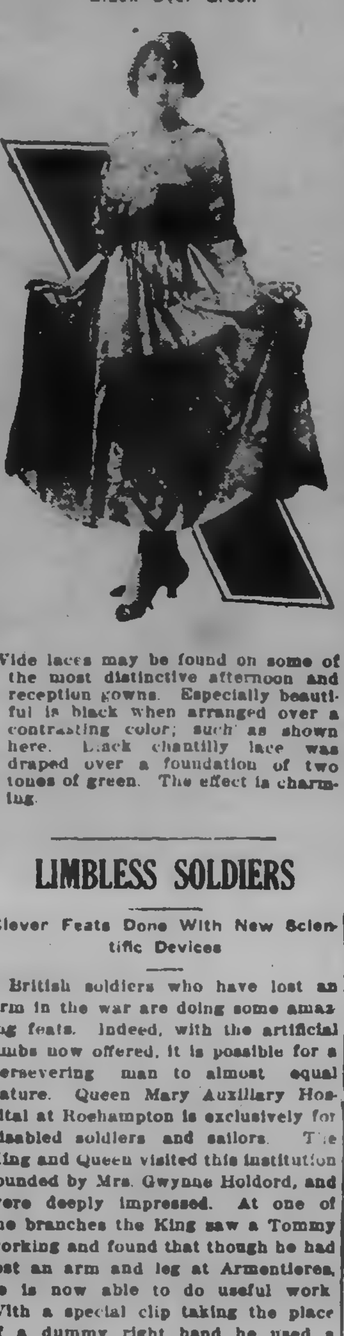
In damp weather, or by careless placing, postage stamps sometimes stick together. When this happens, place them on a newspaper in a hot oven for a few moments. As soon as the stamps get hot the glue dies and by pressing between the finger it is readily broken and the stamps may be easily separated without the least damage.

Aviator's Altar

An altar has been erected on the flying field at Hendon made entirely of parts of broken aeroplanes. It was built by the fliers themselves and stands in a little sanctuary in the Church of England recreation hut.

FASHION HINTS

Black Over Green



Wide laces may be found on some of the most distinctive afternoon and reception gowns. Especially beautiful is black when arranged over a contrasting color; such as shown here. Black chantilly lace was draped over a foundation of two tones of green. The effect is charming.

LIMBLESS SOLDIERS

Clever Feats Done With New Scientific Devices

British soldiers who have lost an arm in the war are doing some amazing feats. Indeed, with the artificial limbs now offered, it is possible for a persevering man to almost equal nature. Queen Mary Auxiliary Hospital at Roehampton is exclusively for disabled soldiers and sailors. The King and Queen visited this institution founded by Mrs. Gwynne Holdord, and were deeply impressed. At one of the branches the King saw a Tommy working and found that though he had lost an arm and leg at Armentieres, he is now able to do useful work. With a special clip taking the place of a dummy right hand he used a variety of tools under the King's inspection, and afterward took a match from a box and lighted it with dexterity and ease.

"Can you shake hands?" asked the Queen of an armless private of the First West Ontario Regiment. "Try me, your majesty," promptly replied the Canadian. The Queen shook hands with him, laughing merrily at the convincing grip of the artificial hand.

Professor Laverau showed the French Academy of Science a remarkable substitute for a missing arm invented by Professor Aurar. The arm hand and fingers are of aluminum and very light. With a glove on it is almost impossible to perceive the limb is artificial. Certain movements of the thorax acting on fine steel wires give to the hand and arm almost all the movements of the natural limb. Mutilated soldiers equipped with this device played the violin, made cigarettes and gave out change for a banknote before the Academy.

A pupil of the London School of Art went out to the front early in the war and lost the use of his right hand. He has now taught himself to draw with his left hand and his work is considered as good as he ever did with his right.

FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

Nova Scotia Government Proposes Many Practical Measures

The Murray Government of Nova Scotia announced that free vocational training will be given disabled soldiers at the Nova Scotia Technical College, and expert training in farming to physically fit soldiers at the Nova Scotia Agricultural College. When the soldier is ready to purchase a farm eighty per cent. of the value of the farm may be loaned him, if necessary, for the purchase of property, stock, and implements. The soldier will have the expert guidance of a skilled farm inspector in purchasing, surveying, and cultivating his farm. Farmers' co-operative societies will be developed. These organizations will enable all farmers to purchase their seeds, fertilizer, implements, and feeds at the lowest wholesale prices; also to transport and sell their products co-operatively without recourse to middlemen.

Rugby Player-officers

Jack Maynard, twice captain of Toronto University rugby teams; Jack Lash and Alex. Snively, who also figured on champion rugby teams at Varsity, were officers in the 82nd Battalion (Highlanders), who left Toronto. On the final medical inspection of their battalion only two were declared unfit for overseas.

CHEESE FOR BREAKFAST

Used With Cereals It Makes Appetizing and Healthful Dish

Breakfast foods are not such cheap fare after all when you begin to count the cost of sugar and cream usually served with them. But expert cooks have found a substitute for the sugar and cream and it's nothing less substantial and inexpensive than cheese. This is what one chef has to say about it:

Cheese combined with cereal foods makes a rational dish as regards the proportion of nutrients it supplies. Cheese and some of the crisp "ready to serve" cereal breakfast foods is a combination which is common, the cheese being melted with the cereal food, or simply served with it.

There are many who relish a piece of cheese with the cooked cereal so commonly eaten for breakfast and find such a combination satisfying to appetite and taste. Oatmeal or some other home-cooked breakfast cereal prepared with cheese is palatable, and such dishes have an advantage in that they may be served without cream and sugar. Since such a dish contains considerably more protein than the breakfast cereals as ordinarily served, it has a further advantage in that it may well serve as the principal item of a breakfast menu, instead of a preliminary to other courses. Such a combination as cereals and tea, coffee, or chocolate, makes a palatable as well as nutritious breakfast and one which does not require much work to prepare and to clear away.

A recipe for preparing oatmeal with cheese follows: Wheat breakfast foods, either parched or unparched, corn meal, and hominy may be prepared in the same way.

Oatmeal With Cheese

Two cupfuls of oatmeal, one cupful of grated cheese, one tablespoonful of butter, one level teaspoonful of salt.

Cook the oatmeal as usual. Shortly before serving, stir in the butter and add the cheese, and stir until the cheese is melted and thoroughly blended with the cereal.

The cheese should be mild in flavor and soft in texture. The proportion of cheese used may be increased if a more pronounced cheese flavor is desired.

BEAUTY ON THE STAGE

Not Even Skin Deep at Times, But Only Paint Deep

"Several actresses are said to scorn the aid of make-up on the stage, but you may take it from me that if they did their audiences would be disappointed with their beauty," said a prominent lady of the limelight to an interviewer. "Natural beauty is nothing on the stage without make-up, and even the most attractive face becomes blank and meaningless.

"Now, my nose is somewhat small for the size of my face, and every night, before going on the stage, I make it appear a little larger by drawing a line of white down the centre, carefully blending it into the general tone of my complexion. It is impossible for this line to be detected from the auditorium, but the light striking upon it brings it into prominence, and makes the nose look larger.

"Every actress has generally to touch up her eyes for stage work, owing to the strange effect of the lights. When the eyes are deep set in the face—that is, dish-shaped—they have to be made-up very effectively, otherwise the lights will increase the defects a thousandfold, and a pair of 'lovely black eyes' would face the audience."

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

Cleansing with mustard is said to remove the smell of fish from pots.

If a knife is placed under a tumbler or glass dish, boiling milk or water can be put in without breaking the glass.

Rusty looking silk can be made clean and new looking, if sponged with the water in which potatoes have been boiled.

When boiling eggs, wet the shells thoroughly in cold water before dropping in the boiling water, and they will not crack.

After washing lamp chimneys, try polishing them with dry salt. This gives the glass a brilliant shine and prevents it from cracking.

Fat or suet will keep sweet for a much longer time if separated from the skin, finely shredded and mixed with flour. Keep in a dry, cool place.

A good way of stiffening the bristles of hair brushes after washing is to dip them into a mixture of equal quantities of milk and water, and then dry before the fire.

To remove fruit stains from table cloths and serviettes, apply powdered starch to the stained parts, and leave for several hours till all the discoloration has been absorbed by the starch.

Always put scrubbing brushes to dry with the bristles face downwards. This lengthens their lives considerably, as if dried the other way the water naturally soaks into the wood and rots the bristles.

To remove paper labels from old bottles easily, wet the face of the label with water and hold it for an instant over any convenient flame. The steam formed penetrates the label at once and softens the paste.

Testing an Egg

To ascertain the freshness of an egg without breaking, hold it before a strong light and look directly through the shell. If the yolk appears round, and the white surrounding it clear, the chances are that the egg is fresh. Or drop it into water; if the egg sinks quickly and remains at the bottom it is in all probability fresh, but if it stands on end it is doubtful and quite bad if it floats. The shell of a fresh egg looks dull, while that of a stale one is glossy.

Hurrah!

Here's relief from thirst; here's fresh vigour for the boys at the Front and workers at home!

ALLIED SUCCESS IN WEST AND EAST

BRITISH SUCCESSFUL ON SOMME AND FRENCH WIN ON THE MEUSE

All Objectives Gained By the British and 350 Prisoners Are Taken.

LONDON, Jan. 28. — Last night's official says: "We carried out a successful operation on the Somme front early this morning in the neighborhood of Letransley, and all objectives attacked were gained. A commanding portion of the enemy's position was captured. We took 350 prisoners, including six officers. Vigorous counter-attacks were made, but all were repulsed."

SURPRISE ATTACK.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—An official statement this afternoon says: "A surprise attack by the French on the right bank of the River Meuse between Les Eparges and Calonne trench was successfully carried out yesterday afternoon. Numerous dead and a large amount of booty were found in Teuton trenches."

Laurentic Sunk

LONDON, Jan. 29—The auxiliary cruiser Laurentic, formerly of the Canadian route, was sunk off the Irish coast on Thursday.

Trenches Regained

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The British recaptured Turkish trenches on Friday, inflicting exceptionally heavy losses.

LONDON, Jan. 29.— A German submarine has foundered off the Norwegian coast. The crew landed.

ST. ANDREWS S.S. HAD GOOD YEAR

J. A. McKONE SUCCEEDS MR. GILMAN AS SUPERINTENDENT.

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Sunday School was held on Thursday evening, the superintendent. G. W. Gilman, presiding. The secretary's report showed the different departments to be in a flourishing condition, the school having had a most successful year, spiritually and financially.

At an earlier meeting Mr. Gilman had tendered his resignation, which was reluctantly accepted. A committee had been appointed to secure new officers for the coming year, which were approved by the meeting. The report showed a total enrollment of 290; highest attendance for the year 207; average attendance, 161. The finances were in good shape.

The following is a list of officers for 1917:—

Superintendent—Mr. J. A. McKone
Assist. Supt.—Mr. A. McNab
Secretary—Mr E. Walton
Assist. Secty.—Mr G. McClelland.
Treasurer—Mr. W. Latimer
Supt. crade roll—Miss R. Langford.
Supt. Beginners' Dept.—Miss B. Read
Supt. Primary Dept.— Mrs. Geo. Laing.
Supt. Junior Dept.—John Hill.
Supt. Sen. Dept.—J. John
Librarian—T. H. Sills
Assistant Librarian—W. Bletcher
Electricians — G. Henry and G. Hill
Pianist—H. C. Treneer
Assistant Pianists—Misses McLaren and M. Rae.
Chorister—H. C. Treneer.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss D. Langford
Asst Cor. Secty.—Miss Esplen

After the meeting a social hour was spent, refreshments being served. These were furnished by Mr. Gilman and the choir took part on his invitation.

The Sunday School owes a great deal to the untiring efforts of the retiring superintendent, Mr. Gilman, who has done splendid work during his years in office.

CUPID EMPLOYS BULLETS

PTE. CHAS. LASHBROOKE

Pte. Chas. Lashbrooke, who is officially rported wounded in both legs by gunshot, went overseas from Peterborough with the 59th Battalion, and shortly after reaching England was given leave to attend to the very important ceremony of leading to the altar a young lady in his home town. His leave called for the regulation holiday, but half an hour after being married Pte. Lashbrooke received orders to rport to his battalion, which had received hurried orders to leave for France.

His wounds will bring him to England and his young bride for the first time since he went to the trenches

RESIGNS APPOINTMENT TO ENLIST WITH HEAVY BATTERY OF COBOURG.

Lieut. J. A. Detlor of the 247th Batt., who has been stationed at Bancroft, has given up his commission and enlisted as a gunner with the Cobourg Heavy Battery. Last week Lieut. E. J. Leishman, of the 255th Batt., did likewise in order to get overseas quickly and with a good lot of men. The seventh overseas draft is rapidly filling up with the usual fine personnel. The sixth draft, which includes several Peterborough men, is still at Cobourg awaiting instructions to proceed over-seas. Anyone interested in heavy and siege artillery can get full particulars by applying to Major J. McKinnon, Officer Commanding, Cobourg, Ont.

WORK PLANNED BY ALLIANCE

F. S. SPENCE DELIVERS A TEMPERANCE ADDRESS AT ST. ANDREW'S.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell preached Sunday morning at St. Andrew's Church to the members of the 247th Batt., who paraded to divine worship for the second time since the work of forming the battalion began. The preacher took as his text the tenth verse of the third chapter of Luke: "And the people asked him, saying, What shall we do then." Practical suggestions were given as to the essential qualities for a successful and useful life. Of these qualities the greatest was self-sacrifice, of which the men in khaki were striking examples.

Mr. F. S. Spence of the Dominion Alliance, preached in the same church in the evening on behalf of the organiation, in which he reviewed the work accomplished to date and outlined the aims of the future. The temperance campaign is to be continued until Quebec is under prohibition and the manufacture of liquors in Canada is forbidden by Federal statute. Contributions were received from the congregation to carry on this work.

FINE OF $10.

Harry Pergau, of Brownton, got three bottles of Holland gin from Montreal on Saturday noon and at once started in to see how much of it he could consume. Yesterday afternoon he was arrested for being drunk and this morning was fined $10 and $3.76 costs by Police Magistrate Dumble.

It was with great reluctance that the court could believe that one man had a capacity sufficiently great to get away with over two quarts of gin in 24 hours. When assured by the defendant that such was the case the magistrate remarked: "It's time you were locked up if you did."

HUNS NO MORE JOYOUS

Cheering and Writing of Early Days Replaced by Gloom

A neutral, after spending almost a year in Hunland, has this to say of the German situation: Never, so far as I can gather, in the world's history was there so complete a machine for the suppression of individual opinion as the German police. At the beginning of the war, when all seemed to be going well, there was no disunity in Germany. There was practically no censorship of the newspapers; the police were tolerant; every German smiled upon every other German; soldiers went forth singing, and their trains were gaily decorated with oak leaves; Social Democracy praised militarism.

Endless weary months of war have changed all that, and the Mecklenburgers and the other hosts who went singing on their way in the belief that they would be home in six weeks, loaded with loot as in 1870, have left behind homes many of them bereaved by the immense casualties, and all of them suffering from the increasing food shortage.

I have been too often to the war to prophesy. I have read too much of Prussian history to believe in the sudden collapse theory, but through the Dutch and other neutral press I watch with increased interest and keenness the effect of the coming times on the already gloomy spirits of the German peoples.

I warn the allied governments that from information that has reached me since I have been in England they will find more and more difficulty in getting news out of Germany. The German press will give less and less indication of what is going on underneath, but the very silence of the press will be proof of the pressure now exercised by Great Britain, her army and fleet, and those of France, Russia and Italy.

WOMEN OF BRITTANY

Working as Laborers and Mechanics to Support the Home

"I shall never forget my visit to a farm in Brittany run by women," says a Danish woman. "I arrived there in the midst of harvest time. There were very few men, merely a few old ones to whom were given the easiest jobs. Women mowed the grain. No mowing machines, self-binders, or combined harvesters for them, not even horses to bring the crop into the barns. Every heavy golden sheaf was carried home on the shoulders of women or children.

"I have met a young wife, still in her teens, whose husband fought in the inferno at Verdun, the chatelaine of a beautiful chateau and bearer of a name famous in the history of France, working in the fields at the side of her servant girl harvesting the grain of her broad acres. In the chief town of Morbihan I have seen women mechanics of all kinds from blacksmiths to bricklayers. I watched one of these latter carrying on her well poised head a load of mortar, watched her building a wall with the hand of an expert, using her trowel with inimitable grace."

COMMISSIONER RICHARDS CONDUCTED Y.P. MEETINGS

COMMISSIONER RICHARDS

Successful Councils Held in Foresters Hall.

The young people's councils, held under the auspices of the Salvation Army yesterday, conducted by Commissioner Richards, Col. McMillan and other staff officers in the Foresters' Hall, proved to be a great success.

The first session commenced at 10:30. Col. McMillan opened the meeting and Commissioner Richards followed with an address to the young people. During the service a male quartette from Toronto sang, and the morning session was brought to a close at 12:45. Dinner for all was provided in the dining-hall.

The afternoon session at 2:45 was of a varied character, with lots of singing, led by the chief secretary, Col. McMillan. After the Commissioner had given his afternoon address, Brig. Morris, field secretary, spoke, as did also Brigs. Bettridge and Morehen and Capt. Spooner, territorial organizer of the life-saving scouts, all giving good and sound advice to be upright men and women.

Supper was served at 5 o'clock and the last session at 6:30 was the best of the day, the Commissioner taking for his topic "The Hands of Christ." and pointing out the different ways and times His hands were a help to all young people.

Col. McMillan led the prayer meeting, after which officers from Montreal, Kingston, Port Hope and Cobourg gave expression to the blessing and help they had received from the meetings. Adjt. McElhiney was called, and expressed his thanks to the officers, also to the Commissioner.

After the meeting in the Foresters' Hall, a musical program was given, conducted by Capt. Beer, late bandmaster of the Temple Band, now staff bandmaster in Toronto. The band and songsters contributed selections, assisted by the male quartette of the staff band in Toronto. Mrs. Brigadier Morehen brought the meeting to a close by pronouncing the benediction.

Major and Mrs. Jennings conducted the meetings at the Temple all day.

The Citizens' Welcome

Saturday night at the S.A. Temple a good crowd assembled to welcome Col. McMillan. Brigadier Morehen led the proceedings, introducing Ald. Duncan, chairman of the reception committee of the City Council, who presented the colonel with an address of welcome on behalf of the citizens. Ald. Taylor and Langford accompanied Ald. Duncan. Col. McMillan suitably replied. A number of visiting officers and soldiers were welcomed and all went home happy and satisfied.

During the day there were 96 conversions, and the Commissioner was very much pleased, as also was his staff. Brig. Bettridge and Capt. Spooner are staying over in the interest of the Scouts and Guards movement and further developments in connection with the young people's work.

Tonight at the S.A. Temple Brig. Bettridge and Capt. Spooner meet the young people from 7 to 8 and a repetition of the program and sham fight of last Thursday night is being put on by request, to which all are cordially invited. The junior band and the bugle band will be in attendance

Women in the War

The women of England have done wonders—500,000 directly engaged in the making of munitions; 600,000 more in work directly connected with the war, not including women on street cars and as porters, etc., filling the places formerly occupied by men. As Esther did for her nation. What the men of Persia could not do. So Great Britain could never have conducted this great war so successfully but for the assistance the women of Britain have given. It has not made them unwomanly and under ordinary circumstances no one likes to see women show a masculine spirit, nor usurp masculine duties. But when necessity demands it, they set most gracefully upon her. And so would the exercise of the franchise. Our Canadian women have done better than our men; they have shown a loyalty and devotion, a single aim for the Empire. Our men have been playing politics in shameful manner during this great struggle. If necessity were to arise in Canada, our women would take the places of our men in shops and factories and street cars, in banks and farms, and let men go to the battle line Our women would rise to the situation the same as their English sisters.

Two classes will emerge from this war never to take the places they once held in the state. The working man feels today that he is as important to the welfare and safety of the State as kings, nobles and military chiefs. And our women, who have been so heroic in giving brothers and husbands and sons in defence of the Empire, and giving their time or energy to comforts for soldiers, will never be satisfied to be classed again with infants, imbeciles and aliens.

Like the women of Sparta, they can say, "We are brave men's mothers and brave men's wives. We are ready to do and to dare. We are ready to man your walls with our lives and string your bows with our hair"

In conclusion Mr. Wilson said: We must give them their rightful place, for their contention is for "home and native land."

MILITIA ACT IN THREE MONTHS

MAJ. CAMPBELL CONVINCED END OF VOLUNTARY SYSTEM IS NEAR.

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—"I am convinced we are nearing the end of the voluntary system, and within three months' time we will have to resort to the Militia Act."

Major G. J. Campbell, chief recruiting officer for the third division, summarized the recruiting situation with the above pronouncement. He added that if the 500,000 men promised by the Government were to be secured, organization and co-operation among business men, and particularly among women could not be too strongly urged.

RUSSIANS BREAK THROUGH LINES ON TWO MILE FRONT

Took Prisoners and Booty on Frontier of Moldavia.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 28. — An official statement today says Russian forces assumed the offensive on the Moldavian frontier yesterday and broke through Austro-German lines on a front of two miles. The number of prisoners and the amount of booty taken is not yet known.

BERLIN ADMITS IT.

BERLIN, Jan. 28. — An official statement says the French forces yesterday succeeded in occupying a small section of advanced lines in the region north of the River Somme.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—Austro-German forces were compelled to withdraw their lines in the sector of the Golden-Bystritza River front in Roumania yesterday.

256th RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION O.S. BATTALION

AGE LIMIT IS FORTY-EIGHT YEARS—RATES OF PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

The 256th Railway Construction Battalion (Toronto unit, with Lieut.-Col. W. A. McConnell in command) is recruiting throughout Ontario, and and man, skilled or unskilled, who can do a day's work and pass the physical standard for recruits (which standard has been considerably lowered for this unit) will be accepted. The age limit for the unit is forty-eight years. Any man who cannot get a medical examination in his own locality may proceed to the nearest recruiting depot, and if he is not passed he will be allowed his railway fare and pay for time lost at the rate of $1.70 per day

If he is passed as fit, his pay commences immediately, and recruits will be given sufficient time in which to attend to their personal affairs before reporting for mobilization. The headquarters of the unit is at 24 Front street west, Toronto.

By joining this unit you will help in a very important way to bring victory to our cause. It is upon such battalions as the 256th that the men in the fighting trenches depend for their supplies, food and ammunition, and without which they are helpless in front of the enemy; and also are unable to send back promptly their wounded for medical attention unless backed up by units like ours.

Pay and Allowances.

Following are the rates of pay and allowances in this unit:

The pay and allowance on enlistment amount to $1.15 per day; average per month $33.

Clothing, rations and quarters, estimated, per month, $30.

Separation allowance, if married or only support of a household, per month, $20.

Total, $63 per month.

If promoted to the rank of sergeant:

Pay and allowance, $1.50 per day, average per month, $45.

Clothing, rations and quarters, estimated, per month, $30.

Separation allowance, if married, or only support of a household, per month, $25.

Total, $100 per month.

The above amounts do not include the allowances made from patriotic funds, which are granted in accordance with the requirements of individual cases and which average on the basis of $12 for a family of wife and two children.

So join now and help. The battalion will go as a unit. Bring your friends and relatives with you.

T. H. CLARKSON JONES,
Captain.

SOLDIERS' LETTERS

LETTER FROM LIEUT. HUBBS.

TOURIST IN MANY PARTS OF GERMANY.

Writing to Mr. Pat Howard of Hastings, Lieut. Fred Hubbs, interned prisoner of war at Murren, Switzerland, says:—

I was exchanged as a useless crock on Dec. 13 at Constance. I passed a commissior at Beschofseverda, in Saxony, on Nov. 2, and came to Constance which is on Lake Constance, just on the Swiss border, on Nov. 15, remaining there until I came over. Of course I had a whale of a trip.

At Berne we sat down to a square meal (there were 20 officers and 450 men). I carved a real ham for the first time in many moons. The lid was off, and we rolled at it. Gradually we got back into our train, and at 5 a.m. started on for here, where we are at a hotel about the same class as the King Edward. Just opposite us across the valley is the Junfran, the Eger and Monk, the finest peaks in the Alps; really, the scenery is wonderful. I have been curling three days and expect to be able to skate soon. I had a four-day trp to Chateau D'Oex to bring in one of our boys who died there and had a beautiful trip and met a lot of my old pals, but I certainly would give an arm to be able to put my legs under my own table, and after tea drop down for an evening's curling at home. I think I have been more homesick since I came here than ever before, though I don't want any more barb wire and Germans with fixed bayonets guarding me.

I was all over Germany, up the Rhine to Stuttgart, then to Bischopeverda, through Lepes'z, Uurenburg and Dresden to the Bohemian border, then back across Saxony, Bavaria on Wittenberg to Munich when I had the pleasure of sleeping on a plank. Then a boat trip from Lindau up Lake Constance, past Fredrickshaven where the Zeppelin shed it, with most of its tail feathers pulled out where one of our aviators dropped a brick on it. So you see I have been some tourist, and all I await now is the word for home, which I expect is a year away. Give me all the news you can about doings at home, and remember me to all friends.

SENDS THANKS FOR THE SOCKS

ONE OF MANY LETTERS RECEIVED BY THE KITCHENER LEAGUE.

"A few lines to thank you very much for the socks which your league have so kindly sent to the boys of the 18th through Mr. Dunsford," says a letter to the president of the Kitchener League. "We appreciate very much the good work you and the league do to send the boys such useful gifts. We are all keeping pretty well, under the circumstances we are up against. The weather is pretty rough out here in winter, lots of rain, wind and frost, not forgetting the mud.

"Well, I will close, wishing you and the league success in all you undertake; also a happy Christmas and luck in the New Year."

Misses the Fun When he Laughs

PTE. HUNTER GODFREY IS PUTTING ON FLESH IN GERMAN PRISON CAMP.

Pte. Hunter Godfrey, of the C.M.R., in a prison camp at Kriegsge-fangenenlager, Heuberg, Germany, writes to his parents as follows:—

Dearest Mother and Father: Received your letter of Nov. 12; also one from Lottie, and the photo is fine. It does cheer me up to see you all looking so well. I wish you could see me. The boys tell me I miss all the fun when I laugh, because I close my eyes as I am so fat. We have a little work each day, not very hard. I think I am getting all my parcels. You can thank all the rest of the people for me. I guess we will have a good time at Christmas. We have a piano in our camp and all we lack is the girls. I think we will be home before long, so cheer up, times are bad but could be a whole lot worse. We have heard all kinds of good news this last week, and you must not worry as we are treated fine. Of course we all long to be home. Don't believe any bad news you may hear about us. Will close this time, hoping this letter will find you all well as it leaves me. "Jake."

Nearly "Knocked His Block off"

OFFICER WAS TAKING PROMENADE IN NO MAN'S LAND.

Lieut. Andrew McA'Nulty, Ottawa, who went overseas with a battery of artillery and was recently reported wounded, has written a friend from the Rutland Hospital for Officers, London, saying an aerial torpedo nearly "knocked his block off." He tells of a narrow escape. The letter follows:

"I take pleasure in informing you that an aerial torpedo nearly knocked my block off while out taking my morning promenade in 'No Man's Land.' I was in a mine crater from which a sap ran back from our own front line. Naturally after receiving a nasty rap like that I would have nothing to do with those wretched fellows, the Huns. They're really worse than North American savages and actually tried to scalp me alive.

"They got all of my cap, most of my hair and scalp, scraped the skull gently, shoved a piece of shell under my eyebrow, which grazed the eyeball and came out of my forehead near the hair. They also ruptured my left eardrum and burned some of the skin of my face—but otherwise did me no harm at all. Since then I have been in two dressing stations, three hospitals, three ambulance trains, one hospital ship, four motor ambulances, and stretchers galore. And here I end up in quite the finest hospital in London. It is part of the Duchess's residence, where, in addition to the Red Cross nurses, I am attended by voluntary nurses from the 'uppah circles,' who are even more charming in manner than they are accomplished in nursing.

"As the hospital is part of the ducal town residence, it is limited to 12 cots, and really everything is supplied that the heart could desire, including the most magnificent flowers. Outside motors await the convalescents' pleasure, and with youth and beauty attending, you may be sure that being wounded is not all misery for your detached and thatchless friend."

PRESENTATION TO ORGANIST AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF LAKEVALE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The annual meeting of the Lakeval Church at Fowler's Corners was held in the church on Wednesday last, with the pastor, Rev. J. Crow in the chair.

Secretary R. J. Tully's report of the year's business was very satisfactory.

After the reading of the different reports and the election of officers, the organist, Mrs. Fowler, was presented with a handsome mesh bag and purse of gold. Little Marguerite Deyell made the presentation, while Mrs. E. Archer read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Fowler:— We, your friendss and co-workers in Lakevale Church, take much pleasure at this opportunity of expressing to you our grateful thanks for your faithful service with our choir. We feel you have never grudged time or effort in making the music of our church services helpful and enjoyable. Though pressed by home duties many times, you have always been a very willing helper, and we are pleased to acknowledge to you how much we have appreciated your faithful endeavors to add to the beauty and helpfulness of the services of our church. We ask you to accept this purse as a token of our appreciation and hope you may be long enabled to continue in your place as organist of the church. Wishing you a bright and happy New Year. (Signed on behalf of the church) Edward Archer, George Deyell, George Moncrief.

Mrs. Fowler, though very much surprised, replied, briefly thanking her many friends. Refreshments were served and a social hour spent. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem and prayer.

BRAINS VERSUS DRESS

Educated Women Should Dress Well, Even On Little

Dr. Elizabeth S. Chesser writes: It requires brains to dress well on little. It means the exercise of caution and judgment to avoid fashion's pitfalls in the shape of passing atrocities, to chose what is at once suitable, becoming and according to the mode. There was a time when English women were popularly supposed to be devoid of taste in the adornment of their own persons. They were compared unfavorably with French women and Americans.

Arrayed in severe tailor-mades, flat of feet and broad of waist, they were to be met careering over the country intent upon improving their minds. It is an excellent thing for women to improve their minds if they attend to their coiffures and clothes into the bargain. Unfortunately, three women out of four seem incapable of paying equal attention to the inside and the outside of their heads at the same time.

But we are improving in this respect also. Women—even intellectual women—are not nearly so badly dressed as they were years ago. We are beginning to realize that a nice taste in science or philosophy is quite compatible with elegance—that it is possible to love books and chiffons at one and the same time. The wonder is, that with so many women who have to dress on a small allowance, there are so few who can even turn out a blouse with their own hands. Many women train as typists and teachers and inspectors, but few make any effort to qualify themselves to be wives of poor men. A knowledge of dressmaking and cooking are the main essentials. The woman who knows how to make her frocks can indulge in her love of chiffons with an easy conscience.

TO REMOVE MILDEW

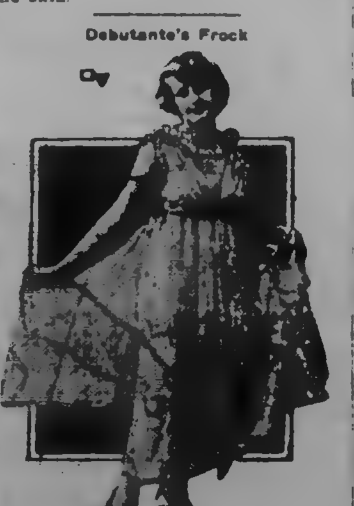
How to Restore Clothes That Seem Ruined

A woman generally takes the utmost care when she wears a linen blouse. She will guard it zealously against every spot or stain. Then, one day, she will find that despite her care while wearing it, the blouse has acquired several ugly mildew spots. To remove them, try boiling the blouse in sour milk and hang it in the sun to dry, after which proceed to wash and boil in the ordinary manner. Or try rubbing the spots with a piece of green tomato, and leave the garment in the air for twenty-four hours. A third method is to mix soap with powdered starch, salt and lemon juice. Apply this mixture to both sides of the article and lay it on the grass until the stain disappears.

Powdering the Baby

There are diverse opinions about powdering baby after the bath. If the baby is dried perfectly this should not be necessary in cool weather, but it is not easy to dry a baby absolutely. It is therefore well, after drying a child, to powder it well. The powder should be of the simplest kind; the purer it is, the healthier it will keep the skin.

Debutante's Frock



An extremely simple dance frock is shown, suitable for the debutante, the drop being a simple circular affair corded at the bottom. The double tunic and its pointed bottom finish with a narrow metal footing. The bodice is very simple, the tulle veiling having a band of metal brocade.

IN MODERN NURSERY

Children do Not Now Learn to Centrate the Mind

The trend in many nurseries and school rooms nowadays is against the formation of habits of attention. The restlessness and speed of life make for this state of things anyhow and spread to our children. A multitude of toys, one discarded for another when it has been little more than looked at; books read in cursory fashion, one succeeded by another too quickly for thought; a rush of lessons, games, excursions, motor rides—all these make the faculty of attention more and more difficult to arouse and maintain.

Of course, we cannot go against the trend of our age; but we can bear its tendencies, both good and bad, in mind and endeavor by example and personal service to counterbalance what is bad among a great deal that is good. We can talk, for instance, to our boys and girls of the books they read, encouraging them without knowing it to fix their attention upon them. We can, while they are quite small, devise games which will promote attention, instead of aiding and abetting them by playing first one thing and then another, flitting from piano to cards and cards to toys in that hour or so we devote to the children, as the will-o'-the-wisp mood of the moment dictates.

To Prevent Wrinkles

Unless constant care is used during the winter almost invisible little wrinkles will appear, to grow and deepen until difficult to remove. This is because the skin is less oily in winter, the pores are not opened by perspiration and the winds have a drying effect. After the application of cold water to the face in the morning, rub in a small quantity of cold cream with a rotary upward motion. At night after bathing the face with hot water, rub in a generous amount.

Halibut Rabbit

Melt 1 teaspoonful butter, add a few drops of onion juice and 1 tablespoon cornstarch mixed with ¼ teaspoon paprika, then pour on gradually 1 cup milk, add ⅝ cup of soft cheese, cut fine, and 1 cup cold, flaked, cooked halibut. When cheese is melted, add 1 egg, slightly beaten, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Serve on crackers.

Fried Carrots

Grate enough carrots to make one cup, add a beaten egg, half a cup of milk and flour enough to make a batter which will run off a spoon. To this add half a teaspoon of baking powder. Grease a frying pan and fry in small flat cakes.

How to Stuff Dishes

In stuffing poultry, fish or cuts of meat, avoid pressing the filling tightly. There must be room for the stuffing to swell, and beside this you want it to absorb the juices of the cooking meat, and this it cannot do if pressed in hard and tight.

The First Typewriter

The typewriter is not such a modern invention as is popularly supposed. Two hundred years ago Henry Mill patented in London a writing machine but it was so clumsy as to be practically useless.

Nothing more in the same line seems to have been done until 1829, says The London Chronicle, when the first American typewriter was patented; it was christened "the typographer." Four years later France tried its hand in this direction, while between 1840 and 1860 Sir Charles Wheatstone invented several writing machines.

It was not, however, until 1873 that the typewriter became a commercial proposition. This was invented by an American, C. L. Scholes, who interested E. Remington & Son, a firm of gun manufacturers, in it, and in 1874 it was put upon the market.

Vertical Mower For Tangled Grasses

A machine which mows both vertically and horizontally has been invented by an Oregon man. It has been used with good success in heavy clover and vetch which were badly lodged and tangled, and which usually require one or more men to clear the divider on the outer end of the swath. The vertical cutting bar is a little more than two feet high. Connections between it and the horizontal cutter bar actuate the cutting blades. These connections consist of rods and cranks operated by the movable cutter bar of the horizontal mower.

Keeps Feet Off Radiator

A bracket to be fastened to a steam or hot water radiator to enable a person to warm his feet has been patented by its inventor.

HABITS OF SEAGULLS

NOT EASILY "GULLED" THOUGH THE NAME IMPLIES SAME.

The name Gull is a misnomer for no bird is less gullible, and few combine such interest, grace and sagacity. Gulls possess marvellous powers of flight and are indeed the living model of the mondern monoplane. The German aviators called their machines taube (meaning pigeon), but it is not the pigeon but the gull they imitated. The relative size of wing and body, the gliding motion, is exclusively that of the gull.

Scientists can only partly explain their flight where in the strongest gale, they glide against the wind with never a perceptible movement of their outstretched wings. As the kite is kept up by wind pressure, so it must be with the gull, a slight upward movement of the wings causes it to rise. This is followed by a long gradual slant downwards, in which it gathers momentum for soaring heavenward again. Many species are represented under this general term, varying much in color, size, and habits. One species, the Skua, in habits partakes more of the nature of the hawks, he is a genuine plunderer, a pirate in fact, living solely on the hard gotten gains of others.

The Skuas are exclusively seabirds, never leaving the ocean as other gulls do in search of food. The ordinary gull is, however, very tame and becomes fearless of man when not molested. In London, the largest city in the world, the gull is quite at home. At any of the bridges over the Thames or in the parks near the river a flock of gulls can be collected in a few minutes by throwing bread into the water. At London Bridge one of the busiest thoroughfares, the gulls delight many a crowd, and bring a touch of brightness into lives, lived amidst the murk and gloom of winter fogs. Poised on the wing about the parapet, they are adepts at catching the food thrown them, while some of the tamer ones will snatch a morsel from the hand.

CARE OF HARNESS

Neat's Foot Oil Best Leather Protector

Leather goods of any kind are expensive. You can greatly prolong the life and usefulness of such goods by proper care in keeping them free of mud and by frequent oiling. Mud is more destructive to leather than moderate wear; water is even more destructive. Therefore, one of the main things to be observed in the care of harness is to keep it clean and the pores filled with the proper ingredients to increase the pliableness, and at the same time render the leather impervious to water. Any leather which freely takes in water soon becomes brittle, and its usefulness is thereby greatly impaired. Before oiling harness unbuckle every strap and wash it clean with warm, soft water, in which there is a little castile soap, using a sponge or cloth, and when it is nearly dry apply the oil. Vegetable oils, with the exception of castor oil, being hardening in their effect, should not be applied to harness. Neat's foot oil is considered one of the very best leather protectors that can be used. It is necessary that the leather be slightly dampened before applying the oil so that it will penetrate. One quart of neat'sfoot oil, four ounces of beef tallow and three tablespoonfuls of lampblack make an excellent dressing for harness.

MASSAGE YOUR EARS

Pinkness Means Good Circulation—Making Them Shell-like

A woman journalist writes: "Why do you want to write about beautifying the ears?" queried a friend. "Why, hardly anyone shows her ears any more—it's almost immodest to let them out for public gaze. Besides, who wants beautiful ears. If you have them all right; if you haven't you drape your hair over them and forget them. The day of the heroine with the shell-like ear has passed, along with the gallant who whispered sweet nothings into them and wrote bad poetry about them."

I smiled at her remarks. As a matter of fact, there is little one can do to beautify the ears, except to keep them clean. If their shape is bad, one can, as my friend remarked, drape them over with hair and forget them.

However, a little massage is beneficial. And massaging the ears will often relieve a headache. Make the strokes downward behind the ear, and upward into the hair, pressing hard, then gently massage the inner parts of the ears themselves. This brings blood into them, and incidentally into the brain, making the head feel better, and giving the shell-like tints our old novels used to emphasize. When the ears are pink the blood is circulating properly through the head, when they are white the blood has not been heating through the veins as it should.

All massage movements should press the ears against the head, not away from it. Special care should be taken of children's ears, for boys and girls with great ears standing away from their heads are objects of pity, and often, alas! of ridicule. The ears should be washed as often as the face, and the loose wax kept washed off.

SOME HEART BEATS

To live long and well, save your heart by conserving your heart beats. This may be done by avoiding extreme emotion and violent physical exertion and by sleeping long hours. The human heart beats from seventy to 150 times a minute, and each beat means work equivalent to raising a 2-pound weight 1 foot. If this does not seem like work, try to lift a 2-pound weight seventy to 150 times a minute.

Anything that quickens the heart's action increases its labor. Accurate tests have shown that a man riding a bicycle up a 10 per cent. grade for 2,904 feet in four minutes adds an amount of labor to his heart that would lift a ton and an eighth 1 foot.

Violent physical exertion of any kind quickens the heart beats. Strong emotion has the same effect. Intense anger may increase the heart's labor from 150 pounds per minute to 225 pounds. Under such a strain the heart of an animal has been known to literally break, causing almost instant death. According to a heart specialist, he who retires to bed at ten instead of twelve saves the heart 876,000 foot-pounds a year. Lying down one half-hour daily lessens its labors in the same period by 219,000 foot-pounds.

FIRST FLAG OF WORLD

Origin of the National Banners—Japan Heads List

The most ancient national flag in the world is either the dragon banner of China or the chrysanthemum flag of Japan. The former has been used from a very early period, and the latter is as old as the present dynasty in Japan, which is the oldest in the world. Amongst European national flags that of Denmark—a white St. George's cross on a red ground—is the most ancient, having been in use since 1219. No other flag has existed without change for anything like the same period as a national emblem, although there are Royal standards that are older. The Spanish national flag dates only from 1785, and the British flag, the Union Jack, was first bown in its present form after the union with Ireland in 1802. The Stars and Stripes, the national emblem of the United States, is older than the British, for it was first planned and ordered by Washington of Betsy Ross, an upholsterer of Phhiladelphia, and formally adopted on June 14, 1777.

MANITOBA'S WEALTH

Great Natural Mineral Resources in Western Province

Sir William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, said: "The untapped natural resources of Manitoba will stagger the world." When he made this statement he must have had in his mind the very rich mineral resources of the province. Some years ago rumors began to drift into Winnipeg of gold finds being made in Northern Manitoba. Then startling reports of the richness of the finds round Rice Lake district came to hand, and the publicity given to the camp caused a great deal of interest.

As an example of what can be done in the mining industry, the Porcupine district of Ontario might be cited. This camp was unknown before 1903, and in seven years it put out nearly $19,000,000.

Split Pea Soup

Put one cup of split peas into saucepan with three pints of cold water. Heat slowly. When boiling point has been reached draw away from hot fire and allow to simmer for one hour. Add one even teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of minced onion, two tablespoons of minced carrots or celery. Boil slowly one hour longer. Press all through coarse sieve. Serve hot with squares of fried bread.

Celery Cream Soup

Use all the tops and leaves and stalks of coarse celery. Wash and put into granite stewpan with just enough water to cover. If a slice of onion is at hand add it. Boil until tender. Put in colander and mash with potato masher. To every cup of the celery stock add two cups of milk, a little butter and half a teaspoon of cornstarch. Boil in double boiler for ten minutes. Serve with cheese toast.

KEEPING GROOMED

CARELESSNESS SPOILS ALL CHANCES OF BEING BEAUTIFUL.

Grooming, they say, counts for more than beauty to-day. Which is only partially true. Many a homely woman has saved her reputation for looks by appearing only when perfectly dressed—her hair beautifully coiffed, each strand just as it should be, her hat at the latest angle, her suit without a wrinkle, her gloves and boots perfect—and she has passed for a pretty woman. Beauty in out-of-date or soiled clothes has less chance than plainness well furnished.

There are few hopelessly plain women. Most are bad looking only because they're careless. It is within every woman's power to possess a good complexion, to arrange her hair to make it look thick, even if it isn't, to stand well, sit gracefully, walk easily. Don't "fall into your clothes." It's worth an extra five minutes to be sure you have fixed your blouse and fastened your skirt so they meet snugly and neatly, so your tie is well arranged and your hair done nicely.

A cheval glass is invaluable, it will show you where your dress does not hang right, will give you an impartial look at yourself from top to toe. And you should not be content with even a front view; you should take your hand mirror and revolve before the glass, studying yourself from all sides. And when you are sure you are as prettily dressed as possible, you are ready to meet your fellow-citizens, and to be sure of praise instead of criticism.

To Improve Your Health

Take an early morning walk and breathe deeply. Deep breathing is naturally an accompaniment to walking. So if you walk well you will also breathe well. In walking hold the chest high and head erect, not tipped back or inclined forward. Take a firm light stride. The body should be balanced on the hips without swaying. Keep the mouth closed and breathe through the nose.

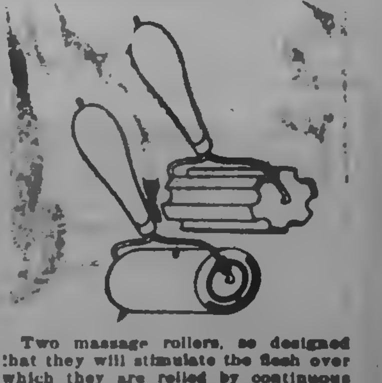
Red Apple Salad

Make apple cups of bright red apples containing a little lemon juice until time to fill them. Mix some of the apple pulp with celery, grapefruit carpels and mayonnaise dressing, and fill the apples. Garnish with red Maraschino cherries that have been drained and stuffed with blanched hazelnuts. Serve on lettuce leaves with cream cheese mixed with tomato catsup.

Lemons Keep In Water

Lemons may be kept a long time without becoming dry if put into a jar of water with a lid. Change the water once a week if the lemons are to be kept long. When used they will be found quite as firm and juicy as when fresh.

Electric Massage Rolls



Two massage rollers, so designed that they will stimulate the flesh over which they are rolled by continuous or intermittent electrical contact, have been patented. The feed wires pass through the handles of both types of rollers. One cylinder is deeply corrugated, alternate ridges being non-conducting; as it revolves over the skin it produces the intermittent electrical effect. In the other type electrical connection is controlled by the position of a thumb slide at the end of the cylinder. If it is placed in contact with a ring imbedded in the end, continuous current is supplied; if it is moved so as to be in line with a semi-circular band, parallel with the ring, contact is made during but half of each revolution of the roller.—Popular Mechanics.

Bomb Laden Camels

The London Daily Mail reports that during an engagement with the Turks in North Egypt to prevent the escape of the enemy camel supply train, some fifty camels which were already on the move with their loads were shot—with extraordinary results in several cases, for the moment they were struck they blew up sky high with terrific explosions. The unfortunate beasts had been laden with petrol and bombs.

Nicknames For "Tanks"

A ROYAL SOLDIER

Among the most popular of the Royal soldiers of Great Britain is His Serene Highness Prince Alexander Augustus Frederick William Alfred George of Teck, who was born in Kensington Palace, the third son of the late Duke of Teck and the late Princess Mary Adelaide. Prince Alexander is the brother of Queen Mary, who has always been devoted to him. He has spent more than twenty years in the army, and saw his first active service in the Matabeleland campaign in 1896. Three years later he went to South Africa to engage in the Boer war. He was present at the relief of Kimberley and took part in Lord Roberts' advance on Pretoria. In both campaigns he won mention in the dispatches, and earned the Distinguished Service Order and promotion to the rank of captain in the Seventh Hussars. Four years after the war he was transferred to the Royal Horse Guards and promoted to the rank of major. In his South African experience he had the ill fortune to arouse the animosity of some war office officials because of his rather free criticism of the food supplied to the soldiers. On one occasion it was said, the Prince and the men under him were without food for two days, and were then supplied with meat which made him violently ill. His greatest popularity is among the rank and file of soldiers and the hospital patients, and the boy scouts have exalted him to the position of a hero.

ADVANCE DESCRIBED

A French poilu writes: As we marched forward toward our goal, huge geysers of dust spouted into the air, rising behind our backs from the rows of "75s" supporting us. In front the fire curtain outlined the whole length of the enemy's line with a neatness and accuracy that struck me with wonder, as the flames burst through the pall of smoke and dust artendous. Above, all was blackness, but at its lower edge the curtain was fringed with red and green flames, masking the explosion of the shells directly over the ditch and parapet in front of us. The low lying clouds mingled with the smoke curtain, so that the whole brightness of the day was obscured. Out of the blackness fell a trickling rain of pieces of metal, lumps of earth, knapsacks, rifles, cartridges and fragments of human flesh. We went in steadily, nearer and nearer. Now we seemed very close to the wall of shells streaming from our own guns, curving just above us, and dropping into the trenches in front. The effect was terrific. I almost braced myself against the rocking of the earth, like a sailor's instinctive gait in stormy weather.

Date Muffins

Cream one-fourth cup of sugar with two tablespoons of lard, add two eggs, one at a time, and beat the mixture with beater. One cup of milk, pinch of salt. Sift two tablespoons of baking powder into two cups of flour. Stone one cup of dates and cut fine. Add dates and flour alternately, drop in muffin pans and bake in quick oven twenty-five minutes.

This is a fine breakfast food, as it combines cereal and fruit.

Cleaning White Silk

In washing white silk, great care must be taken not to use very hot water, nor must the iron used afterward be very hot, or there would be danger of the silk turning yellow. Do not rub silk while washing it, but knead it in warm, soapy water. If it is pure white silk, a very little blue may be added to the last rinsing water. Black silks should be rinsed in water to which a little weak tea has been added.

Preserving Cut Flowers

Cut flowers will remain fresh longer if the stems are cut with a sharp knife instead of a pair of scissors

Lights For Automobiles

When purchasing electric light bulbs for the automobile one should note with care the type of lamp needed. If the voltage system is high, the ordinary six-volt bulb will not prove serviceable. It will burn out very quickly. Lamps should be obtained of sufficiently high voltage to eliminate this possibility.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

ANDY WEBB DIDN'T WEAR THE HAT SO FITZGERALD FOUR WON CUP

Four stalwart curlers skipped by Percy Fitzgerald won the Mercantile Cup at the rink on Saturday night and anybody who wants to know how it happened, should ask Andy Webb. He has a good story. If the kickers' club was completely organized for the season, the chances are they would take it up. At any rate, Andy, who held the cup since last season, was challenged for the honor and as was his bounden duty, he accepted. He broke one of the rules of the game by not wearing the hat that goes with the cup.

Every vice-skip can challenge the holder of the cup for a game at any time. Each member of the challenging team has to pay 5c into a fund which at the end of the season will be given to the overseas tobacco fund to purchase smokes for the boys at the front.

The rinks and scores on Saturday night were:

O. Moore	D. Mulholland
G. Benor	W. J. Henry
W. G. Morrow	T. F. Matthews
P. D. Fitzgerald	A. H. Webb
(Skip)—15	(Skip) 11

Vice-Skip M. Tooley has issued a challenge to the winner and the game will be played this week.

Jack London's Strong View

The late Jack London, the writer, was down on Germany. Seventy millions of paranoics, he called the Germans. When he saw a bloodthirsty ruffian going fantee, "well, I got my gun," he said. "I am with the Allies life and death, by English race and philosophic conviction of righteousness of their cause," he declared. Just before his death he was arranging to come to Canada to enlist for overseas.

Today's Story

A master builder having heard that his men did not commence work at the proper time thought he would drop down about 7.30 one morning.

Going up the yard he caught sight of a joiner standing smoking, and his kit not even opened. Simply asking his name, which he found to be John Smith, he called him into the office, and, handing him four days' pay, ordered him to leave at once.

After seeing the man clear of the premises he want to the forman and explained that he had "made an example of John Smith by paying him off for not starting at the proper hour.

"Great Scott, sir," ejaculated the foreman; "that chap was only lookin' for a job!"

NOBEL TEAM HERE FRIDAY

The 247th hockey team are looking forward to the game here Friday night, when they will pit their strength against the fast Nobel team of Parry Sound.

This team has not suffered a defeat this season, and last week beat the Parry Sound intermediates by a score of 7 to 1. It was this latter team that gave the Soldiers the only defeat sufferd this year.

VANCOUVER WON.

VANCOUVER, Jan. 29.—In a Pacific Coast game Saturday night Vancouver defeated Seattle by 3 goals to 2.

LIVING BAROMETER

No Need to Buy Weather Glass—Make Use of Leech

A leech confined in a glass jar of water will prove an excellent weather prophet. If the weather is to continue fine the leech lies motionless at the bottom of the vial and rolled up together in a spiral form. If it is to rain, either before or after noon, it is found to have crept up to the top of its lodging, and there remains till the weather is settled. If we are to have wind the poor prisoner gallops through his limpid habitation with amazing swiftness, and seldom rests till it begins to blow hard. If a remarkable storm of thunder and lightning is to succeed, for some days before the leech lodges almost continually without water, and gives itself up to violent throes and convulsive-like motions. In frost, as in clear summer weather, it lies constantly at the bottom; and in snow as in rainy weather, it pitches its dwelling on the very mouth of the vial.

VERY USEFUL BRUSHES

A brush with buttons tip mounted on a curved wire handle is much better than the usual shape for cleansing thoroughly the curved bowl of the toilet. A saw shaped, triangular brush mounted on a long handle is excellent for cleansing window shades, shutters and outer flat surfaces where the dust is lodged perpendicularly. A little spot brush with a round stubby head is just the thing to take stains out of clothing, upholstery or other fabrics. A flat, one-sided brush with a row of bristles lying on the bias is helpful in cleaning the iron work of a gas range and in getting around other crevices in metal work.

Farm Sanitation

It would be difficult, writes a community builder, to make every farmer father believe that lack of sanitary equipment for his household, and neglect of his barnyard caused sickness and deaths in his family. It may be impossible to convince him that the death of his wife at an early age was a result of too much pumping, churning and washing by hand; but they are really so closely related as cause and effect that one might almost declare that only the wilfully blind will or can fail to see their relation.

For Motor Touring

Considerable hard work can be avoided on the road if the tire rims are treated occasionally with a little shellac and graphite. Aluminum paint is also good to prevent the head of the tire from rusting in the rim. It is a difficult matter to remove the casing from a rim when it has become rusted.

WAR'S KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

Bravery of Stretcher-bearers on the Battlefield

"Pass the word for stretcher-bearers" They are waiting calmly, day and night, for some such cry as this. Two or three spring up with a stretcher, bandages, and stimulants, and make for the scene of action at the double. The sharp staccato of machine gun fire is everywhere. Bullets fly through the fire like locusts over a desert. In and out of this inferno men, British and German, dash and sway and fall. The enemy is erecting a wall of death from his guns behind our infantry. It is intended to stop the arrival of ammunition, reinforcements, food—and the stretcher-bearers.

But it does not stop them. Through the wall, with an utter disregard for their own lives, the medical men rush forward, drive through the waves of bullets, and pick out their cases. The stretchers are set down. Bandages are applied to broken limbs—all under appalling fire. The wounded man is placed very gently on the stretcher, and, as coolly and carefully as if the enemy did not exist, the bearers take up their burdens, and set out for the dressing stations. Often, as they walk on, a sliver of shell, a random bullet, will kill the patient they carry. At other times a bearer will collapse, mortally hurt. Other bearers take his place and carry on as if nothing had happened. Still more often the rescuing soldier will be killed as he bandages the wounded. And sometimes a great shell will erase patient, bearers, and stretcher as a giant might erase a group of ants with his foot.

On a dark night in the midst of a desperate battle, a shell burst above a car bound for the dressing station with a cargo of patients. Bits of steel rained about the front of the machine, but did not seem to affect it. It continued steadily on its way. Only after the patients had been removed did the man sitting next the driver, in turning to comment on the close call they had received, notice his companion had collapsed over the wheel. They brought lanterns and looked him over. He was terribly wounded and nearly dead. That man was outwardly a little Cockney driver, but inside he was a splendid flower in the crown of the Knights Templar's chivalry.

ITALY'S YOUNG HERO

Twelve-year-old Italian Decorated and Promoted

All the Italian newspapers, says a Central News correspondent, publish the portrait of the most youthful hero who gained fame in the present war—a twelve-year-old lad named Matteo Piata, actually serving voluntarily as a non-commissioned officer in the Italian army. The boy obtained permission to accompany the regiment in which his father was serving in the Alpine regions. When his father was killed, the boy was often heard to declare that his death should not go unavenged.

Matteo was missed from the regiment one night and it was feared he had come to grief, but after an absence of a few hours he rejoined his comrades, wounded, but not seriously. The boy had lain in wait for an Austrian patrol, the movements of which had been reported, and had actually killed an Austrian officer and a soldier before he himself escaped, wounded.

The newspaper accounts state that the King, having personally investigated the case, decorated Matteo with the medal for bravery and authorized his promotion.

Canada's National Anthem

Calixa Lavalle, famous as being the composer of "O Canada," one of Canada's national anthems, was a brilliant but erratic musician, and left a few works for the piano, the most important being his well known etude, "Papillon," this being a showy piece of somewhat glittering character, but withal quite effective.

Protect the Horse

To allow the horse to suffer from the cold for lack of a blanket is either heartless cruelty or senseless neglect. If you are observant and humane you will take notice of the horses upon the streets during the winter and see to it that the blanket is used properly. Protect the horse!

FOR WORKERS' WELFARE

Suffering and Poverty of Women Munition Producers Prevented

There are many ways in which welfare supervision in a munitions plant where women work is invaluable. In order that we may keep in touch with our own staff without appearing to interfere with their private lives, we have under the welfare supervisor a social secretary, writes an Englishwoman. She studies the lists of women and girls absentees, and finds out if certificates of illness have been sent. If the women are living in lodgings they are visited, and in this way many cases of serious illness have been discovered, and possibly long and painful periods of suffering prevented.

This social secretary keeps in touch with the house doctor and dentist, and where necessary advises the management when a grant for some special surgical instrument or an unusually large dental bill beyond the means of the individual is necessary. This work coincides with that of a factory welfare supervisor.

What is the Difference?

When a man deserts his wife and children, leaving them without support, the world regards him with contempt.

What is the differnt between desertion and death, if the wife and children are left without support, in either case when the husband and father failed through negligence to provide for them?

The above may sound a little harsh; I guess it does; but it may not have struck you that way before, and if the husband is insurable, is there really any difference?

Answer this vital question now that your attention has been called to it, in a practical way, by writing, telephoning or calling on the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canad.a as with its Eighty Odd Millions of Assets, the largest amount held by any Canadian company, there is no safer, sounder or more generous and faithful custodian to be found to administer your wishes with regard to your wife and children.

ECONOMY AND EDDY'S MATCHES

Buying the cheapest article is often the poorest economy. We do not claim to make the cheapest matches, but we claim to give

THE MOST OF THE BEST FOR THE LEAST MONEY

Therefore, Always Everywhere, Buy
EDDY'S MATCHES

WE REGRET

Our Inability to supply the excessive demands made on us for some time past for Hard Coal.

The general shortage of Hard Coal in the City prompted us to buy Coal from the jobbers at higher prices in order to add to our usual supply, and to partially meet this excessive demand. This Coal is now coming forward daily, and we are making every provision to increase our already increased output to 50% over last season. We cannot hope to do better than this, in the face of Public School contracts, and contracts with different factories and public buildings in the City for Soft Coal.

It is incumbent upon those who have gas installed to ask for as little nut and pea coal as possible, as many houses can only use these sizes, of which there is a shortage.

Do not order beyond your requirements for February:

1st--Because it is not the fair thing to do under conditions.

2nd--The price will likely be reduced when our regular source of supply can fill our wants.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Ruth Robertson, who has been visiting friends in Toronto, has returned home.

The Canadian Kitchener League's weekly tea is becoming most popular. Even the gentlemen have learned that a good cup of tea and the best of sandwiches are served in this cozy tea room of the Oriental. The hostesses for the tea on Wednesday next will be Mrs. E. S. Maybee and Mrs. D. J. Perry.

Saturday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Richardson, Homewood avenue, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, surrounded by relatives from St. Catharines, Hamilton and Toronto, and this city, as well as a number of close friends here, they received numerous gifts, including a purse of gold from their family and relatibes. The flowers were beautiful and numerous.

A very merry party of relatives and friends sat down to dinner at 5 o'clock, and the remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in a social way. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson received many congratulations and best wishes.

Mrs. Bacon, McDonnel street, was the lucky winner of the golliwog, which was drawn for at the Progressive Club on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 24th. Mrs Bacon's ticket was No. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Cottingham, of Omemee, spent the day in the city.

In the report of the monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E., it should have been stated that the Chapter contributed 588 pairs of socks since the last meeting. Fifty pairs were sent to Secours Nationale. 126 to the Red Cross to be forwarded to the Ambulance Corps, which makes the distributions, and 126 pairs for Peterborough men in the trenches. This is a very creditable showing for the 57th Chapter.

Concert Given at Chemong Village

CHEIF D. E. WHETUNG WAS CHAIRMAN.

The tea and concert held at Chemong was one of the best ever held in the village, although the crowd was not the largest, but the program was certainly the best ever produced. Everybody who was present went home feeling considerably better and greatly satisfied with the program. Chief D. E. Whetung was chairman.

Jack Eastwood and Willie Trude gave some funny dialogues, jokes and songs. Miss Lavina Whetung took part in most of the program and certainly did her part well. Wilfrid Jacobs sang very gracefully. Bertram McCue is certainly a young wonder, as he sang very sweetly and proved himself bright and clever in every part he took in dialogue, etc. Miss Bernice Tobico also gave a splendid recitation and song.

The program was as follows:—

Opening—Brass band.
Recitation—Bertram McCue
Band music.
Song—Bertram McCue
Band music.
Dialogue—Entertaining Sister's Beau.
Band music.
Violin—Albert Crowe
Irish song—J. Eastwood
Band music.
Song—Bertram McCue
Dialogue—An Oyster Stew
Violin—W. Hickson
Dialogue—The Old Hat
Cornet selection—Dave Taylor
Recitation—Bertram McCue
Darkey Jokes—J. Eastwood and "Trude."
Song—Chinatown—Bertram McCue
Band music.
Dialogue—Mr. and Mrs. Fido
Song—Miss Burnice Tobira
Dialogue—A Minister's Mistake
Speech—Zack Knott
Song—Wilfred Jacobs
Song—Happy Hoolihan—Bertram McCue

The Chemong brass band furnished good music during the evening. This band will play in Lakefield at a carnival to be held in the skating rink on Friday, Feb. 2.

OBITUARY

SUDDEN CALL TO MRS. GEO. TAYLOR

Mellissa Jury, wife of Mr. George Taylor, 546 Charlotte St., died very suddenly yesterday morning. On Saturday she developed a slight cold and the family physician prescribed for her, and went away giving assurance that a few days would see the ailment gone. Early yesterday morning Mr. Taylor went downstairs to fix the fire, and Mrs. Taylor dressed and followed him. She sat on a chair and was seized with what appeared to be a fainting spell. The doctor was called, but death had taken place. Mr. Taylor and his family will have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community.

Mrs. Taylor was born in the township of Dummer 65 years ago and was a daughter of the late John Jury. The greater part of her life, with her husband, she lived in Otonabee, taking up residence in Peterborough a few years ago. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Stewart of Otonabee, two sons, Herbert of Otonabee and Wilbert D., of the Dominion Express Co., Ottawa.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 1.30 o'clock to Zion Cemetery, Otonabee Funeral services at one o'clock.

MRS. PETER GILLESPIE.

Jane Thompson, widow of the late Peter Gillespie, died at the homestead, lot 24, Con. 12, Otonabee, yesterday afternoon. Deceased was born near Port Hope seventy-six years ago, and had lived in Otonabee township since her marriage fifty-three years ago. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Huston, of Otonabee, Miss Julia, who lives at home, and Miss Jennie, of Peterborough. The three sons are George and John, of Otonabee, and Peter, of Ottawa.

Mrs. Gillespie held a high place in the esteem of all who knew her, and she will be specially remembered by many persons who in the hour of need always found in her a staunch friend.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery. Funeral service at 1:30 o'clock.

WILLIAM GRAHAM.

William Graham, a lifelong resident of Smith, and one of the best known farmers of the township and county, died at 1 o'clock this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Milford Northey, in Smith. He had been in failing health for some months. Deceased was a staunch Conservative and always took an interest in political and municipal matters of the township. He was predeceased by his wife.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Alfred Manning, Toronto, Mrs. Milford Northey, Smith, Mrs. Joseph Labatt, Chicago, and four sons, Messrs. Fredrick, of Smith, Roland, Toronto, Edward, Winnipeg, and George, of this city. One sister is Miss Mary Graham, of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held from the late residence on Wednesday afternoon to Ray's cemetery, Lakefield. House service at 1:30.

LOSS TO METHODISM.

At the morning service in Trinity Church Rev. J. P. Wilson referred to the death of Dr. John McDougall, who for many years was superintendent of Indian Missions in the West, and Rev. Dr. James Woodsworth, who died recently, both stalwart characters in Methodism. When Dr. Woodsworth was appointed superintendent of missions in the Northwest Rev. Mr. Wilson succeeded him at Brandon.

JOHN D. KENNEDY

John D. Kennedy died at Nicholls Hospital last Saturday aged 58 years and three months. Besides his widow he leaves three children, Mrs. Kinsman of Osoca, Miss Vera at home, and one son, Stanley, besides several brothers and sisters. The funeral will be held from the family residence, 100 1-2 Stewart St., Tuesday at 3.30 p.m. to Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. ELIZABETH WHATTAM

Eliabeth Barbara Snider Whattam died at the residence of her son, Rev. R. A. Whattam, pastor of Mark St. Methodist Church, 378 Mark St., this morning after an illness of some duration.

She was born in Prince Edward County 72 years ago and was of the old United Empire loyalist stock and her ancestors were pioneers in Methodism. She resided in Prince Edward County until about 10 years ago, when she took up residence with Rev. R. A Whattam.

Surviving her are five children, Mrs. L. L. Garratt of Moose Jaw, Sask.; Miss A. Whattam, Peterborough; Messrs. James L. of Oshawa, T. E. of Picton and Rev. R. A. of Peterborough.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., and Rev. B. Greatrix. On Wednesday morning the funeral will take place to the G. T. R. station, where the remains will be taken on the 8.55 train to Picton for interment.

Junior Mission Band, Knox Church

The Mission Band report was read at the annual congregational meeting by their secretary, Miss Margaret MacIntyre. The band has a membership of 40, and the average attendance is good. The children have made a study of child life in some of the foreign mission fields. The revenue has been raised principally by a sale of work, and a thank-offering meeting at which Rev. J. A MacKenzie addressed the children, also by teas on various occasions. A parcel was forwarded to an Indian school and supplies for a mission hospital. The financial statement showed receipts of $53.12. The officers are as follows: Leader, Miss Lillian Sadwell; president, Miss Margaret MacIntyre; treasurer, Miss Gladys Chambers.

This important report was overlooked when the account of the annual meeting was handed in for the Saturday papers.

THEATRICAL

"Daddy Long-Legs" won splendid applause at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night. It was the third time that Peterborough audiences have enjoyed this delightful play. It is just the sort that when seen once one desires to see again. The leading part was taken by Miss Eva Walton, who portrayed the irresistible Judy to perfection.

The story, which most people have read, is of Judy Abbott, who has been an inmate of the John Green orphan asylum, suddenly finds herself equipped with pretty clothes. She is sent to college like a girl with a "real family" and her ambitions for literary work realized. She is not allowed to know her benefactor's real name and is told to address him as John Smith. Judy prefers a more original title, and as she has seen his shadow the day he was at the asylum, decides to call him "Daddy Long Legs." She writes a number of letters which arouse the curiosity of Jervis Pendleton, trustee of the John Grier home, who is a woman hater, as well as fairy godfather, and he comes to the college and makes the acquaintance of his ward.

Albert Roscoe, who plays the part, fully satisfies the reader's imagination of "Daddy Long Legs."

The rest of the cast is nicely balanced. The scenes are well planned. The girls' study and the inside of the orphan asylum are quite realistic.

GERMANS REPULSED ON THE LEFT BANK OF RIVER MEUSE

More Foe Airplanes Are Brought to Earth

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 30. — (Official Statement.)—On the left bank of the Meuse an attack with hand grenades against one of our trenches in the region of 304 was repulsed by our fire without any result other than losses for the enemy.

North of Badonvillers, a German attack was repulsed. We took prisoners.

In Upper Alsace our batteries were active in the region of Seppois. There was intermittent cannonading along the remainder of the front.

Three enemy airplanes were brought down in aerial combats yesterday, one by Sergt. Hauss, who up to the present time has destroyed five German airplanes. It is confirmed that Adjutant Jailler has brought down six enemy machines thus far, five airplanes and one balloon.

BERLIN, January 30. — French troops last night delivered fresh attacks on German lines northwest of Verdun at Hill 304, the army headquarters says. They were without success.

On the Eastern front between Ballace and the Black Sea there has been no important event. At the bend of the Cerna and on the lowlands of the Struma, clashes occurred between reconnoitering detachments.

Nine of Crew Lost With Ship

TWO NORWEGIAN AND ONE PORTUGUESE SHIPS GO DOWN.

LONDON, Jan 30.—The Norwegian steamers Hallbjoerg Argo and Fulton have been sunk. Nine of the Argo's crew were lost. The Portuguese steamer Douro has been sunk.

QUAKE IS RECORDED

Instruments Thrown off Scale.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASINGTON, January 30. — Earthquake shocks of extraordinary strength, distant apparently about five thousand miles, were recorded at Georgetown University, lasting from 9:47 until 12:53, at times so violent as to throw the instruments off the scale.

The new radio station in California has conversed with Australia, a distance of 6,000 miles.

TWO LETTERS FOUND

Are Now on Their Way to Bomb. Withers.

Thanks to the thoughtfulness of a citizen who was at the G. T. R. station this morning, Bomb. Withers, who is "Somewhere in France," will receive two letters which had been lost by the writers. The letters were noticed as they lay in a small pool of water, and Mr. Citizen, being curious, picked them up and, after taking them home to dry, made out the address and, re-writing it, dropped the letters into the mail box, and they are now on their long journey to Bomb. Withers.

CHANGEABLE WEATHER

Mercury Climbed to 37 Degrees Today.

We are having some remarkable changes in weather conditions these days. Yesterday we had rain, and two days previously 21 below. Today it is up to 37 degrees. A year ago today conditions were almost similar to what they are today—very slippery roads. Two years ago today (1915) we had it 28 degrees below zero.—W. P.

STORY OF THE FIRST CANADIANS IN FRANCE

Will Exhibit Souvenirs From the Battle Front.

Major O'Flynn of the 247th Batt. will be the speaker at the regular mid-week meeting of the Canadian Standard Efficiency Test groups on Wednesday evening at the Y.M.C.A.

Major O'Flynn will tell the story of the first Canadians in France; also the methods of trench warfare and fighting on the western front in general, and will place on exhibition a collection of souvenirs from the battlefields of France. The lecture will be free to all members of the Y.M.C.A.

PETERBORO MAN IN ROYAL NAVY DIES OF WOUNDS

Former Baggage Man at G.T.R. Station is Wounded.

Two more members of the original 93rd Battalion are officially reported casualties today. Pte. Harry J. Weir, whose wife and family live at 241 Stewart street, was admitted to hospital on January 21st with gunshot wounds in the left arm and face. He was a corporal when the battalion was in Peterborough, and in common with other N. C. O.'s, gave up his stripes when he crossed to France. Pte. Weir was in charge of the baggage room at the G. T. R. station before he enlisted. One of his children died since he went overseas.

The other casualty is William Johnston, who, after enlisting in the 93rd Battalion, transferred to the Royal Navy and joined the crew of H.M.S. Hindustan. He has died of wounds.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman is in Ottawa today in conection with matters pertaining to recruiting.

Major O'Flynn and Col J W Miller will address a recruiting meeting at Lily Lake this evening.

The bugle band are six strong at present and are practising every day.

Pte. Hamlet Wood, 477 Bolivar street, is the latest addition to the ranks of the 247th Battalion. He will be attached to the band.

Mr. Harry J. Kearney, an employe of the C.G.E., who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Nicholls Hospital, has gone to his home in Young's Point to recuperate. Mr. Kearney endeavored to join the fighting forces last fall but failed to get through the medical examination and now has an A.R. button.

AUSTRIANS REPULSED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Jan. 30.—Austrians made a number of small attacks yesterday and the War Office announces they were repulsed after spirited fighting.

GRANTS TO SCHOOLS

County Treasurer Elliott sent out the last cheque today to cover the grants to the assisted schools of the county. The amount disbursed was over $3500.

MRS. ELLEN ROBINSON

After an illness of several months Ellen Preston, widow of the late Thomas Robinson, died on Monday afternoon in her 85th year. Mrs. Robinson was born in Port Hope and came to Peterborough 52 years ago. To mourn her loss are left seven daughters, who are Miss Letta of Hespeler, Miss Eliza of Buffalo, Mrs. H. R. Saunders of Cobourg, Mrs. G. Grange, Mrs. W. S. Milburn, Margarita and Katherine of this city. Mrs. L. Martin, 443 King St., is a sister, and the only brother is Mr. J. Preston of Midland.

The death of Mrs Robinson is the third bereavement in the family in a comparatively short time. One son, Thomas G. Robinson, died last March and a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Foster, passed away last June.

The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late residence, 262 Aylmer St., to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. T. H. Mitchell will conduct the service.

LOST WITH LAURENTIC

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The sinking of the auxiliary cruiser Laurentic, formerly of the trans Atlantic passenger service, has occasioned the gravest concern to Miss Carlisle, of the London Public Library staff, and to Rev. Arthur Carlisle, of Windsor, formerly conencted with St. Paul's Cathedral here. Their brother, Jas. Carlisle, whose home is in England, but who formerly resided in South London, was the chief engineer of the Laurentic, and it is feared he may have lost his life.

FOUR JUDGMENTS IN COUNTY COURT

Barrett vs. Heard Action Dismissed, as is also the Counter Claim--Mrs. Frick Awarded $300 and Costs Against City

Barret vs. Heard.—Action dismissed with costs and counter-claim dismissed without costs.

Sampson vs. Humphries.—Judgment given for defendant with costs.

Frick vs. City of Peterborough. — Plaintiff awarded $300 and costs.

Ferguson vs. Low.—Plaintiff awarded possession of strip of land in dispute and allowed $100 damages for trespass and costs of action.

Judge Huycke delivered the above judgments at a sitting of the County Court this morning. All of them are of considerable local interest.

The case of Barret vs. Heard was an action to force payment for money due on some Western lands which were sold by the plaintiff to the defendant. Some payments had been made and the defendant found out that the lands were misrepresented to him and he refused to make further payment of his notes. Judge Huycke, in dismissing the action, stated that there was misrepresentation sufficiently grave to be fraudulent, not by the plaintiff, but by his advertising agents.

The counter-claim of the defendant Heard was not allowed as the court held that the defendant should have entered action for recovery previous to this suit being entered in order that his claim could stand.

Mr. D. O'Connell for the plaintiff and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defendant.

The case of Sampson vs. Humphries was the result of a number of suits, executions, etc Some time previous to June, 1916, Mrs. Clarence Sampson engaged I. A. Humphries of Campbellford to undertake some legal work for her. Later on she withdrew and the attorney went on and had his costs taxed in the usual manner and later got judgment and placed an execution in the hands of the sheriff to seize on the plaintiff's lands in the township of Dummer. A conveyance of the land had been made to the plaintiff's son, Clarence Sampson, and the defendants alleged that the transfer was made to defraud the creditors. Judge Huycke held with the defendants and entered judgment setting aside the conveyance and giving judgment for them with costs.

City Loses

Mrs. Annie Frick was awarded $300 and costs of action in the suit against the city of Peterborough. In June, 1916, plaintiff was walking along Ware St. The city had the road torn up for grading and when the plaintiff came to the usual crossing she found it torn up also. Noticing a place that was not so muddy as the rest of the road she and her friend crossed over. Just as the other side of the road had been reached the plaintiff slipped and in falling struck against a piece of the old crossing which had been left projecting out and in the fall two ribs were broken and painful injuries sustained. Judge Huycke found that the city employees had been negligent and made the award as above. He refused to allow or consider a list of alleged disbursements by the plaintiff's husband.

Peck, Kerr & McElderry for the plaintiff and G. N. Gordon for the city.

In the suit brought by Miss H. Ferguson against A. Low for trespass, the plaintiff was allowed $100 and costs by Judge Huycke, who also holds that the narrow strip of land in dispute, which on paper belonged to Low, belongs now to the plaintiff by reason of possession under the statutory limitations, and he also found that the defendant was very high-handed in tearing down the fence which marked the boundary between the lots and in erecting a garage on part of the land in dispute.

After giving judgment, Judge Huycke suggested that the parties come to an agreement, and for the purpose of such an agreement he fixed the value of the strip of land at $100, and in case this was accepted it would reduce the damage award by $30, the amount he figured it would cost to remove the cement wall that encroached on plaintiff's property.

Bennet and Goodwill for the defendant and G. N. Gordon for the plaintiff.

A stay of judgment in all cases was granted for thirty days.

HOLD THE FIRST AND SECOND LINE TURK TRENCHES

BRITISH ALSO HAVE GRIP ON THIRD AND FOURTH LINES.

LONDON, Jan. 30—A British official communication issued concerning the fighting on the Irak front in Asiatic Turkey says:—

"As the result of operations Saturday night and Sunday we are now in complete possession of Turkish first and second lines south-west of Kut-el-Amara, on the right bank of the Tigris, on a front of 4,300 yards. We also hold the enemy's third and fourth lines on a frontage of 600 yards.

Turkish dead to the number of 950 already have been counted and collected. More remain to be counted. Prisoners aggregating 127 were taken, together with 1 gun, 1 maxim, 3 trench mortars and a quantity of other material

The enemy on January 24th shelled our Fe aiie position heavily, but made no attack. On January 25th south of the Tigris, the British, after a violent artillery bombardment, made an attack with strong forces and succeeded, at the cost of the heaviest losses, in capturing some ground. Two thousand British dead are lying before a small part of our front. On January 26th the enemy made another attack and was repulsed completely.

NO PARCELS TO PRISONERS IN GERMANY AFTER FEB. 1

Money for Purchases May be Sent to. Red Cross.

OTTAWA, Jan. 30.— An official memorandum issued last night states that after Feb. 1 no parcels of foodstuffs or clothing may be sent from Canada for prisoners of war in Germany. The Government has received a communication from the Imperial authorities to this effect.

Detailed regulations concerning all communications with prisoners of war will be issued by the Post Office Department immediately.

Under the regulations recently issued by the British authorities all such parcels received from Canada by parcel post and otherwise are turned over to the Canadian Red Cross Society in London, where they are censored, repacked and forwarded to Germany. The director of the Central Prisoners of War Committee reports that great congestion is being caused by this method, and that while such congestion is being coped with provisionally, it cannot be permitted to continue. He states that no more parcels containing foodstuffs or articles of clothing can be received from Canada. Money for the purpose of purchasing supplies may be sent and such purchases will be made and all the necessary arrangements carried out by the Canadian Red Cross Society at London.

Mr. John Wasson Dies Aged 81

PROMINENT IN WARSAW FOR MANY YEARS.

Mr. John Wasson, who was a prominent figure in Warsaw, for many years and had spent the last fifteen years in this city, died at 8.30 last night, at his residence, 149 London St., in his 81st year. The late Mr. Wasson was in business at Warsaw for forty years, first as a merchant and later as proprietor of the mills there, and he was well known and highly regarded throughout Dummer township and the county at large. Mrs. Wasson predeceased him eight years.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, city, and two sons, Dr. Wasson of Victoria, B.C., and W. E. Wasson of Vancouver, B.C.

A service will be held at his late residence tonight at 8.30, and at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning the funeral will be held to Warsaw for interment.

Manufacturers have submitted to the Ontario Government their proposals for giving first aid to injured employees.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1917

THE CHURCH AND EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

REV. J. P. WILSON, the brilliant pastor of Trinity Church, preached a sermon Sunday in which he championed the cause of votes for women. His arguments were based largely on Scriptural grounds and were practically unanswerable. The churches are almost unanimously, it would seem, behind the women of Ontario in their demand for the franchise. The marvel is not that this should be the case, but rather that the agitation for the equal ballot should have been so long delayed. The race that has produced the long line of unfaltering heroines, whose names are enshrined in history, are certainly in a position to ask unabashed for recognition.

Mr. Wilson said that the women in the United States who have placed pickets to parade around the Presidential mansion in Washington day and night in order to keep their case constantly before the Chief Executive of the nation, are only injuring their cause.

They are certainly working this injury, for a variety of reasons. In the first place, their method is too suggestive of the militancy that has brought equal suffrage into disrepute in England. In the second place, the women by buttonholing the President are endeavoring to coerce him into a violation of the Constitution. The matter of the franchise is one that belong to the individual States, each one of which says who shall and who shall not have the right to vote. When that right is given it is not limited to the State elections. The woman who can vote for a member of a State Legislature can also cast a ballot for the President.

Women in the United States could be enfranchised, it is true, by an amendment to the Constitution such as that adopted to give the vote to the negro after the Civil War, but the process would be long and cumbersome. The fact that the suffragists find it necessary to waylay the President at every street corner does not imply that he is opposed to their demands. The point at issue between him and the suffragists is simply a question of methods.

Premier Borden is in the same position with regard to this matter as the President of the United States. He has clearly defined his stand to the suffragists and has recommended them to take up the question with the various Legislatures who have power to deal with it. When the women of Ontario get the provincial franchise, as everyone believes they will, their right to vote at Federal elections will have to be established.

This point will be discussed at the present session. Little difficulty on this head is anticipated for the present Government has intimated its purpose to strengthen the hands of the provinces in any legislation the latter may enact. The Administration has already done as much with regard to temperance enactments, going in this regard to the limit of constitutional authority. There is no reason to believe that any different stand would be taken in dealing with the full enfranchisement of women.

TOLERABLY SAFE.

THERE IS NO NATIONALISM in the Borden Cabinet for no Nationalist would vote supplies to carry on a European war. Anything of the kind exists only in the morbid imagination of the Opposition press.

Our evening contemporary, that goes further in this regard than any of our exchanges, mendaciously declares that the Borden Government holds office by grace of the Nationalist vote.

The figures are against this theory. In Ontario, for example, at the election in 1911 there were seventy-two Government supporters chosen against thirteen—ominous number—members of the Opposition.

An Administration with such a backing in the banner province of the Dominion should feel tolerably independent and safe from anything that may be done to it in Quebec.

WHEN THE PREMIER GOES TO ENGLAND.

THE EXAMINER is by no means elated over the prospects of Sir Robert Borden's visit to England to attend the Imperial Conference, but with an eldritch wail intimates that he will be able to make but a sorry showing among the other Dominions. Well it is for the reputation of this country that our contemporary is not to represent it at London and that it holds no brief to appear for Premier Borden. We believe that in spite of The Examiner's gloomy forebodings, Sir Robert will be able, after all, to make a tolerable showing. He will not be forced to admit, as the Evening Examiner hints so darkly and maliciously, that he comes from a Cabinet that is a hotbed of treason and that his country has made a dismal showing in the work of the war. Any man should realize the honor of appearing for a country that has sent such men to the trenches as the Canadian troops have proved themselves to be, thereby winning the admiration of the world.

Sir Robert Borden can tell his confreres in England that he has in Canada a Cabinet the members of which uphold his every act, a Cabinet that with a single exception stood with him when it was proposed that Canada should bear a portion of the burden of naval defence. Because the late F. D. Monk could not agree with that policy he took the only course left him and resigned his position.

Sir Robert Borden need not blush as he reports what Canada has done. During the first six months of the war this country called out a greater army than Britain had fighting in the battle of Waterloo. Canada has now a muster roll of over four hundred thousand men to her credit. There is no reason to be downcast. There is no cause to worry, even if hate breeding Opposition newspapers decry their country like witches bestriding brooms and sailing through the air fill the earth with their screeches.

Best of all, Premier Borden can report in England no later than last Saturday his Government was put on trial for the first time since the war broke out and that it came triumphantly through the ordeal. He received support from a quarter where it was least to be expected, in a constituency where racial strife was fiercest.

Leaving The Examiner and its jaundiced diatribes behind him, Sir Robert Borden can set out on his mission to England with his head in the air and without a misgiving in his heart.

NOT LIKELY.

> Sir Robert Borden can cite to the Imperial conference as an example of solidarity of the Empire, the fact that the latest Nationalist Minister—King's adviser—he appointed, advises his constituents to "skedaddle" rather than fight.—The Examiner.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN will do nothing of the kind, for the very good reason that he is far from being either an irresponsible ninny or a prevaricator. He has, fortunately, a higher sense of public duty than our contemporary, and is above maliciously blackening the reputation of his country.

Messrs. Blondin, Patenaude and Sevigny, the so-called Nationalist members of the Cabinet, have all made recruiting speeches in Quebec, thus giving the lie to the charges of treason made against them. They tell their constituents that if the voluntary system fails men of fighting age will be conscripted. Mr. Blondin added at one of his meetings that under conscription the hopeless slacker would have no recourse but to "skedaddle over the border."

Because he said that it does not follow that he recommended such a course. As much has been said at recruiting meetings right here in Peterborough, and even our contemporary, the modern apostle of national calamity, has never been heard to condemn the statement of a plan fact that the Government has always recognized as one of the great difficulties to be met with in the event of conscription.

Fortunate it is for Canada that Sir Robert Borden is going to the Imperial Conference instead of The Examiner, that would spread abroad such evil reports and would twist the utterances of public men out of all semblance to the truth.

Statesmen, not immature school boys, are required at the Conference.

MILITARY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS.

AT A MEETING of the trustees of all the schools in Elgin County, held recently in St. Thomas, for the discussion of educational affairs, one of the officials from the country districts who has a son at the front, said that he was against military training in rural schools, but was strongly in favor of extensive and suitable playgrounds for the children. He thought that the rising generation should be given every possible chance to perfect their physical condition.

This trustee was certainly right so far as he went. It is coming to be recognized more and more by educationists that physical training is of equal importance with mental development. Playgrounds are a necessary adjunct to every school, but there is no form of physical culture quite so desirable as military training. This is aside altogether from the question of fitting boys for actual service. Military training, according to modern methods, is desirable, even if war was over forever. Systematic play is being taught children by every playground association in the country, and no play can be more systematic than military drill.

Children can be given this form of training without being converted into militarists, just as a young man can be taught the noble art of self-defence and still not become obsessed with the ambition to challenge to fistic combat every man he meets.

EXPERIMENTS IN SEWAGE DISPOSAL

Now that the City Council of Peterborough is wrestling with the problem of sewage disposal, it will be interesting to know that engineers and sewage experts are watching the result of the use of "activated sludge"—the very latest in the treatment of sewage—which is now being tested in Milwaukee, and if its working are satisfactory there is a possibility that it may be introduced for test purposes into the outlyig districts of Chicago. All of which, with other features of the problems confronting engineers, was explained by Prof. F. H. Newell of the University of Illinois, one of the delegates to the annual meeting of the Illinois Society of Engineers, in session at that city. In an informal chat the professor outlined briefly the newest thoughts and wrinkles in sewage disposal, and other sewage questions.

Iron in Water a Problem

"One of the big questions in the small town," said Prof. Newell, "is the question of the removal of iron from the water. That does not affect Chicago so directly, as Chicago gets its water from the lake, but other cities in the state are having difficulty in ridding the water of a sort of sponge known as crenothrix, which is found floating in water drawn from the faucets for drinking and other purposes. It is a result of excess of iron, and while not harmful is neither food nor drink and should be abolished. A practical way of removing it cheaply must be found.

"Another problem always before us is that of getting rid of sewage without offence to the surrounding neighborhood—this is particularly a question in a growing community. Experts are watching the effect of this newly discovered treatment—the "activated sludge," so-called. A lot of sewage is allowed to flow into a tank and then, from the bottom, air is blown and bubbles up to the surface. The contact of the air with the sewage develops the growth of a low order of life which, properly controlled, destroys the injurious bacteria.

War of Good and Bad Germs

"It is in effect an active warfare between the good germs and the bad little fellows ready to help us if we give them a chance. They themselves are harmless and after clearing our water of the bad germs for us may safely remain. This system is being tried in Milwaukee and Chicago's outlying districts may see its working, if results are satisfactory."

Britain Did More in Thirty Months Than Germany Did in Thirty Years

The following from the pen of Mr. C. W. Barron, of the Boston News Bureau, is a carefully prepared digest of what Britain has accomplished since August, 1914. It will be remembered that Mr. Barron, who is one of the ablest financial writers in the United States, made, some time since, a special trip to Europe in order that he might study these great questions at first hand. The article following, which is well worthy of close reading, was published a few days ago in the columns of the Boston News Bureau:—

All the seven wonders of the world fade on history's page compared with the spectacle Great Britain presents today. A commercial nation of less than 50,000,000 people suddenly summoned to arms where no arms existed and in less than thirty months she has a bigger army than history ever before recorded, and a war machine in Europe that for wealth of shell, explosives and war power is the amazement of the Germans, who had taken ten times thirty months to prepare for the attack.

But this is only the beginning of wonders.

Without an English aeroplane that could circle her own island she has vanquished the boasted Zeppelins and is mistress of her own skies. With submarines by the hundred threatening her coast defences, her food supplies and her commerce, she has swept all oceans, locked the vaunted German fleet in harbor, convoyed shipments of gold across the ocean in safety—loads of gold that in former times would have paralyzed national financial markets—made the English Channel her multiple track ocean railway to Europe with no loss by Zeppelin or submarine, fought in Africa, at the Canal, at the Dardanelles; grappled with the Turk and the Bulgar; changed generals and admirals in command, changed Cabinets, fed the armies of France; given arms to Russia; maintained the armies and the Governments of Belgium and Serbia and altogether advanced three thousand million dollars, or three times the national debt of the United States to her war allies.

While the United States has been trying to find out how to build military rifles in quantities and has unfilled orders for them representing hundreds of million of dollars, England has been turning out rifles by the million for herself and her allies, cannon by the thousand, boots and coats by the million for herself and her allies, and, wonder of wonders, she has done all this, is doing it, is yet to do more, and has now her manufacturing, her trade relations and overseas commerce unimpaired. Yet she has grabbed the trade of the world, so that her enemies are struggling on half rations with food, rubber and metal supplies from the outside world practically cut off except as new territory is taken.

This is a gigantic physical power and a trade and war power combined never before dream of. It puts in the shade all that the world previously knew of Great Britain's financial power. Nobody dreamed two years ago that the war cost to Great Britain was to be beyond five or six billions. And it is today more than twice that sum and Great Britain is prepared to double it again. But stupendous, and even beyond all previous estimates, as is this financial power, the physical and mental power manifested by Great Britain is the marvel of marvels.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

Col. Norton Griffiths, member of the British Parliament and managing director of the Norton Griffiths Co., public works contractors, has distinguished himself by the work he did in Roumania. One of the objects of the German drive was to secure the Roumanian oil wells. Col. Griffiths was sent to Roumania to destroy the wells and did this so effectively that it is said the Germans can not secure a drop of oil until they can re bore the wells and erect new machinery, and this will require several months of continuous work. Colonel Griffiths destroyed hundreds of millions worth of property, but it was better to do this than to allow the wells to fall into the hands of the Germans. Col. Griffith is an engineer, a soldier and a contractor. He served in the Matabele war, Rhodesia, and through the Boer war, where he was mentioned in despatches and won medals. For the last half dozen years he has been Conservative member of Parliament for Wednesbury.

Col. William F. Cody, who died recently, tells in his book, "The Adventures of Buffalo Bill," published by the Harpers, the story of his first fight with Indians. It was in 1857, when he was only eleven years old, that he killed an Indian. He was accompanying some cattle-herders when they were attacked on the South Platte River. The Indians stampeded the cattle, killed three men and then charged on the rest. A volley stopped them for the moment and the herders took refuge in the river, wading behind the bank on their way to Fort Kearney. Buffalo Bill fell behind and when he suddenly looked up at the bank above he saw an Indian's head. He aimed and fired and the next moment was terrified to see "about six feet of dead Indian come tumbling into the river." From that time forward, he says, "I became a hero and an Indian-killer."

Cheap Tea
Not Economical!

Many people complain about the poor flavor of the cheap tea they are using, but are trying to put up with it because they think they are saving money.

In reality, cheap tea is rarely more economical, often less economical, than Red Rose Tea.

While Red Rose Tea may cost a few cents more, or even 10 cents more per pound, than common tea three teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea are equal to five teaspoonsful of common tea.

Less Red Rose Tea is required in the tea pot, because this master blend of Indian-Ceylon teas consists largely of the famous hill grown teas of Assam, India.

These Assam teas excel in vigor, richness and strength. Their leaves yield more liquor and a fuller flavored liquor. Blended with Ceylons they make the ideal tea for flavor and economy.

Try a sealed package of Red Rose Tea and keep count of the extra number of cups it yields in comparison with cheap teas. You will find that Red Rose is worth every cent asked for it—and that it costs no more to use this delightful tea.

TO-DAY'S STORY

The recruit was having his first turn on sentry duty.

"Now, remember your salutes," the corporal warned him. "If you see a lieutenant wearing one star, slope arms also. The major has a crown on his straps and you present arms and then turn out the guard."

When he was left alone the recruit went over these orders again and again.

Suddenly his musing was interrupted by the approach of an officer. This was a general and the recruit did not know what to do for him.

"And what might you be?" he asked bluntly, unable to recognize the badge of the officer's rank.

"I'm the general," replied the officer affably.

"Sure now, and are ye?" exclaimed the recruit in consternation. "Then ye'll want something big. How'd it do if I give ye a bayonet exercise?"

Mother—Why don't you try to be good like Willie Smith? He studies hard in school and does not try to have fun during his school hours.

Johnny—Yes he does, ma. He gits his fun out of tellin' on the rest of us and seein' us git walloped.

SUBSTITUTES FOR MEAT

Recipes Given With Detail for Using the Vegetables: Bean Polenta Comes First.

One pint small white soup beans, one and one half tablespoons of molasses, one half teaspoon French mustard, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon of vinegar, salt and pepper to taste. Wash the beans, and soak them over night in lukewarm water. In the morning, drain off this water, cover with fresh cold water, bring slowly to a boil, and boil slowly one hour; drain again, cover with one quart of fresh boiling water, and boil slowly another hour. When done, press through a colander, return to the kettle, add the butter, molasses, mustard, salt, pepper and vinegar; stir, and boil 10 minutes. Serve in a vegetable tureen.

Bean Croquettes

One pint of white soup beans, one tablespoon of vinegar, one tablespoon of molasses, one tablespoon of butter, salt and cayenne to taste. Boil the beans as directed in preceding recipe. When done, drain and press the through a colander, then add the other ingredients, mix well and stand away to cool. When cool, form into small balls, dip first in egg and then in bread crumbs, and fry in deep hot fat.

Boston Roast

One pound can kidney beans, or an equivalent quantity cooked beans, one-half pound grated cheese, breadcrumbs, salt.

Mash beans or put through a meat grinder. Add cheese and enough breadcrumbs to make a stiff roll. Bake in a moderate oven, basting occasionally with butter and water. Serve with tomato sauce. The dish may be flavored with onions chopped and cooked in butter and water.

For kidney beans with brown sauce, put one tablespoon of butter in a saucepan and brown, but do not burn it. Add one tablespoon flour; stir and brown again. Add cup good stock (beef is best); season with salt and pepper. Cook one pint fresh shelled beans in salted water until tender. Add the sauce, and cook one minute longer.

Waste in Potatoes

Enormous waste is caused both in material and nutritive value by the peeling of potatoes before cooking them. There are thousands of pounds of potatoes wasted every day through the peelings. To be convinced of this it is only necessary to note the bulk of the peelings when you peel the potatoes before cooking. But this is not the only waste. When peeled potatoes are boiled in the ordinary way, there is a loss of nitrogenous and saline matter by extraction into the water, which does not occur when potatoes are boiled in their skins, or baked

FASHION HINTS

Practical Motor Coat

The woman who motors much has found that the motor coat, without any furbelows and little trimming, is the kind that she takes most comfort in.

A long coat of heavy raw silk musses less than of any other material, and gray or tan, the colors that show dust least, are the best colors to choose in a coat of this kind.

The one pictured is of tan cotton ratine, with buttons of bone, capacious pockets and a decided air of comfort and elegance.

Making Screwnails Stick

Where screws are driven into soft wood and subjected to considerable strain, they are very likely to work loose, and it is often very difficult to make them hold. In such cases the use of glue is profitable. Make the glue thick; immerse a stick about half the size of the screw, and put it into the hole; then put in the screw and drive it home as quickly as possible.

Making Steak Tender

To make tough steak tender, put three tablespoonfuls of salad oil and one tablespoonful of vinegar on a large flat dish. Lay the steak on the mixture and let it rest in this way for half an hour. Then turn it over, and let it rest another half hour in the same quantity of vinegar and oil. The toughest steak will yield to the treatment and be nice and tender when served.

Care of Kitchen Dishes

Much of the flavor, delicacy and wholesomeness of food depends upon the proper care of the utensils used in preparing it. Besides, cooking utensils properly cared for last much longer than those which are not. Tin, wood or iron utensils should be as carefully washed and wiped as the diningroom china and glass.

A tiny pinch of carbonate of soda or salt added to milk as soon as it arrives will help to preserve it from turning sour.

Rose Embroidery

If you desire a quick and unusual way to embroider the rose design, work the centre in solid satin stitch, using three colors. Outline all the other petals. You will be surprised how much character this bit of satin stitch in the centre will give the design. The leaves should be in long and short stitch and the scrolls in outline. Pillow cases, too, are often decorated with this braid. The hems are turned on the right side and held in place by rickrack and large initials are outlined in the centre by sewing the braid over the marked outline. Sheets may be hemmed to match the cases, so that the decorated portion can be turned down over the counterpane.

USE FAT IN COOKING

That From Fowls an Excellent Kitchen Substitute for Butter.

No cooking fat is really cheap except by comparison with the very expensive butter product. But if care is used in saving all bits of fat from meat they can be utilized in various ways. A good fat chicken stewed will serve for several meals and is not an expensive meat. The large pieces of fat around the organs of the fowl should be tried out carefully in a slow oven so the odor will pass up the chimney instead of out into the kitchen. This fat strained and mixed with an equal amount of fat or lard makes a delicious firm fat for frying. The pure chicken fat may be used for cookies. It is used in the same manner as butter and makes a rich crisp cookie. Beef suet may be tried out in the same way and mixed with lard or vegetable fat to take away the tallow-like consistency. These mixed fats are not only much better than pure lard for frying, but cheaper, and pieces can be utilized which would otherwise be thrown away.

When the fat used for deep fat frying becomes rancid or too dark to use, it should be set away for soap making. All pieces of salt pork or trimmings from ham should be added to this soap fat. In the spring it should be thoroughly washed to remove the salt and sediment, and then made into soap. The cost of this soap is only ten cents, or the price of a can of lye. One can of lye to 5½ pounds fat is the right proportion and it can be easily made by carefully following the directions on any lye can. If care is taken to save every tablespoon of fat, enough can be collected to keep the kitchen supplied with a good hard home-made dishwashing soap.

POTATO CROQUETTES

Beat the yolks of two eggs until light and add them to two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, then add two tablespoonfuls of cream, one tablespoonful of salt, a grating of nutmeg, a dash of cayenne, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. Mix the ingredients and turn into a small saucepan, stir over the fire until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan, take from the fire and when cool form into cylinders. Roll first in egg and then in bread crumbs and fry in boiling fat. For bean croquettes cut the beans into pieces an inch long and lay them in clear, cold water for 20 minutes. Drain them, put into a saucepan, cover with boiling water and boil one hour. Drain and press the beans through a colander, then add one tablespoonful of molasses, one tablespoonful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of butter and salt and cayenne pepper to taste. Mix well and stand away to cool. When cold form into small balls, dip first in egg and then in bread crumbs and fry in boiling fat.

MANY BEAUTY DON'TS

Things To Avoid Are Of Vital Importance

Thousands of women are asking what to do to acquire beauty. And few seem to consider another thing as important—what not to do. Do you want to be beautiful? Then read, and heed, these "don'ts." Don't overeat, for an overfull stomach means an overworked digestion. And an overworked digestion means that the pores of the skin must help throw off the poison matter accumulating in the body, which in turn means pimples and blotches.

Don't undersleep. Most people need eight full hours of sleep, anaemic or nervous women should have nine. Dull eyes and a dull skin are often due to lack of sleep.

Don't be afraid of exercising. The body is a huge and complicated machine, and the blood acts somewhat like a lubricant. Exercise sends the blood running actively through the veins, stirring up liver and stomach, vitalizing the entire system.

Don't neglect yourself in any way. You should examine your face carefully, especially your eyes, to judge the condition of your health. If the white of your eyes are yellowish, instead of a blue white, if your skin is sallow, if you look wilted instead of vivacious—begin to improve your health at once.

Hair Dressed To Suit

Once the style of hair-dressing changed to favor the girl with the small, snub, retrousse or plain pug nose. If the nose is quite small, or if the cheeks are thin, it is more becoming to pull the hair over the cheeks, hiding the ears.

Hair waved is apt to soften an otherwise harsh face. This does not mean curled with a small iron, or crimped up on hair pins. Strands of hair wet and rolled on kids or on strips of muslin look softest when unrolled and combed out.

Marble Cake

Put in a cup one egg, half fill cup with melted butter (or half butter and half chicken fat), fill cup with milk; put in mixing bowl, then add one cup sugar, 1 1-2 cups flour, 1 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon vanilla. Beat well. Put all to one side of dish but about two tablespoons of mixture. Into that put two teaspoons of cocoa. Mix well, then stir into the rest by pulling spoon through two or three times. Don't hurry.

You may not get all that is coming to you in this world, but look out for the next.

The worst fault some people have is telling other people of theirs.

"To be happy," said the curate, "a man should decide on one thing he would like to do well, and then perfect himself until he can do it better than anybody else."

"Another story book virtue, doctor," said the old member, "that doesn't work out. There is Ivry, for example, the [illegible] man in the club."

"And what about Ivry."

"He plays such a good game of billiards that nobody will play with him."

Labatt's WINES AND LIQUORS

MAIL ORDER DEPARTMENT

Now Montreal, Que., 4 St. Helen St.

FORMERLY HULL, QUE.

SERVICE—Prompt shipment, no substituting, refunding overpayments, immediate acknowledgement of all orders—these are the features of our service to which we give very special care.

DRAUGHT VERSUS BOTTLED LIQUORS

Liquors in sealed bottles in cases cost one-third more than in draught, and the quality is no better. Why one-third more? Because you are paying for the bottles and the labor of bottling, for the same goods.

Following are some draught liquors, especially "Balmoral" Scotch, which we can highly recommend:

ON WASHING BLANKETS

When washing blankets choose a warm sunny day with a gentle breeze. Prepare suds by dissolving in hot water half a bar of any good white hard soap, one tablespoonful of borax and one tablespoonful of aqua ammonia for each pair of blankets. Let suds cool until they will bear the hands. Immerse the blankets and let them stand in the suds for an hour, keeping the temperature about as hot as the hands will bear by frequent adding hot water. Do not rub soap on the blankets, nor scour nor rub them. Lay the washboard across the tub, then lay the blanket over the board, going over the portion on the board with a stiff hand brush, stripping out the dirt which has become loosened by the soaking. Rinse in water of the same temperature, and hang to dry in plenty of breeze. Success in washing blankets lies in avoiding extreme changes of temperature.

PROVIDE FOR FIRST AID TO INJURED WORKMEN

Amendment Likely to the Compensation Measure.

TORONTO, Jan 30 — With the Legislature opening in two weeks the members of the Cabinet have been very busy for the past week or more getting their business in shape for the opening. Prospective legislation and consideration of estimates has been taking up the time of the ministers. It is not thought that this session will be quite as stirring as the previous one, when the prohibition legislation was the chief business. Prohibition, it is claimed, has proved a success, and the disastrous effects prophesied have failed to materialize.

That the nickel question will loom up in the discussion is almost a certainty, and the Government expects to have its report from the commission ready by the time the House meets.

Hon. G. H. Ferguson and the other ministers have given definite assurance that the nickel companies will be called upon to pay an adequate share to the Treasury and that the tax will be retroactive.

The demands of labor in regard to the Workmen's Compensation Act will likely be met with by the Government, amending the Act to make provision for first aid to an injured workman. The land project for returned soldiers will be another thing that will be taken up. The work of the women during the present war may be recognized in legislation granting votes for women, and there are many in the Legislature on both sides who think the women of Ontario deserve this.

There will be four new faces in the House, the new members being G. W. Ecclestone, Muskoka; F. W. Hay, North Perth; H. H. Dewart, K.C., Southwest Toronto, and W. T. Allen, West Simcoe.

FRENCH AIR CHAMPION MOST DARING FIGHTER

Lieut. Guynemer Single-Handed Successfully Attacked Three German Airplanes.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES. (By mail).—Lieut. Guynemer, "star ace" of the entire French aerial service, who recently brought down his 28th "officially confirmed" German airplane, established at the same time a new world's record for aerial combats, the air duel having taken place at an altitude of over two miles after a chase of over 70 kilometres. The entire battle was one of the most dramatic air episodes that the entire war has produced.

The French's undisputed mastery of the air, which now renders it practically impossible for a German machine ever to cross the French lines, has imposed on the French flyers the necessity of flying far back of the German lines to get in contact with the German machines. It was while on one of these hunts that Guynemer, flying at an altitude of over 13,000 feet and at a distance of over 70 kilometers behind the German lines, sighted a German squadron of two observation airplanes with an escort of two fighting machines, heading for the French lines.

There was nothing to prevent Guynemer giving immediate battle except that should he be forced to land he would fall in the German lines. He therefore took refuge behind some friendly clouds until the German squadron should pass ahead of him, then closed up sufficiently so that if he should be seen by the German anti aircraft gunners from below, he would be taken merely for one of the German planes.

For seventy kilometers he kept up the pursuit, concealing himself as much as possible from the German machines by keeping behind the clouds. When the French lines at last appeared below him he emerged in full view and began to fight. The German machine nearest him chanced to be an observation plane, and darting down on it he opened his machine gun fire at an altitude of two miles. He killed the observer with his third bullet and with the tenth the pilot shot from the machine dead and the plane began its whirling course down towards the French lines.

Although the machine was the second one Guynemer had brought down that day, he at once started after the other three but they in the meantime had disappeared toward their own lines.

Without further ado Guynemer started in search of his victim and succeeded in locating the machine in the ravine of Mocourt, the plan itself shattered into fragments and the bodies of both the pilot and observer lying within a radius of sixty miles.

PREMIER DENIES CHARGES BROUGHT BY MR. TURRIFF

Absurd Accusations Were Almost too Trifling to be Noticed—Sir Sam Hughes Speaks To-day.

OTTAWA, Jan. 30 — To the debate on the address Monday speeches were contributed by Messrs. Kyte (Richmond, N.S.), Edwards (Frontenac), Murphy (Russell), and Nicholson (Queen's, P.E.I.) The feature of the day was a severe arraignment of the French-Canadians by Dr. Edwards, the Conservative member for Frontenac, who bracketed Laurier and Bourassa together and charged Hon Rodolphe Lemieux and Hon Charles Marcil with poisoning the minds of their constituents.

On the opening of the House the Prime Minister made a dignified but sweeping denial of the charge made by J. Turriff (Assiniboia), in the debate last Friday night. This charge was to the effect that the Prime Minister had intimated to the representatives of the Ontario Recruiting League that if he had his way there would be no more recruiting and that the people of the country would devote their energies to developing the resources of Canada.

Borden's Refutation

The Premier's statement was as follows:—

"During my absence on Friday the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr Turriff) made a statement in the House with regard to myself to which my attention has been directed. I need not read all of his speech alluded to, but the exact words of the statement to which I refer were in effect that I did, last spring intimate to the representatives of the Ontario recruiting committee that if I had my way there would be no more recruiting in Canada and that the attention of the Canadian people should be turned to the development of their industries. That statement is on its face so transparently absurd that I must apologize to the House for making allusion to it. However, my silence might be misunderstood, and therefore I desire to assure the House and the country that neither to the Ontario recruiting committe on the occasion mentioned nor any other organization or individual on any other occasion did I ever convey such intimation as that suggested, or anything that could be twisted into such an intimation. I regret that my hon. friend should have seen fit to make a statement which is entirely inconsistent with every act and word of mine, so far as I am aware, from the commencement of the war to the present time."

Sir Sam Hughes spoke today and nearly 2,000 applications were received for the 250 seats available in the gallery of the House.

SKIPPERS FROM CANADA ARE DENOUNCED BY HON. A. MEIGHEN

OTTAWA, Jan. 30 — "The fellow who gets out when his country is in danger, the fellow who will not stay and face the little embarrassments to which he is subjected by the war, that man has the word coward printed on his back in letters of yellow which will never fade."

In a forceful address Hon. Arthur Meighen at the I.O.D.E. concert at the Regent Theatre expressed the above opinion of the conduct of many young men who he stated were emigrating to the United States to escape their share in the burdens imposed on the country by the war and paid a glorious tribute to the courage and endurance of the womanhood of Canada and the Motherland.

"There are many young men who are emigrating to the States," stated Hon. Mr. Meighen. "I cannot in fitting language express my opinion of the type of man who in these times of stress takes to his heels and skips to the United States. When this war is over we shall want to replace those of our manhood who have fallen in the struggle, but God grant we shall never be reduced to such straits that we shall have to accept back in citizenship those ingrates who have deserted us in our hour of need."

If Belgium Were "Next-Door" To Canada

- —if the heavily-charged electric wires, that pen the people into a workless and almost foodless land, ran along our frontier
- —if instead of reading of Belgian sufferings we heard the pitiful tales from the lips of escaped victims
- —if we could see the long and hungry bread-lines of people as intelligent and once as prosperous and comfortable as ourselves
- —if we could watch the thousands of emaciated children who are fed at the schools by the Belgian Relief Commission
- —if what they are enduring, and their desperate need, were clear and vivid to us, instead of unreal and overseas
- —then the great hearts of Canadians would be moved, and there would be no trouble in raising several times our present contributions to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Can we bring the urgent need of the hungry Belgian mothers and children home to YOU? Can we enlist YOUR active sympathy for those whose very lives depend on the prompt and continued help of people like yourself? BRITISH IN RAID REACH THE THIRD LINE OF FOE

DESTROYED DUGOUTS AT THIRD LINE OF ENEMY

Germans in Trenches Were Wiped Out by British.

LONDON, Jan. 30.— The report from British headquarters in France Monday night reads:—

We blew a mine yesterday afternoon south-west of Lens with good effect. Early this morning we raided the enemy's lines north-east of Vermelles, bombing his dugouts and inflicting many casualties.

The enemy's positions also were entered, by us last night north-east of Armentieres. Our troops penetrated the enemy's third line again and destroyed his dugouts, together with their occupants. A considerable number of Germans encountered in the trenches were killed; in addition a few prisoners were secured in the course of these two raids.

"There was considerable artillery activity on both sides during the day north of the Somme and also in the Ypres sector. We caused a large fire in the enemy's lines. Our heavy artillery has been active north of the Ancre and against the enemy's headquarters, billets and dumps in the neighborhood of Lens.

LOOKED LIKE RUMMAGE SALE

TABLE AT POLICE COURT HELD A VARIETY OF STOLEN ARTICLES.

The lawyers' table in the police court this morning had the appearance of a stall at a rummage sale. Piled on it were all kinds of trinkets, bedding, sheets, towels, dresses, waists, dolls, work boxes, chinaware, moccasins, furs—in fact everything that it is possible to imagine.

Two married women were charged with taking these goods from a residence where one of them was employed as a housemaid. This woman's husband is now in a hospital in England suffering from wounds received at the front. The other woman lives with her husband in the city and had helped to carry the goods away to her residence from time to time, while visiting her friend.

They both pleaded guilty to the charge and Police Magistrate Dumble reserved sentence until tomorrow morning. In the meantime one of the women will go with Detective Newhall to Lakefield, where some of the missing articles are stored.

An effort was made to allow the defendants their liberty until tomorrow, but the magistrate would not do so and remanded them to jail.

WHY GERMANY IS HOPING FOR AN EARLY END OF WAR

Military Campaign is Failure Everywhere Except in Roumania and Operations There Are Checked---Last Year Cost 600,000 Prisoners.

Very adequate reasons why Germany should be anxious to bring the war to an end are set forth in the appended message from the London Daily Chronicle correspondent with the French armies.

Germany and her allies, during the year that has just closed have lost in prisoners alone nearly 600,000 men and their operations have failed everywhere except in Roumania. The real map of the war begins to appear in clear outline as the statistics of the Allied powers for the past 12 months are completed. The enemy has one, and only one, considerable success to his credit in this period—the conquest of Roumania, the results of which are not yet measurable. Everywhere else he has more or less completely failed.

A result of peculiar interest is the number of prisoners taken during the past year by the Allies, which is as follows:—

Taken by Russians (in the offensive in Volhynia and Galicia alone), 400,000 Austrians and Germans; French, 78,500 Germans; British, 40,800 Germans; Italians, 52,250 Austrians; army of Saloniki, 11,173 Bulgars, Turks and Germans; total, 582,7 3.

These figures are still incomplete, and no full estimate of enemy losses can yet be made. But the balance of results in major operations, without counting the internal economic crisis produced by the blockade, would be sufficient to account for the urgency of the recent peace tentatives.

Chief Events

Apart from Roumania the blockade, and the submarine war, the chief events of the war in the period were five in number:

1. The battle of Verdun in which, as I have already shown, the Germans have lost about 70,000 men only to reach an absolute failure. This figure includes 26,660 prisoners. The French have won back almost the whole of the ground lost in the spring and now possess a clear ascendancy, the enemy having apparently abandoned all hope of attempting any further offensive.

2. The battle om the Somme. By the Franco-British offensive the German staff has been compelled to retained 128 divisions — about two-thirds of its whole forces — on the West front, 90 of these divisions being engaged and severely punished on the Somme.

Despite this concentration of force, it has lost 50 villages, over 100,000 men taken prisoner, 150 heavy cannon, 200 field guns and 1,500 mitrailleuses. The German losses on the Somme propably exceed 600,00 men; and the progress of the Allies is only interrupted by winter.

Italian Success

3. The Austrian offensive against Italy, abandoned under Russian pressure, was succeeded by the Italian offensive which took Gorlia, advanced in the Carso, and made 52,000 prisoners.

4. Falkenhayn, having failed on the West, was supplanted by Hindenburg, whose plans against Russia and in the Balkans were given full play. Successful in Roumania, he has utterly failed to cripple Russia, which in a series of operations conquered the whole of Bukowina and part of Galicia, making armies of prisoners, while the Grand Duke Nicholas drove the Turks out of Armenia.

5. The much smaller Allied army based upon Saloniki, under Gen. Sarrail, advanced in the autumn and inflicted successive defeats upon the Bulgar-Turk-German forces, recapturing Florina and Monastir. It has thus cut off the enemy from the Aegean, and exerted an important general influence upon the Eastern situation.

This is not all; the full conquest of the German colonies and the operations on the Egyptian frontiers and in Mesopotamia are other contributions to a fundamental change in the balance of military achievement. Though still able to exploit Belgium, Poland and Serbia, the enemy commences a new year with his best and largest forces broken and discouraged, and the home populations suffering extremes of privation. Such, briefly, is the real war map.

FARMER'S DOG FRIGHTENS TEAM OWNER MUST PAY $350 DAMAGES

LINDSAY, Jan. 30.—Judge Hopkins, of Haldimand, has given an interesting decision in the case of Merritt vs. Birdsall, in which the plaintiff sued the defendat for $500 damages caused by Birdsall's dog frighteing a team of horses driven by Merritt, causing them to run away and throwing out the plaintiff, his wife and daughter, causing injuries to them. The judge gave judgment for the plaintig for $350 and costs.

READ THE REVIEW'S NEW SERIAL STORY

On Thursday next The Review will begin the publication of its new serial, "Before Adam," one of the most powerful novels that was ever produced by the master hand of the late Jack London. You should subscribe at once in order to get the opening chapters of this story.

Read The Review if you would keep posted on local events, political and otherwise. The political situation is especially interesting in this riding at present, with the Opposition at odds with each other in a struggle for federal and provincial plums. We are adding new subscribers every day. We feel justified in asking every Conservative in the Peterborough constituencies to become a reader of The Review.

Speaking of love a man should look before he leaps—otherwise he may fall in.

TASTY LUNCHES FOR SCHOOL

HOW CAREFUL MOTHERS CAN PUT UP DAINTY MEALS FOR CHILDREN.

Boxes, pails or baskets, whichever the children's lunch is packed in, should be thoroughly aired every night to keep them clean and odorless.

As paraffin or waxed paper is indispensable, it is well to lay in a good supply; this may be purchased by the pound from any stationer. Every article in the box should be wrapped in waxed paper to keep the luncheon neat and dainty.

Paper drinking cups which may be bought by the dozen, or an aluminum one for ten cents, should always be packed in the lunch box. The child who is daintily provided for at home is sure to be clean and dainty in her ways, and it is a great mistake not to accustom a child to clean and fastidious habits. A small thermos bottle or a jelly glass with a tight cover should be included for liquids. A dozen or two of paper napkins and the outfit is complete.

Try to vary the menu slightly every day. This can easily be done in the filling of the sandwiches. Sandwiches offer a splendid opportunity for using up left-over meat and vegetables, and often the day's sandwiches are determined by the left-overs in the larder, but remember that there are fillings which appeal especially to children and give them those for a change when possible.

Brown bread spread with maple or brown sugar, white bread sandwiches filled with butter and sugar sauce, marmalade, jelly, apple butter, date butter, or peanut butter, make a welcome change.

Whole wheat bread is especially nourishing and wholesome, and sandwiches made of this are delicious spread with orange marmalade.

Beside the sandwiches there should be some other good cold meats, or meat loaf, potato chips, fruit, hard boiled eggs, or a thermos bottle of soup. Then the dessert. This should be simple and wholesome—gingerbread, sponge, or some other nutritious cake or custard, rice pudding, blanc-mange, fruit jellies, or stewed fruits put all in a jelly glass.

And above all, whatever you have for the child, be sure there is enough of it. Do not forget that children need food for growth. The needs of a growing child cannot be satisfied by a luncheon that may be sufficient for a grown person.

HORSEBACK RIDING

Women Should Learn Healthful Habit and Quit Side Saddle

The woman who cannot ride has missed one of the greatest joys in life, as well as one of the surest means to health and beauty. There is nothing quite equal to a canter along a river side, or a ride through the woods and over the fields. In an auto, you can only go on the highways, scudding along with a trail of dust behind, on the paths that man has brought to the highest state of civilization. On a horse, you can turn into the smallest side paths, or go where there's not a track to prove that people have preceded you. You can be close to Nature, ride through the woods, over the hills, breathing the pure air, enjoying the views and sensing the strange, sympathetic companionship of the horse beneath you. Riding will make you sure of eye, well-controlled in muscle. The actual exercise, up and down in the saddle, is the best thing for stomach troubles and impure blood. Men with gout find their best cure in horseback riding.

The side-saddle was invented for Ann Boleyn, one of Henry the Eighth's wives, because one foot was shorter than the other and she was ashamed of it. Other court ladies, of course, had to follow her fashion, and down to the country peasants the women all took to riding that way. In the days of prudery succeeding, when it was thought immodest even to think that a woman possessed two distinct legs, they thought side-saddles had been invented because they were ladylike, whereas they are apt to injure both horse's and rider's backs, and are useless on a spirited animal. Get a sensible riding habit, breeches, boots, skirt and coat. And ride whenever you can.

A homely truth is better than a handsome lie.

"SPRING ONIONS": POET

Famous Police Court Rhymester of London, England

"Spring Onions," or to give him his full title, Mr. William "Spring" Onions, the police court poet, and a well known character in East London, died at Ratcliff. Mr. Onions, after making police court history with a "record" of 500 appearances, came under the influence of the Church Army, and from that time onward chose to appear periodically before a magistrate to "report progress," and record his spiritual pilgrimage in strange verse—a kind of spring song—of his own composition.

SPORTING NEWS

OSHAWA JUNIORS DROP OUT AND PETES AS GROUP WINNERS MEET KINGSTON

First Game Will be Played Here Next Monday Night.

Peterborough Junior O.H.A. batters are district winners. Manager Craig was advised by the Oshawa management this morning that it had been decided to drop out of the junior race. Osborne was eliminated by the O.H.A. Rowden played with the Oshawa Intermediates last night against Whitby, and as the gaps could not be filled Manager Bradley decided on a withdrawal from junior operations.

The Petes have been notified that Kingston Juniors, winners of District No. 1, will play here next Monday night, the return game to be played in Kingston, probably on Friday night.

A chatty young debutante was taken into dinner by a Pennsylvania steel magnate, whom she was anxious to propitiate. Her attempts at conversation met with little response, however, and having exhausted nearly every conceivable subject she broached that of music.

"Do you like Beethoven's works?" she inquired, brightly.

"Never visited them," replied the other, testily; "what does he manufacture?"

Oshawa Wins 6-2

In Oshawa last night, the home intermediates, with Rowden of the juniors on the forward line, defeated Whitby by 6 to 2. It was the first of a brace of games to decide the group winner, each team having won five games and lost one.

C.P.R. SEVEN ARE WHITEWASHED

THE RAILWAY MEN INTRODUCED PROS, BUT TO NO AVAIL.

Brock St. rink was the scene of an exciting game of hockey last night when the Quaker Oats whitewashed the C.P.R. in superb style, the score being 7 to 0. The C.P.R. arrived with about half a team, but managed to collect enough pro's around the rink to make seven men, but this did not at all baffle the Quaker Oats bunch, who were full of pep from the first sound of the gong. The game started with a combination play by Malane and Sheehan, the latter scoring the first goal in about half a minute of play. It might be said that Sheehan was the star man; he was always working and his shooting counted most every time. Perry and Malane were also feature players for the Quaker Oats team. Quaker Oats did all their scoring in the first half and in the second half decided to give C.P.R. a chance, so allowed them to use eight men. The new man, who is not unpopular in hockey circles, saved C.P.R. from being whitewashed the second time. The good nature of the winners forces them to refrain from exposing the name of this pro.

It was indeed a sad affair, and if any man gloried in the defeat of the C.P.R. team it was the Quaker Oats defence man, Brooks, who for a number of years captained the C.P.R. hockey teams, although he admits that in those days he had a real team behind him, which were never known to be whitewashed.

Hoping C.P.R. are not entirely discouraged, the Quakers extend their deepest sympathy and wish them more luck with their future opponents. The victors hope to meet and defeat a few more teams while the ice is in good shape.

The game was refereed in a most satisfactory manner to both teams.

Quaker Oats line-up: Goal, Pidgeon, H. G.; defence, Pidgeon, A. M. Brooks; wings, Perry and Payne; rover, Sheehan; centre, Malane.

WHY THE CITIES ARE HEALTHIER

Child Welfare Better Regarded Than in the Country

In an impartial effort to ascertain the causes of present-day country life, so far as health and welfare are concerned, this fact must not be overlooked: Artificial selection, during the last half century especially, has drawn much of the best human stock from the country to the cities. Before that time the tide in the movement of population apparently carried more good human material to the rural regions than away from them. Another reason for the physical inferiority of country school children and of country people in general is that the science and art of human living, of conserving and improving human health and general human welfare, have advanced much more rapidly in the cities than in the country districts. The problems of safety and comfort as affected by congestion of population and many other conditions of urban life have thrust themselves upon human attention and have received much consideration.

The art of human care has progressed much more slowly in the country. The father in the city spends, on the average, a larger percentage of his income for the welfare of his children than does the father on the farm. The farmer, relatively, raises everything else more carefully and, as a rule, more successfully, than his children. Still another condition which helps to explain this astonishing inferiority of the country child is the environment. The country home and the country school are, on the average, less sanitary and healthful than the city home and the city school.

QUEER PSYCHIC PARTIES

Jester Has Fun Over All Sorts of Seances

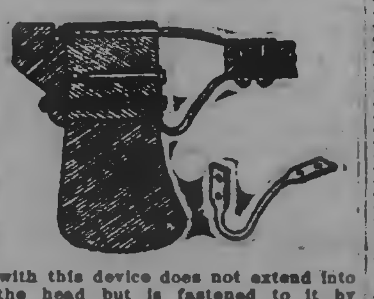
There is a craze for psychic parties. A psychic party is any old thing in the way of palmistry, crystal-gazing, thought-reading, or spirit manifestation, played equally well with a couple or a quantity. The medium is nearly always a "she," and nine times out of ten a nice looking one at that. Hence the popularity of seances with my unworthy sex, writes the jester. I personally have no objection to something really pretty diving down into the depths of my vest—always provided that there is no one else there who can use it in evidence against me. Most men things want little quiet diversions, and there is something undoubtedly soothing in seances—at any rate. Any pretty girl who desires to hold my hand and read the future from it has never to ask twice, as far as I am concerned.

There are times when I hope that one of these days thought-reading will become generally successful. It would save an infinite amount of trouble. On the other hand, there are moments when if everyone in the room got a direct line on what you were thinking about, you would precipitate a catastrophe. No! Taking it all round, I hope it does not become an art that can be practised by everyone.

ABSORBS SHOCK OF AXE

Device is Really a Shock Absorber For Axe Handles

A shock absorber for an ax has been designed, to minimize the vibrations which are felt in an ax handle when one is engaged in vigorous chopping. The handle of the implement fitted with this device does not extend into the head but is fastened to it by means of two short spring-steel rods. One of these is bolted to the upper edge of the wooden member and the other to the lower edge. The former extends through the head and is fastened by a nut; the latter describes a downward curve and is fastened to the head by two bolts. This gives the handle a resilient connection with the head without lessening the force of the latter's blow when it strikes into the wood.—Popular Mechanics.



LEARN HOW TO SWIM

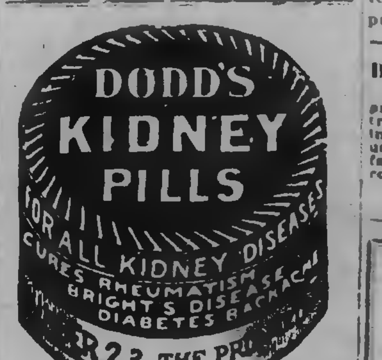
Good swimmers are drowned now and then, but most of the victims lose their lives because they are not able to swim. As between the swimmer and the non-swimmer the chances for escape in an emergency are as ten to one. The point of the important lesson is driven home with emphasis every summer, and still it apparently needs urging as much as it did twenty years ago. Most people seem to regard swimming not as an important accomplishment, but merely as an optional recreation, like golf, tennis or china painting. And yet any of us may be confronted at any time with a crisis that makes swimming an art more important for the moment than that of walking. The folly of the common neglect is heightened by the fact that it is an art as easily acquired as the ability to walk. And once acquired it is never lost.

AUTO MOTOR NOT ALL

Other Parts That Owners Need to Understand

A writer on motor cars says: It has often been said that owners know too much about the motor, and their knowledge of it tends to remove their attention from the clutch gearset and the remainder of the power transmission system. We all like to work around machinery we know something about, but in the case of motor car owners, they should endeavor to learn more about the running gear and its care.

Universals, brakes, wheel bearings and many other parts not as accessible as the spark plugs, seem to be forgotten until something goes wrong with them. The owner does not wait for a bearing cap to fall off before he fills the crankcase with oil, and similarly he should not wait until there is excess play in the universal before it gets its supply of grease or graphite. It is difficult to keep universals well lubricated, even when the housing is periodically filled. Thes parts are just as important as the motor, and should receive just as much attention and at frequent intervals. There will be no buckling, due to end play in the propellor shaft assembly or clutch, if the parts are properly lubricated and kept.



DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull, dizzy headache; or, if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside-bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily. It is a splendid health measure for it is more important to keep clean and pure on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing disease, while the bowel pores do.

The principle of bathing inside is not new, as million of people practice it. Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I hear that some of the politicians want to efface party lines."

"Yes?"

"Well, I hope they do. Having your telephone ring every time a neighbor puts in a call is a perfect nuisance!"

Mrs. R. W. Dixon of Oshawa is in the city attending the funeral of her sister, the late Mrs. Geo. Taylor.

Northern Potato Seed Best

Authorities agree that northern grown seed will give the best results in old Ontario and that immature seed does better than mature seed. "In parts of Scotland," said Professor Zavitz of Guelph, speaking on this point, "they grow an early crop of potatoes and then plant a later crop for seed purposes, and they find that the immature potatoes make the best seed, and the same result has been found at the college; potatoes not fully matured make better seed than a well matured potato."

Arm Is For Food

A rather curious fact is that the bones of the arm are arranged primarily for the purpose of carrying the hand to the mouth—food being, of course, the first necessity of life. If you do not believe it, try it for yourself, and see how much more naturally, when your arm is bent, your hand moves in that direction than in

TIPS FOR SEWING

When embroidering net, chiffon, tule or any other thin material, baste paper beneath it. This gives a firmness to the material, and the design will be much clearer when completed. Tear the paper away afterward.

When making a flat, round collar or one of the many sailor varieties now in vogue, cut a pattern from tissue paper first and fit it to the neck and shoulders before cutting the material.

Always wear a white apron when sewing on dark material, as this relieves the strain on the eyes.

Red Currant Wine

Fluffy Eggs

Beat one [illegible] of the four whites from the H[illegible] sauce with two more whites, and then add the two yolks beaten well. Place in a buttered baking dish, cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake until brown or the eggs have set.

PAID RESPECTS TO THE LATE DR. J. N. THOMPSON

OMEMEE, Jan. 30. A very impressive service was held in the Methodist Church on Wednesday afternoon in memory of the late Dr. Thompson, the church being filled with people from all denominations. Among the speakers present were Rev. Mr. Wickett, Rev. Mr. James, Rev. Mr. Butler and Rev. Mr. Downe. All spoke very feelingly of the great loss the family, Omemee and the church had sustained. For many years Dr. Thompson was superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school. He organized the adult Bible class, which now registers about thirty names. He also had charge of the home department in Sunday school work, and was never happier than when engaged in work of this kind. The floral tributes were many and varied, showing the high esteem in which the doctor was held. The funeral left his late residence on Sturgeon street, and proceeded to the 9 o'clock train on Thursday morning, interment taking place in Prospect Cemetery, Toronto.

Dr. Thompson passed peacefully away after an illness of seven weeks' duration from blood poisoning. The doctor was one of Omemee's most valued residents, having practised in our midst for over thirty years, and he will be greatly missed by both young and old. Those left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father are Mrs. Thompson, Messrs. Wesley, of St. Paul, Robert, of Toronto, William, of Edmonton, Mrs. Watson, of Coboconk, Miss Annie, of Toronto, Mrs. Cook, of Chentu, China, and Mrs. Coulter, of Omemee.

Mrs. A. E. Bryson and son Hillis, who have been visiting Mrs. T. B. Laidley for the past month, returned to their home in Cobalt last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy of Orono attended the memorial service for the late Dr. Thompson on Wednesday.

Mrs. Maunder of Lindsay visited friends in Omemee this week.

Among those who are moving into the village are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. John Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Davidson.

Mr. Albert Stinson has purchased the old Grandy residence on King street, and purposes building a fine new home on the property.

The Misses Morden, Millard, Fair and Clarke visited in Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Carrie Stinson was a business visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

LOCAL NEWS IN GENERAL

TRAINING THE TASTE OF YOUNG CHILDREN

Let Them Have Their Fling For A While—Cannot Start Too Young To Teach

A house, to be the ideal environment for a growing child, should be beautiful, of course, but it should have the beauty of simplicity, and find the beauty in its surroundings without depending on elaborate furnishings.

The time to begin to train is with very young children. The place is the home. If a child is brought up in a tasteful home it will unconsciously grow up with a cultivated taste. In addition, of course, it is well to note the child's individuality; if it seems dull to music, painting, color, form, help develop its taste along these particular lines.

Gaudy Colors

Perhaps the best way to train a child's taste, if the child seems rather hopelessly deficient, is to let him work things according to his own ideas for a little while. If a little girl likes gaudy colors, let her have a frock of a gaudy color, which she herself chooses. She will, the chances are, soon tire of it. If the small boy likes impossible ornaments and hangings in his room, let him have them. Not only will he himself dislike them soon enough, but his friends will doubtless make fun of them—and so they will become intolerable to him.

Boy Saw Funny Mistake

Once there was a boy of 9 or 10 years who chose for the wall paper of his room a dainty design with pink background upon which there were medallions showing little French maids in all their finery. His mother remonstrated with him, telling him his choice was not boyish, that it was babyish, a nursery paper, or at best one for a very little girl. But he wanted that paper, and he got it. It had not been on his wall long before he realized his mistake of course he had to put up with it for months, but its presence there taught him a lesson in interior decorating he never forgot.

There is always some wise guy on deck who says "I told you so" when the unexpected happens.

"ALADDIN" PLAY OF HIGH ORDER

GRAND FINALE ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED BY GRAND AUDIENCE.

Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp proved to be one of the most popular presentations ever given on the stage of the Grand Opera House. Long before the first curtain ascended last night, every seat in the theatre was sold out and late commers were denied the privilege of being numbered among the audience.

Aladdin is a brillant production, revealing a wealth of scenic effects, georgeous costumes, pretty girls and well sprinkled with good music and catchy songs which are sung by capable singers. The comedy parts are all good and last night the funsters put over a number of witticisms of a local color. The musical numbers of "Aladdin" are particularly tuneful. Chief among them must be noted, The Silver from the Silvery Moon, The Lantern and the Moth, The Light That Leads Me Home, Revenge, Jenny my Own True Love, and Willow Pattern Plate.

The grand finale is a winner, the patriotic song Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies being introduced along with The March of the Nations, and concluding with Britannia and the British Bulldog. The finale was applauded to the echo and when the company sang God Save the King the audience joined in heartily.

The company will play a return engagement.

It might advantage the public if the weather forecaster would decline to co-operate with the coal forestallers.

WHEELS OF AUTO ASSOCIATION WELL LUBRICATED FOR SEASON

Officers Are Elected and Strong Committees Formed---Fee Remains at $3---W. H. Lytle to Issue Licences.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., last ear acting-president of the Auto Association in the absence of Dr. Sutton, who is overseas, was elected president for 1917, at the annual meeting of the association held last ight in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. Dr. Sutton was moved up to onorary president. Mr. C. E. Canfield, who took over the reins of ecretary-treasurer when Mr. Keyes oved to Toronto, was elected to hat office. Mr. R. H. Turner, last ar chairman of the membership ommittee, was elected vice-president.

It was a great meeting in more ays than one. In the first place, the ttendance was both large and enusiastic. In fact it was probably he best attended annual meeting r some years. And it was a repesentative gathering, including as did the auto owner who uses his r for pleasure, only, the business an who combines pleasure with siness and gets a double benefit om his car, and the salesmen who ow more about the fine points of car and the worst points about a d road than does any other indi ual on the sunny side of Mother rth.

cense Issuer

There was sufficient humor sandched with the business to make meeting anything but dry. One the most enthusiastic of the asiation members paved the way general laugh when, in sugg Police Chief Thompson as a and properly accredited person to d out the auto licenses, said that Chief was "always in the same ce." But the Chief didn't land job, in spite of this mark of rit.

It was Charlie Banks who spilled beans. He understood that Mr. H. Lytle, whose business offices at the corner of Aylmer and rlotte St., and who intends to chase an automobile this spring enter the ranks of the association as a qualified member, had recommended for the appointt of license distributor.

Nobody was sure that the apoint t would be made, but supposed would come about. Mr. Canfield erstood from Mr. Keyes in To o that the Government would ider a recommendation from he tion.

Amys felt hurt. He explained he local body had had the distion of licenses placed in the s of the local association and ld not like the principle wrapped n the new order of things by h the appointment would be under the patronage system. considered Mr. Lytle a first class to handle the job and believed Lytle, if appointed, would fill bill. Dr. Amys moved a resoluof protest to be forwarded to Government, objecting to the iple of the change. This was in the meeting and the majorf the gathering felt that it were to leave the Government. But as the minutes speeded ome ties or other attractions led the attendance and finally President Gillespie put the on before the meeting for a decision, most of the opposihad disappeared through the and the protest carried.

25th WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Leander MacDonald, of New York, who announce the celebration of their silver wedding on Friday, Feb. 2. Mr. MacDonald is the youngest brother of the late Alfred MacDonald of Point St. Charles, and was born and brought up in Peterborough. Mr. MacDonald adopted the stage as a profession and his talented life partner works with him in vaudeville, they being known before the footlights as Chas. and Sadie MacDonald. Peterborough friends will be pleased to know that Mr. MacDonald is meeting with much success in the theatrical world and he hopes to return to Peterborough for a visit. His nearest approach to his home town has been several successful engagement in Toronto. His address is 38 W 65th St, New York. This week Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald are playing at Scolley Theatre, Boston, Mass.

MRS. H. FULLER THE WINNER OF OAK HALL CLOCK

POLICE SERGT. KIDD CALLED MR. MAHER FROM HIS BED AT 3 A.M.

STOPPED AT 10:56 P.M.

The clock contest conducted by Oak Hall Clothiers on Dollar Day created considerable interest until the clock itself settled all speculation by stopping at four minutes to eleven last night, Thursday, Jan. 30. The winner, Mrs. H. Fuller, 518 Gilmour St., really won it twice, two of her estimates reading 11.10 p.m. and 11.30 p.m. respectively.

The next closest estimate was by Miss Ethel Stevens, 554 Rogers St., with 11.56 p.m., followed by Mr. Fred Cann, R.R. No. 2,10 p.m.; and Miss Jessie Cameron, 708 Stewart St, 9.15 p.m.

The first person to personally notify Mr. Maher of the fact that the clock had stopped was Sergt. Kidd of the police force, who got Mr. Maher out of bed at three o'clock this morning. However, on coming to the store this morning a notice signed by M. Pakenham, Douro St., East City, and dated 11 o'clock, was found. Both men will get a prize and are asked to call into Oak Hall.

The following is the certificate of the Judge in connection with the contest:--

I, R. M. Glover, wish to state that I have checked over the estimates in the Oak Hall contest and find that Mrs. H. Fuller, 518 Gilmour St., is the winner of the clock for the nearest estimate. I have also checked over the Oak Hall sales for the period in which the contest was conducted, with the number of tickets issued, and find the tickets issued to be well within the sales for the period.

R. M. Glover.

PTE. JEWEL WINDOVER

PTE. WARREN WINDOVER

Three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Windover, of Buckhorn, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and went overseas. Ptes. Warren and Jewel have been serving in the trenches for some time. Pte. Deyncourt was invalided home, and has since spent some time in a hospital here.

CONSPIRACY TO KILL PREMIER OF ENGLAND

Three Women and One Man Under Arrest.

PLOT TO POISON

Mr. Arthur Henderson Was Also Marked For Death.

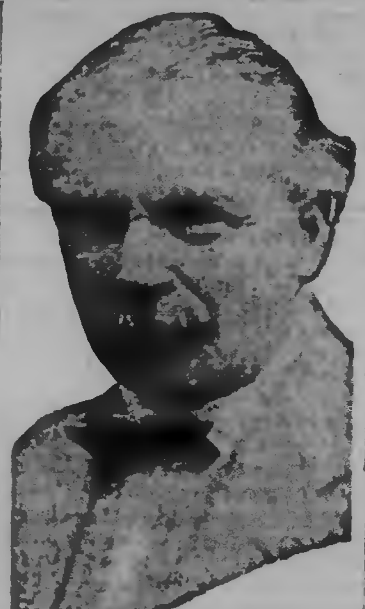
(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 31. — A conspiracy to murder Premier Lloyd George is reported by the Daily Sketch, which says arrests have been made in this connection. The persons arrested are described as "three suffragettes and a man, a conscientious objector to military service."

LONDON, Jan. 31. — Mrs. Wheeldon, of Derby, her daughter, Hattie, Mrs. Mason, another daughter and her husband, Alf Mason, have been arrested charged with conspiring together to murder Lloyd George. Details are yet unknown, but it is understood that poisoning was to be the method of bringing about the Premier's death.

DERBY, Jan. 31. — Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, her two daughters and the husband of one, Alfred Geo. Mason, were charged at the Guildhall here today with conspiring to murder Premier Lloyd George and Arthur Henderson.

Defendants deny the charge and refuse to make any statement. They were remanded until Saturday.



PREMIER LLOYD GEORGE

MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES.

KINGSTON, Jan 31. Major F. Walsh, C.A.V.C., brother of Mr. Edward Walsh, of the firm of Crawford & Walsh, has been specially mentioned in despatches by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the British forces, for distinguished and gallant service.

Bobcaygeon May Not Receive Legacy

WILL OF LATE MISS ORR IS IN THE COURTS.

BOBCAYGEON, Jan. 31.—A number of suggestions are being made at the present time respecting the disposition of the legacy of $10,000 to the village of Bobcaygeon by the will of the late Miss Orr, which are quite worthy. It is said the will is at the present time before the courts for construction, and one of the matters for decision is whether the village is entitled to this legacy.

BLACK PORTER PLED IN VAIN

WIFE AND KIDDIES AND "BRUDDERS" IN TRENCHES DIDN'T SAVE HIM.

PORT HOPE, Jan. 31. — "Yer Honor Jedge, I wouldn't wrong anybody, honest, Jedge. I tried to do my duty on the train, but some friends gave me two drinks. I have a wife and two kiddies at home, Jedge, and no one to support 'em. My two brudders are in the trenches doing their bit." At this stage the darkey broke down and had a real good cry.

He was in police court charged with being drunk in a public place. The defendant answered to the name of Roy Howard. He was porter on the G. T. R. flyer, and he became intoxicated while on the train. As he did not have $10 to pay his fine he went to jail for twenty days.

KING'S APPEAL

Recruits For Volunteer Force For Home Defence.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—King George has sent a letter to the lords-lieutenant of counties throughout the country appealing to men over military age to enrol in the volunteer force for home defence. After expressing thanks to the territorials who have gone to France, the King says:

"While they are thus fighting the battles of the Empire abroad we must organize and equip a force to take their places as defenders of these shores in case of invasion." The King refers to the fact that some volunteers already have been enrolled and that the Duke of Connaught has been appointed their commander.

FOLLOWED HIS WIFE TO GRAVE

CAUGHT COLD WHILE HE WAS HANGING OUT CLOTHES.

A sad death took place in Fenelon Falls on Sunday last when Mr. William Elliott passed away after a short illness. Two weeks ago Mr. Elliott buried his wife, and a day or so after caught cold while hanging out some clothes. Later he went down town without an overcoat on and was again chilled. Death is attributed to these chills.—Lindsay Warder.

BRITISH LOSSES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, Jan. 31. — The total British casualties for the month of January are 900 officers and 31,394 men.

OPS FARMER HEAVY LOSER

LOST HIS BARN, GRAIN AND STOCK BY FIRE.

LINDSAY, Jan. 31. — In a fire which yesterday destroyed his large barn, William Reeds, a farmer in Ops, lost all the season's grain, hay and straw, forty head of cattle, twenty-seven sheep, ten pigs and a flock of hens. The horses were saved.

A thresher was at work near the barn, and it is thought a spark from the engine started the fire at the barn.

EIGHT RECRUITS SIGN UP WITH THE 256th BATT.

SERGT. R. H. LEACH IS NOW LIEUTENANT IN THE 247TH.

MILITARY NEWS.

Sergt. Stanley, who is recruiting for the 256th Railroad Construction Batt. has signed up eight men since Saturday. They are Ptes. W. O. Edwards, David Edwards, 255 Cady St., Jas. Foster, 359 Roger St., Jas. Marshall, John Broadwood, of Nassau; J. W. Thompson, 137 Lake St.; William Pollard, Grand Cent. Apts.; W. J. Maudsley, 610 Bethune St.

Sergt. R. H. Leach has been appointed lieutenant under date of Jan. 29th, in the 247th Battn.

Capt. Thomson, Paymaster of the 247th, left at noon today for Havelock to pay the men stationed there.

Recruiting is progressing slowly but surely at the Armories. This morning two men were added to the strength in Ptes. Patrick Flanagan and Wm. F. Drain.

Sergt. J. C. Gainey, of the 247th who has been in Kingston taking a course in bayonet fighting and physical training has returned to duty here.

FIRST AND SECOND LINE TRENCHES OF FOE ARE PENETRATED BY FRENCH TROOPS

Defenders of Enemy Positions Put Out of Action.

IN LORRAINE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 31. — (Official.) — In the Woevre district French batteries have directed an efficient fire upon detachments of the enemy in the region of Eix and Abucourt. Near the latter place a reconnaissance of the enemy has been disposed by our fire.

In Lorraine one of our detachments at a point south of Leintrey penetrated first and second lines of German trenches. The defenders of these positions were put out of action and we brought back about fifteen prisoners.

A surprise attack upon an enemy position in the region of Moncel was easily successful.

In the vicinity of Moncel as well as in the Vosges, at Chapelloté and at Reichackerkopf, there have been numerous engagements between patrols.

Further information has confirmed reports that German airplanes reported as seriously damaged January 30, were actually brought to the ground at a point northeast of Bois Haile.

WITHDRAWAL BY RUSSIANS IN RIGA REGION

GERMANS MADE ATTACKS NEAR THE KALNSEM-CHLOKA HIGHWAY.

FOE WAS ARRESTED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 31. — German forces attacked Russian lines southwest of Riga today, an official statement reports. The attack in general was arrested, but near Kalnsem Chloka high road Russian forces were withdrawn two-thirds of a mile after the assault.

COLONIES WON BY ALLIES LOST FOREVER TO GERMANY

Will Never Return to German Rule Declares Secretary for Colonies.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 31. — "Colonies captured from Germany during the war will never be returned," said Walter Hume Long, Secretary of State for the Colonies, speaking as a representative of the overseas dominions in an address today. "We acquire possession of different German colonies in various parts of the world as a consequence of this war," he said. "Let no man think these territories will ever return to German rule."

809 SOLDIERS SAVED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 31.—It is officially announced that the transport Admiral Magon, with 950 soldiers for Salonika, escorted by destroyers, was torpedoed by a submarine last Thursday. Of those on board, 809 were saved. The German admiralty announced this on Monday.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1917

SIR SAM NO WELCHER.

SIR SAM HUGHES has made his long-looked-for speech in Parliament. The doughty ex-Minister of Militia, to judge from the reports of that address now at hand, certainly did not surprise his personal and political friends, but he must have disappointed his opponents. He remains faithful to his old party and to his colleagues. There is to be no flop to the Opposition that have been wooing him with fair words ever since he resigned from the cabinet, and stood ready with outstretched arms to welcome him to the fold.

But Sir Sam is not to be tempted. With biting sarcasm he says he can see nothing in the house of the Opposition to induce him to seek a haven there. The associations are not to his liking. He refuses to own allegiance to a leader who could not only tolerate but aid and abet a candidate in Dorchester who breathed disloyalty in his every public utterance during the campaign.

Sir Sam may be a party man, but he is first of all a loyal British subject. With him the winning of the war has first place over the fortunes of factions or individuals. Men, after all, are not essentials. They come and go, but the party that upholds the Empire must go on forever.

"I shall stand by the party," he says, "when the party sees its duty in the war and towards the soldier, but when the party fails to see that duty, then I will have something to say." Everyone knows that Sir Sam Hughes means every word he utters. What he would say under such circumstances would certainly be worth hearing. But, fortunately for the country, the necessity for this promised criticism does not exist.

It is only natural that a man so intensely human as Sir Sam Hughes should regard himself as having been unfairly dealt with, when the almost superhuman exertions he made in the interests of the Empire are taken into consideration. Yet no one can induce him to look upon himself as a martyr. His is the healthy temperament of the soldier who is satisfied with the consciousness that he has done his duty as light was given him.

The hero in the trenches goes to the extent of his powers, and dies without a complaint. Edith Cavell did what she could as her humane and patriotic instincts dictated, and then, with uncovered eyes, bravely faced the barbarians' firing squad without a tremor and with no murmur at the price she was paying for her devotion to country and humanity.

BEGINS TRADE WAR.

THE NEW ZEALAND Government, by order-in-council, has decided to put a fifty per cent. tariff, which would of course be prohibitory, against all goods coming from the country of an enemy. This is preparedness in commerce after the war.

Premier Massey does not think it necessary to await the action of the Imperial Conference. He is suggesting nothing nor holding out his own action as an example, but he modestly hopes that the Mother Country and the rest of the Dominions will do as he and his cabinet have decided to do.

TRADUCING HIS OWN NATION.

POULTNEY BIGELOW, an American, according to his own allegation, and a journalist and lecturer by profession, has been in Toronto enlightening the natives on problems, social and political, across the line. Mr. Bigelow was his own advance agent, and he knows how to draw a full house. He says hard things about his own country and people from the president down to the consular agent. This tickles the fancy of Torontonians, and they flocked to hear him, in carriages, automobiles and on foot.

This is a peculiar characteristic of he Canadian people, especially in such centres of culture as Toronto claims to be. When a man runs for public office in the United States, especially for presidential honors, and is rejected, Canada throws its hospitable doors wide open and bids him to a banquet or some other public function. The defeated comes, still smarting from the pain of his defeat, and bitterly assails the people who failed to appreciate his virtues. The more family secrets he discloses the more he is applauded by his sympathetic hearers. William Jennings Bryan and ex-President Taft have already appeared several times in this role, and the services of Judge Hughes as a public instructor and talebearer are still available.

Poultney Bigelow dragged the American household skeleton from the closet and paraded it for the entertainment of Toronto. He knows his art to perfection. If he confined himself to legitimate cut-and-dried topics, the people would not turn out to hear him. Assailing everything American assures him an audience. Toronto people have a weakness for the bizarre and for hearing ill stories of their neighbors.

Let an old-time evangelist travel through the country and he fails to arouse the interest of the unregenerated. Let "Billy" Sunday come with his startling slang and his rag-time religion, and the overflow is turned away from the doors. A religious teacher fails to draw if he confines himself to the regular work of his church. Let him renounce his former faith and proceed to say hard things about the creed and its disciples and the people flock to hear him by the hundreds.

There is something in the average human being that craves gossip and loves scandal. Poultney Bigelow knows this characteristic, and made the most of it in Toronto to his own profit. Preaching such doctrine in his own country would in all probability make him a target for decayed vegetables and over-ripe eggs. His Toronto performance has already attracted the attention of Congress, and an investigation is to be made to ascertain whether the blue ruin apostle is really an American citizen or merely posing as such for the money and fame that there may be in it.

No Canadian public man could go to the United States, carry out the program of Mr. Bigelow, and retain his caste at home. It is Canada's good fortune that the attempt is seldom made. However our politicians may rant and rave in their own household, they wisely refrain from taking their neighbors into their confidence.

No man who leaves home to traduce his own people can be regarded as either a true patriot or a model citizen. The pity of it is that he would be able to find in Canada dupes who not only listen to him with delight, but accept his tirades as gospel truth.

PEACE WITHOUT VICTORY.

IT IS GRATIFYING to receive the assurances of The Examiner that all is harmony in the local Liberal camp and that Mr. Gillespie is to be permitted to tempt fate still further by being left a clear field for the nomination. We insist, however, that there is more truth in the story of a Gillespie-Gordon tug-of-war, published in The Review last Saturday, than our contemporary is willing to admit. It is altogether likely that the promoters of the scheme did not consider it necessary to take The Examiner into their confidence, being averse to diverting it from its great editorial mission of slamming the Borden Government and incidentally pecking irritably at the Federal representative from West Petreborough.

The Examiner must know that the party which it represents is in desperate straits right here at home and in every section of the Dominion, both in the Federal and Provincial fields. Mr. Gillespie did redeem the riding, it is true, but it was by a run of luck not likely to occur again in a political lifetime. If he runs again he will be the nominee of one faction in a party that is hopelessly divided against itself and in which not the premiership but the leadership of its own forces will be the main contention. Mr. Gillespie or any other man nominated by the Liberals will find his most formidable opponents where he would naturally look for supporters. It matters little to the Conservatives who is nominated for the Legislature by the Opposition, although in courtesy and by presedent Mr. Gillespie is entitled to it.

We are sorry that staid village journalism does not appeal to our contemporary. We have noticed with regret a tendency on its part to favor the brand with the saffron tints, divorce cases and the like salacious chronicles lifted bodily from the yellow journals of New York. Last evening, too, it pressed for a front seat in a chorus girl style of exhibition which, if staged in a local theatre, would probably be tightly lidded down by the police authorities.

We can stand any line of talk from our neighbor but its assumptions of virtue and high-mindedness. It speaks of these serious times demanding candor and courage. Molly-coddle methods are conducive to neither, and the senseless crusade it carries on against the Administration does certainly not tend to help the cause of the Empire. If the Borden Government was as villainous as The Examiner represents it, Canadians might take their chances with a Teutonic invasion. Alien rulers could hardly be more rascally or self-seeking.

THERE IS seldom any doubt as to where Sir Sam Hughes stands, and less now than ever.

A SPEAKER at a Hamilton recruiting meeting likened the young men who go to the United States to escape military duty to rats deserting a sinking ship. The simile is apt only as regards the rodents, for the ship is in no immediate danger of submersion if all hands stand by to man the pumps.

As to Russia

(Boston Globe.)

Atrocious and cold-blooded as the circumstances of Rasputin's death sound, there is this to remember: The more rigid the form of government the more violent are the means necessary to overrun it. If a man cannot be voted out of a position of authority he is likely to be shot out of it. It is only when a government sits on the safety valve that the boiler bursts.

FOR THOSE IN FRANCE

He heard the call of country clear;
He weighed no circumstance;
Afar from those who held him dear
He lies tonight—in France.

The tears of pride were in her eye;
All love was in her glance;
She sent him forth, if need, to die,
To die for you—in France.

His babies lisp their prayers to Him
Who errs by no mischance;
While in the trenches, bleak and grim,
Their father fights in France.

For lips that pray, and eyes that weep,
And hearts that feel the lance,
Dig down, dig down, dig down, down deep
And pay—for those in France.

A Literary Surprise

(Boston Transcript.)

Considered as a new proposition, as a literary surprise, the Bible is full of fresh interest. There is a real fascination in tracing out the history and characteristics of those truly remarkable people, the Zamzummims, forgotten by the preachers and ignored by the Sunday School teachers.

When we were young and wearied with the Children of Israel, we felt a terrible desire to go over to the Land of Moab and play; and out of that desire we may now, if we will but follow the indications of the Scriptures and the aid of some outside authors, take many delightful rambles in that lurid trans-Jordan region.

As another example, there is genuine biographical and literary interest in compiling all that is known of the history of that holy woman who accompanied St. Paul on his preaching journeys, and to whom reference is made in the ninth chapter of First Corinthians.

Out-of-door people, nature-lovers, have a storehouse of interest in the Old Testament; if anyone is incredulous as to this, let him seek out and study all the references to the hills and the mountains, and then all the references to the sea. There is no finer testimony to the bliss of the precious things of the lasting hills, and of the fruits brought forth by the sun, than will be found in the 33rd chapter of Deuteronomy.

The Book of Daniel is as eloquent, sometimes as epigrammatic, as "Hamlet." The cultivation of the literary side of the Bible will repay not only the orator, but the writer. He who reads it will multiply his visions and may use its similitudes with excellent effect.

Lincoln and Asquith

(Contemporary Review.)

Ability to see a problem whole, and steadfastness in dealing with it; great deliberation in action; unlimited patience; continuous capacity to rise to great occasions; readiness to accept responsibility. To these should be added the not less valuable and equally rare qualities of loyalty to colleagues and supreme capacity in the management of men. A minor but important similarity is the accuracy in speech of the two men—an accuracy probably unexampled among statesmen.

Why Prohibition Advances

(Manchester Union.)

Recently three men boarded the Boston and Maine train at Concord. They repaired to the smoking compartment of the car to engage in a serious discussion of affairs of moment in which all three were deeply interested. Into the midst of the group, before the train started, lurched a well-dressed young man, maudlin drunk. Repeatedly he attempted to interrupt the discussion and finally descended to abuse when no attention was paid to him. And yet some people marvel at the rapid spread of sentiment in favor of stringent, effective prohibition on a national scale!

War is Healthy Work

(The Quest.)

Normally men exposed to the terrible climatic conditions encounterer during the last two years would have died by hundreds of thousands, and men meeting with physical injuries in civil life at all comparable to those quite common in the trenches would collapse under the nerve shock, quite apart from any treatment they might receive. But they survive now; and their cheerfulness in suffering is one of the most inspiring things that is to be witnessed. Even ordinary diseases seem to get no hold on them, once they reach the front; for the returns of sickness throughout both winters have been actually below the normal for the same months in such healthy garrisons as Aldershot and Salisbury.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

A well-known politician at Ottawa was explaining to his ten-year-old son the proceedings at the opening of Parliament. The youngster appeared greatly interested in the chaplain and his opening prayer.

"Oh, he prays for the members, doesn't he?" asked the boy.

"No," said the father grimly; that's not quite the way. He just gets up and take a look at the members and then he prays for the country."

A good story comes from Saloniki. It concerns Gen. Sarrail and an American journalist.

The latter landed at the port one morning and immediately set out to present his credentials to the French Commander-in-Chief. Now all the pictures of Gen. Sarrail that the journalist had ever seen showed him as being heavily bearded whereas the man he was presented to wore only a moustache.

"When did you cut off your beard, General?" asked the American with true Yankee bluntness.

"Yesterday," he was told.

"Hurrah!" he cried. "I've got a scoop."

And he hurried to the telegraph office and cabled a column "story" to his paper in New York, beginning with the words, "General Sarrail has cut off his beard."

Returning to the Commander-in-Chief's quarters shortly afterwards, it occurred to him to ask the reason for the metamorphosis.

"Well," said Sarrail, "I overhead the other day an English Tommy remark that I looked like 'The wild man from Borneo.' I didn't relish the comparison, so I went and got shaved."

"Good story!" exclaimed the American, as he took a hurried leave preparatory to paying another visit to the telegraph office; "that'll make another column."

"Algy, I want you to buy me a book."

"I am glad you are becoming literary, my dear."

"Fudge. This article says one way to acquire a good carriage is to practice balancing a book on your head."

EDITOR'S MAIL.

Editor Review: The duty of the hour, the call to economy, as voiced by statesmen, financiers and the press, revives again the urgent need of training the children of our schools in a primary way in the very essential science economics. The school savings bank is the rational means to this end and possesses the advantage of teaching the theory by practice. Penny savings, in its formative influence on the public school scholar, is as truly an educational factor as mathematics, and should be regarded by our school board from an educational as well as an economic standpoint.

Its introduction adds no mental burden to the overtaxed scholar as its effect is inspirational and stimulative, begetting an encouraging sense of accomplishment and worth and a consciousness of ability to achieve, that will incidentally inspire effort in more difficult tasks.

Its benefits are almost immediately appreciable (a great factor of success) and its possibilities in counteracting the spendthrift tendencies of the times are well worth a trial. Economic conditions of the present and future demand that the subject be no longer considered as optional or merely a good idea.

Efficiency, thrift, economy, must be our practice if we are to hold our true position among nations, for these factors will be our real competitors.

It was the peasant's stocking that saved France from the economic consequences of 1870 and it is rendering the same service today. For years to come we shall not be able to borrow abroad; the people of our own land must keep the wheels of industry turning and development active.

The hard school of pioneer privations furnished most of us and our fathers with an economic education; children of the present day have no such experiences, and therefore education in thrift is an exceptionally important necessity.

Many young men of the present time have wasted the equivalent of a modest home before the time of marriage arrives, and education is the only means of counteracting this serious and fundamental loss.

The man with a financial reserve is the balance wheel in a dull period or financial crisis and conservation of resources is both an individual benefit and national advantage.

The school is the most effective place to operate as 100 scholars will participate by reason of the natural effect of example, where a dozen might go down town to a penny bank if one existed, and many a careless spendthrift career would be turned in the pathway of constructive citizenship.

Local difficulties of operation are said to have prevented our school board from giving this matter a test. We are either meeting difficulties or mounting them in every other line and no doubt it can be done in this case; "necessity is the mother of invention," and what other cities have done Peterborough can do.

Surely the new needs of the time are sufficient incentive and if our school board measures up to this imperative need, it will serve the present, safeguard the future, and do more to ensure the working man a "full dinner pail" than any policy of the politicitn.

EDDY'S MATCHES

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Quick Flannel Cakes

Beat two eggs very light. Stir them into one pint of sour milk. Add slowly one teaspoon of soda, a little salt and flour enough to make a thin batter. Bake on hot griddle and serve with honey.

Pork Soup Stock

Roast pork bones will make an excellent brown soup stock. Remove all fat from bones. Add gravy if any was left. Add one quart of cold water one bay leaf, a bit of sage and one clove of garlic. Boil slowly one hour and strain. Cut cold boiled macaroni into small pine. Add to soup stock. Heat hot and serve.

Potato Pancakes

Peel six potatoes and allow to soak in cold water four hours. Grate them and allow to drain ten minutes. To every pint of grated potato allow one-half teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of flour, a little pepper. Beat this all together. Fold in two well beaten eggs. Drop by spoonfuls on a hot buttered griddle or spider. Turn, browning on both sides. Send to table at once with apple jelly.

Whole Wheat Griddle Cakes

Sift one quart of whole wheat flour with one teaspoon of baking powder and one teaspoon of salt into bowl. Add one tablespoon of melted butter one tablespoon of sugar, two eggs well beaten, and two cups of milk.

Beat all together for three minutes. Bake in even round cakes on griddle. Serve with quince honey.

Spanish Steak

Pound one-half cup of flour with a half teaspoon of salt into an inch thick, medium sized round steak.

Slice one onion, seed and chop two green peppers, one clove of garlic, cut in three pieces, peel and slice six large tomatoes. Put into skillet with two tablespoons of butter. Allow to cook slowly until it forms thick sauce. Turn sauce into bowl. Put two tablespoons of butter into skillet. Heat hot. Put in steak. Turn several times to sear. When steak is brown add sauce. Cover and simmer forty minutes. Do not allow the sauce to cook brown, add a little stock or water as needed. Serve steak and sauce in centre of platter with border of cooked rice with dash of curry powder.

Escalloped Onions

Select small, even-sized onions. Cook until tender, but not boiled to pieces. Drain and arrange in baking dish and add a little minced parsley. Cover with sauce made with two cups of milk put into double boiler to boil. Rub to cream two tablespoons of butter with one of flour. When milk is boiling add the butter and flour mixture. Boil until smooth. When this sauce has been added to the onions and parsley put thin layer of bread crumbs on top and bake in oven until crumbs are brown.

Beet Relish

Six large beets put into boiling water, cooked until tender, taking great care not to break the skin when cooked put into clear cold water and the skin will slip off. Set aside and when cold chop not too fine. Add three cups of cabbage cut in strings or on slaw cutter. Over these put one even tablespoon of salt and allow to stand one hour. Drain. Heat one quart of mild vinegar with one cup of sugar and add one teaspoon of whole spice and one-half cup of chopped sweet green pepper. Turn over beet and cabbage mixture. Ready for use in two days.

Mock Crab

Take about one-quarter of a pound of cheese and mash it with a fork till crumbly; add a little mustard, pepper and salt, a few drops of vinegar and one-half teaspoonful relish. Prepare some slices of toast, put the mixture in rough heaps on top and put into the oven or under the grill for a few minutes. It must be served immediately. A little parsley may be added if the flavor is liked.

What is the Difference?

When a man deserts his wife and children, leaving them without support, the world regards him with contempt.

What is the differnt between desertion and death, if the wife and children are left without support, in either case when the husband and father failed through negligence to provide for them?

The above may sound a little harsh. I guess it does; but it may not have struck you that way before, and if the husband is insurable, is there really any difference?

Answer this vital question now that your attention has been called to it, in a practical way, by writing, telephoning or calling on the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada as with its Eighty Odd Millions of Assets, the largest amount held by any Canadian company, there is no safer, sounder or more generous and faithful custodian to be found to administer your wishes with regard to your wife and children.

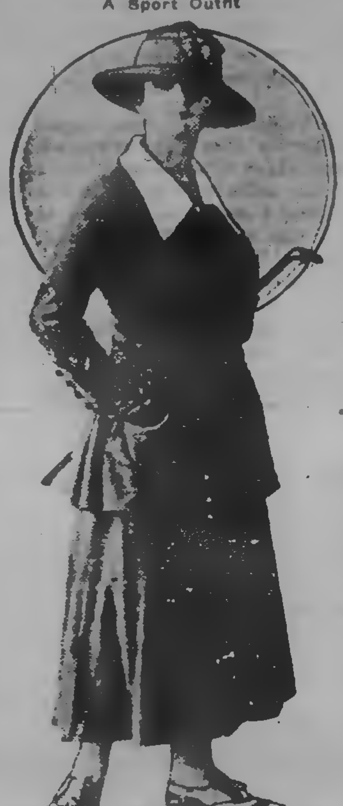
FASHION HINTS

A Sport Outfit



For general sport wear a suit of green La Jerz is both practical and smart. Novel buttons serve to trim and fasten the coat. The deep pointed cuffs and pockets together with the square collar are interesting details. The semi-sport hat and buckskin shoes serve as appropriate finishing touches.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

If silver is to be stored away for some time, pack it with dry flour; it will remain untarnished.

When making coffee sprinkle a little salt on the coffee before pouring on boiling water, and the flavor will be wonderfully improved.

To keep cheese for some time, and prevent it becoming mouldy or dry, wrap it up in a cloth damped with vinegar and keep it in a dish.

To prevent the skin from discoloring after a fall or blow, take a little dry starch, moisten it with cold water, and lay it on the injured part.

Frost-bitten vegetables should be soaked in cold water for one hour before boiling. A piece of saltpetre should be added to the water in which they are cooked.

When making a fruit pie do not put the sugar on the top under the crust, but mix it with the fruit below, otherwise it makes the crust heavy and is more liable to boil out.

Needles and pins will never rust in a cushion filled with coffee grounds. Rinse the grounds in cold water spread on a sheet of paper to dry thoroughly, and then stuff the cushion.

Eucalyptus oil will remove grease stains from any kind of material without injuring it. Apply a little of the oil with a clean piece of flannel, and rub the material gently until the stains disappear.

To make glassware glisten, wash the glass and rinse in hot water, then plunge into cold water into which a handful of starch has been dissolved. Drain the glassware on towels until perfectly dry, then polish with a dry cloth.

A simple method of making ironwork proof against rust is to heat it until it is almost red-hot, and then brush it over with linseed oil. This makes a varnish which, unlike ordinary paint or enamel, does not chip off.

Much heavy cake is the result of the oven door not being closed as gently as possible.

Stuffed Eggs

Hard-boil eggs sufficient for the family, and cut in half. Remove the yolks carefully and grate, adding finely chopped ham in the proportion of one-third ham to two of egg. Mix to a paste with a little French dressing, add a pinch of dry mustard and stuff the white halves. Serve on a bed of parsley with strips of pickled beet or red cabbage.

Ham Timbales

Mix one and a half cups of boiled ham with one fourth bread crumbs, the yolks of two hard boiled eggs, two tablespoons melted butter, one cup milk, one well beaten raw egg. Mix well and turn into well-greased timbale moulds. Set the moulds into a pan of water and cook until the mixture is firm in the center. Serve with tomato sauce.

DRINKING IN JAPAN

GREAT HAVOC WROUGHT TO ADDICTIES TO "SAKE."

That drinking is a widespread habit in city and country life alike, says Captain Bickel, is a widespread general impression in the minds of most missionaries. As, however, outward evidences of direct intoxication are comparatively scarce in public, I fear that the terrible havoc wrought by liquor in Japan is not fully understood. Reports from many prefectaires give striking evidences that drink has a terrible grip on the communities. A few places report drinking as being moderate but by far the large majority of the reports have statements such as the following: "Fifty per cent. of the village A drink." "The village of B with 600 houses spends 12,000 yen ($6,000) per year on sake." "Several families in the village of C spend above fifty dollars each year on alcohol." (The figure represents about the annual earnings of unskilled workers such as night watchmen or porters, and more than most workers will earn in a country village). I have intimate knowledge of one county largely given over to the manufacture of shoyu (a sauce like a ketchup) in which the consumption of sake larke outstrips the profits on this main source of income. Liquor shops are largely on the increase in country districts.

MOTOR OILS AND COLD

Proper Kinds of Oil and Anti-Freezing Mixtures

Many anti-freezing compounds use alcohol, glycerine, water and calcium chloride. The best of the three sets is that using alcohol, glycerine and water, but for really cold weather, more alcohol and glycerine and less water should be used. When these solutions are used and evaporation occurs it is not necessary to add make-up solution to compensate for the evaporation. The alcohol evaporates much faster than either of the other liquids, so it is necessary to add only alcohol to bring the radiator to capacity.

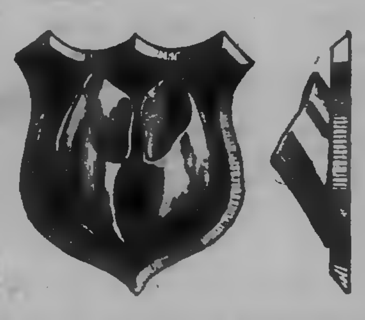
During cold weather it is necessary that the owner pay attention to oil changes in the gear cases. In cold weather lighter oil should be used than in summer because of the affect of cold on the viscosity of oil. Some use a medium cylinder oil for the rear axle, while others prefer a semi-fluid oil. Heavy oil or grease should not be used. Before the oil is placed in the case, the latter should be thoroughly cleansed and flushed twice with kerosene.

VERY SWEET OF THEM

A Lollipop Manifesto Which Will Please the Children

There is not a child in London who will not endorse a manifesto issued by a body of grown-ups in Manchester, called the "Confectioners' Association of the United Kingdom." The object of the manifesto is to show, beyond all doubt, that the food value of one pound of lollipops is more than three times greater than, say, one pound of beef. This is made clear by long, learned words to the most obtuse adult intelligence. The Confectioners' Association is trying to persuade the Government that it is in the national interest that candy should be treated as a necessary article of food, and that they should not be taxed or restricted.

Ornamental Horn Match Holder



A match holder made of the horn shell of cattle hoofs mounted on a wooden shield, as shown in the sketch, is both ornamental and useful. One of the pockets holds the unused matches and the other the burned ones. The hoofs were cleaned thoroughly and polished and the edge of the shield was beveled off and varnished in the natural color of the wood. The front was lacquered black and also varnished.—Popular Mechanics.

How "Bound Feet" Began

According to Chinese history, the custom of small feet among the females of China originated several centuries back, when a large body of women rose against the Government, and tried to overthrow it. To prevent the recurrence of such an event the use of wooden shoes so small as to disable them from making any effective use of their feet was enforced on all female infants.

Valuable Accessories

An extra electric horn or light fuse is a very valuable accessory to the supply kit of the modern motorist. It is an easy matter to install a new fuse, but a very difficult matter to improve one. A piece of copper wire may do temporarily, but when the fuse box is not very accessible it is not a very pleasant job.

From France comes a new perpetual calendar by which can be determined without calculation the week-day on which any date has fallen or will fall.

Gear wheels and ratchet mechanism connected to new shears for barbers make the blades open and close twice each time the handles are pressed together.

Savory Hash

Cut an onion into rings and fry it in an ounce of fat, then remove it and brown in the fat an ounce flour. Pour into the pan half a pint of stock, cook and season with pepper and salt. Return the onion to the pan and put in some pieces of any cold meat. Heat all thoroughly and serve with sippets of toast and chopped parsley sprinkled over the meat.

O'Brien Potatoes

Cut slices of bacon in small pieces and fry brown. Add a tablespoon of chopped red and green peppers. Fry one minute longer and then add cold potatoes that have been cut in dice and fry a minute or two more.

43,000 GALLONS OF OIL USED ON CITY STREETS LAST YEAR

City Engineer is Instructed to Get Information on Storage Facilities--- Geo. Ball Sowed Seed But Has so Far Failed to Reap an Account of $4--G. O. Cameron Suggests a Bylaw to Abate the Smoke Nuisance.

The Board of Works held its first meeting for 1917 last night and there was quite a heavy docket of communications, complaints, etc., for the consideration of the members. There were present Ald. Weir (chairman), Smith, Duncan, Saunders, Langford, McIntyre and Taylor.

The Peterborough Utilities Commission had several applications in for permission to erect poles on different streets and the applications had been approved of by the City Engineer and as a matter of form the requests were granted as the poles have been in use for some time.

43,000 Gallons of Oil

The Western Oil Refining Co. and the Imperial Oil Co. both wrote the board that they were prepared to quote prices on oil for the roads, and after some consideration the City Engineer was instructed to get prices.

Last season the city used 43,000 gallons of road oil and it will likely use more this year unless the prices are very high. The lack of storage facilities caused the city to pay quite a sum of money for demurrage charges. The City Engineer was asked to get prices on a concrete or steel storage tank and report.

The city will also purchase another oil distributing attachment so that the city streets can be covered quickly as soon as favorable weather sets in.

Road Material

Chairman Weir and City Engineer Parsons were instructed to examine the supply of road material at Stothart's gravel pit and to report on the advisability of crushing the hard limestone for street purposes in place of gravel.

The City Engineer reported that the sample rent for testing purposes had been very satisfactorily reported on.

C.P.R. Footbridge

Ald. Langford, chairman of the Railways Committee, informed the board that the C.P.R. had been sent a cheque for $1,800, the estimated cost of the steel for the footbridge across the river. As soon as this was placed the city could build the approaches on both sides of the river.

Sewer Pipe

The City Engineer was instructed to purchase a supply of sewer pipe and cement at once and have it ready for the work this spring.

Park Street Drain

The township of North Monaghan reported to the city that as agreed, they had cleaned the weeds and shrubs out of the Park St. drain and it was now up to the city to remove the sand which was causing the trouble. The chairman will consult with Mayor Duffus on the subject.

Agreement to be Signed

The C.P.R. gave the city permission to put the Chamberlain St. sewer under the track and the committee recommended that the Mayor and Clerk sign the necessary agreement.

Smoke Nuisance

G. O. Cameron complained of the smoke nuisance in the city and suggested that the city pass a by-law which compelled the installation of smoke consumers where soft coal was used. If the by-law was passed the railways would take steps to remedy the nuisance as far as possible.

Ald. Smith did not know of an attachment on the market that worked satisfactorily as a smoke consumer. He thought that the letter should be received.

Ald. Duncan thought the City Engineer should find out what other cities were doing in this regard and get all the information available. There were complaints from all over the city.

Chairman Weir and the City Engineer will look into the subject and report.

Ice Roughener

When the members were in Ottawa recently they were much impressed with a machine for roughening the slippery sidewalks. The cost is very small, and on a motion of Ald. Smith and McIntyre, the City Engineer was instructed to have one built at once.

Board Will Handle

A suggestion was made to the Board of Works last year that the Utilities Commission be asked to take charge of the construction of sewers.

Ald. Saunders and several members thought that the board should handle the sewer construction and no action was taken on the suggestion.

Who's Fault?

J. E. Emmerson, 297 Park Street, claims that the city was negligent in constructing a sewer to his residence and the sewer blocked up and it cost over $20 to remedy the trouble.

City Engineer Parsons says that the sewer was built in 1904 or 1905 and he is quite confident that the contractor who built Mr. Emmerson's sewer was at fault. Mr. Emmerson will be asked to attend the next board meeting.

Wants City to Pay

G. Ball sent in a bill for seeding and levelling the boulevard in front of 272, 274, 276 Hunter St. City Engineer Parsons said it was the first time he had heard of the $4 claim. He had given no authority for the work, which in other cases had been done by the city.

Will Report

G. L. Hay of Ashburnham wishes to install standing tubs in the basement of his residence. He claims that the sewer connection on the street is too high to give him a sufficient fall and wants the city to lower it. The City Engineer will investigate.

BATTLE HURTS INCAPACITATE INSP. COOPER

NEW APPOINTMENT BY THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE MADE NECESSARY.

HAS NOT BEEN ON DUTY FOR TEN DAYS

The City Property Committee will meet in the near future and one of the questions that will require immediate attention is the appointment of a sanitary inspector to temporarily take the place of Sanitary Inspector Cooper, who has been laid up at his home for over ten days. The duties of the office are too much for Relief Officer Miller to handle alone and it is coming to the time when the season's plans must be prepared.

It is said that injuries which Sanitary Inspector Cooper received at the front have made his immediate return to the official duties of his office a matter of doubt. He has given splendid attention to the work and his many friends hope that he will speedily recover.

Sweet Apples

Core the apple and drop into water. When all are ready pack in heated glass jars. Have at hand a syrup made by mixing a cupful of sugar with a cupful of water, allowing this quantity to every two-quart can. Boil hard fifteen minutes, adding the juice of half a lemon for every two cups of sugar. Roll the caps in hot water before putting in the apples. Fill at once with the boiling syrup. Set in a bake pan of hot water, and then in a hot oven. When the syrup is again at the boiling point, seal immediately. If larger apples are used it is possible to can them the same way, only quarter them first.

Wiltshire Dumplings

Use three ounces suet, one-half pound flour, two ounces cheese, one-half pint milk, one ounce butter, chopped parsley and herbs. Reserve a tablespoonful of flour and to the rest add pepper and salt, some chopped parsley, a teaspoonful of mixed herbs and a grate of nutmeg. Add the suet, finely chopped, and mix to a stiff dough with water, form into small dumplings and cook for half an hour in boiling water, or in the stock pot if it happens to be going. Melt the butter, add a tablespoonful of flour and the milk and cook well; then add the cheese (reserving a spoonful) and salt and cayenne. Place the dumplings in a pie dish, pour over the sauce, sprinkle the top with cheese and brown in the oven.

Baked Prunes

Wash one pound of prunes and soak them three or four hours in a little water. Put them in a bean pot, cover with boiling water, add one scant cup of sugar, three cloves and a stick of cinnamon, cover and bake slowly until the prunes are almost candied. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Steamed Strawberry Pudding

Mix one cupful of sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two cups of flour, one cup of sweet milk, two cups of strawberries and steam two hours. Mash two additional cups of berries and three-quarters of a cup of sugar and serve with pudding.

GOLD DEPOSITS ON GALWAY FARM

GEO. J. McKEE IS SATISFIED HE HAS STRUCK IT RICH.

When George J. McKee of Smith traded part of his landed possessions in Galway township for a farm near Campbellford he retained 100 acres in the former place, which he still owns. He is congratulating himself now that he did so for valuable ore has been found on his Galway land and a local company will be organized to begin mining operations in the spring.

Mr. McKee's old homestead in Galway is now owned and occupied by ex-Warden Coben. Mineral has been found on it and a mine has been opened. The farm of W. J. Kearns of this city is close to this place and ore has been found on it too.

The ore which Mr. McKee has found has been tested and gold, copper and lead deposits exist in paying quantities. He has succeded in interestig local capitalists and an investigation will be made as soon as weather conditions permit.

Mr. McKee was in town yesterday exhibiting samples of the ore.

NEW BRIDGE AT HUNTER STREET IN SIX WEEKS

ON BLUE PRINT ONLY, WILL BE PREPARED BY THE CITY ENGINEER.

The Hunter Street bridge and the probability of its being found insufficient for the present traffic was under discussion by the Board of Works last night.

The Department of Railways and Canals would not allow Mr. Pretty to inspect the old bridge in order to give a report on the condition of it, so Chairman Weir wrote Mr. Cady of Campbellford in regard to the matter.

City Engineer Parsons was requested to have plans prepared for an overhead bridge across the river at this point, giving the estimated cost for a steel and concrete structure. The idea of the aldermen was that the bridge should provide for a single street railway track to Ashburnham.

The City Engineer stated that he could have the plans ready in six weeks.

MOVING THE HEAVY GUNS UP TO THE FIRING LINE.

CANADIANS WIN DISTINCTION IN TWO SUCCESSFUL RAIDS

Casualties Not Heavy in Proportion to Extent and Success of Operations Against the German Lines.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The following communique was issued by the Canadian war records office and covers the operation of the Canadian corps from Jan. 17 to 23:

Two very successful raids form the outstanding features of last week's operations. It had been intended to undertake them as a simultaneous operation, but conditions rendered a change advisable.

The first raid was made at 4.30 p.m. by a New Brunswick battalion. A mine was successfully exploded close to the German trenches, and the attacking parties advanced under cover of an intense barrage and a screen of smoke. The flanks of our men penetrated the support line, meeting with no resistance. A party of about 30 Germans were met in a communication trench and chased to their dug-outs, from which they refused to emerge. Had they done so their lot would have been happier. In a raid there is no time for persuasion and the dugouts were destroyed by explosives.

Trenches Much Damaged

The enemy's trenches were found in a much damaged condition as a result of the mine explosion, and our artillery fire, and there were many gruesome evidences of the accuracy of our shooting. No prisoners were brought back. A party of four Germans taken by our men were killed by a shell while being escorted across No Man's Land. The raiding party returned to our lines at 5 p.m.

The second raid took place at 7.45 o'clock the following morning and was carried out by troops of two battalions from Ontario. The operation was similar in most respects to the previous day's although on a somewhat larger scale. The enemy's trenches were penetrated on a front of 800 yards to a depth of 300 yards. The conditions were by no means ideal. The enemy's wire entanglements were exceedingly strong and the wind was not in the most favorable quarter for the use of a smoke screen. On the flanks lastly, the ground was snow covered and the khaki uniforms of our men stood out in clear relief on the white background.

Destroy Machine Gun

As the attacking party left our trenches a machine gun opened fire from the ruins of a high building in the enemy's line. It had scarcely fired a dozen rounds when a heavy shell silenced it for the rest of the day. The wire presented no difficulties; so well had our gunners done their work that only a few strands remained.

Once in the German trenches our men were complete masters of the situation. In the support line a small party of Germans showed some resistance, but a short and sharp duel with bombs ended in their defeat. Our artillery had played havoc with the enemy's trenches, and our engineers completed the work of destruction with explosives, blowing up all the remaining deep dugouts and machine gun emplacements.

At 8.45 a.m. the raiders were back in our own trenches, having in the space of an hour captured 100 prisoners, two machine guns and a bomb thrower. The number of prisoners taken in this brilliant operation constitutes a record on this front.

These two raids, although carried out 15 hours apart, form one operation. They cannot be considered separately nor judged by the relative number of prisoners captured in each. The first raid distracted attention from the second and was an essential factor to its success.

Demoralize Enemy

Our casualties were not heavy in proportion to the extent and success of the operations, and there is no doubt the German losses far exceeded them, to say nothing of the demoralizing effects of the raids.

The officers and men who took part tell many interesting stories but few of them can be recounted. A German company commander who was taken prisoner, when asked to surrender, came up from his dug-out, calmly saluted and enquired where he was to go. His sergeant-major followed, and knowing well the propensities of our men, held his helmet in front of him ready to offer on emerging from his dug-out. Another N.C.O. came from his dug-out with a peace offering of cigars, which he distributed freely. In addition to the booty already mentioned, the capture of one sausage was reported.

In preparing plans two of our men were retailed to cut additional lanes through the enemy's wirt to facilitate the return of the party. As it happened this was unnecessary the wire having been completely swept away by our artillery. The men, however, obeyed their instructions, and calmly stood up snipping away at the remnants of the wire until ordered into the trench. This amusing incident affords a good example of discipline.

SIR SAM HUGHES' SPEECH DISAPPOINTS LIBERALS

No Break Between Ex-Minister of Militia and the Party---Declines Offer to Cast in Lot With Liberals.

OTTAWA, Jan. 31.— The stairways and corridors of the Victoria Museum Building, now in use as the temporary quarters of Parliament, were filled an hour before the House opened Tuesday afternoon, by a crowd numbering nearly 1,000 people. Only a fraction of them were admitted to the gallery of the House but they taxed its space to the utmost capacity, many persons standing throughout the afternoon. The floor of the House was also crowded in anticipation of the much heralded speech of Lt.-General Sir Sam Hughes.

SIR SAM HUGHES.

The general was present when the doors were opened but did not obtain the floor immediately as Mr. E. B Devlin, Liberal member for Wright, had first to conclude his speech upon the address. When Sir Sam rose about half-past three to speak eager interest was everywhere manifested. His former colleagues tapped their desks perfunctorily, but except for that there was nothing from the Government benches at all resembling applause

The speech was on the whole a disappointment to those who expected anything spectacular or anything in the way of a break between the ex Minister of Militia and the Conservative party. Indeed, Sir Sam said that it would give him almost as much pain to leave the Conservative party as it would to lose the war. He made no reference to the Prime Minister, but took an occasional rap at the Minister of Finance. Intimating that Sir Thomas White had inspired the attacks made upon him by the Montreal Mail, the Montreal News and the Toronto Telegram. On the whole, the speech was a review of the general's career as Minister of Militia. He defended himself against the various charges that had been made against him of extravagance, insubordination and autocratic behaviour.

The Liberals were disappointed, although they extracted an occasional crumb of comfort during the delivery of the speech The general, who had begun amid oppressive silence, ended amid uproarious applause from the Government benches.

Summary of Speech

He had been asked to join the Liberal party, but this was repugnant to him. Laurier should repudiate the speeches of Cannon, and Borden those of Blondin and Sevigny in the Dorcester by-election.

Quebec had been taught disloyalty by the Grits in 1896 and by the Tories in y911.

He had been forced to tell White to mind his business and not to meddle in petty matters.

T. A. Russell, friend of White, had failed in his duty regarding contracts. Russell had later inspired attacks on the shell committee. His reward was the securing of a contract for a million fuses.

He had been hounded by the Montreal Mail and News, owned by a half-brother of Sir Thomas White. The owner of the Toronto Telegram had a nephew in London who was related by marriage to Sir George Perley, and sent to Canada "anti-Hughes stuff." The Telegram's owner expected knighthood for "slating Sam Hughes."

The Militia Act should be put in force. Recruiting had declined partly because of "miserable piffle talked by members of the Government" that munition workers were doing as good work as soldiers

Canada had the right to equip her own army in her own way, and it was none of Britain's business

Sir Thomas Replies

At the close of Sir Sam's address Sir Thomas White at once rose to reply. The chief points which he emphasized were as follows:

He had no interest in any Montreal paper, and The Toronto Telegram had denounced him more than it had any other member of the Cabinet.

Before Parliament passed its first war vote of $50,000,000 Hughes had entered into contracts involving many millions.

In January, 1915 he had written to the Premier urging economy in the Militia Department.

He has suggested appointment of an overseas purchasing commission under Sir George Perley.

In October, 1916, he had written the Premier intimating he would resign unless an overseas Minister of Militia was apointed

Hughes had wanted Sir Max Aitken given the post

He had never ben a business associate of T. A. Russell, but knew him as honest and capable.

On Good Terms Again

There has evidently been a rapprochment between Sir Sam and Sir Robert, for after the 6 o'clock adjournment the two of them strolled down the corridor together, evidently on good terms with each other again in the various stages from good, bad etc., according to the humor of the automobile owner, and receive attention accordingly. The general trend of the discussion semed to be in the direction of education. The meeting of joint ood. at the county council chamber the other night inspired several speakers with enthusiasm for results in which the county council could play a large part. The suggestion that the membership fee be increased from $3 to $4, thus providing $1 on a membership to be devoted to road work by the association was not though, the best thing. At the present time $2 of the $3 goes to Toronto the parent body and nothing is left for good roads. And as ex-Ald Green has had some experience in municipal activities the crowd had to show him how the roads were to be improved from the revenue derived from a $3 license fee. Nobody could

Dr. Amys took the stand that the original scheme which he has introduced was the better one. That was to interest the path masters of the county who would care for sections of the road and win a prize if they did their work well.

As a newly-elected member of the good roads committee, Mr. R. B. Rogers asked for information as to the work of the committee He favored the educational plan and the boosting of the county roads system outlined by Mr. Hogarth at the meeting last week. He would keep the fire burning and was convinced that results would be felt.

The Committees

The folowing members were elected to the several committees: —

Good Roads—Ex Ald. Green (chairman), Dr. C. H. Amys, R. B. Rogers, Mayor Duffus R. Lees and the president

Entertainment—F. L. Roy (chairman), H. Watam, S. Dickson Hall, E. W. Borbridge, R. Denne and Dr. Morrison.

PREPARE OFFENSIVE ON FRONT OF 200 MILES

LONDON, Jan. 31. — According to the correspondent of The Times, who is with the French army, a huge drive is being prepared and is even now ready to start against the Germans along a two hundred mile front.

"In the case of all previous great offensives, French or British, on the Western front, the Germans knew beforehand exactly when and where the attack would be delivered," he writes. "The immense preparations which are indispensable before a big advance can be attempted necessarily gave away the secret. The work of defending prepard positions in any case less costly than an attack was still further simplified by the almost total elimination of the element of surprise."

EIGHT RECRUITS

Bandmaster Chadwick has been transferred from the 247th and attached to the 255th, Toronto.

The residents of the Lily Lake neighborhood turned out in large numbers last night to hear what Major O'Flynn and Col. J. W. Miller had to say about the war and Canada's part in it.

Bandmaster W. H. Peryer has received the appointment of warrant officer in the 6th Canadian Reserve Battalion, which includes officers and men of the 39th and 93rd Battalions who remain in England. Bandmaster Peryer has his band intact and has received authority to increase the strength to forty members.

Capt. Burnham speaks in the city of Hamilton, Ont., on Sunday evening next at a mass recruiting meeting.

All Canadian officers attached to the Royal Flying Corps are receiving Flying Corps pay from the Canadian Government in addition to regular pay, says a London cable.

The pay of a flight sub lieutenant totals $6.50 per day. The pay dates back.

JUDGMENT GIVEN

In Osgoode Hall judgment has been given for the Canadian Hood Haggie Co. in their action against the Samwell Co. for the amount of claim tried at the recent non-jury sittings here.

DANGER POINTS

City Engineer Gives Works Board Long List

City Engineer Parsons handed in to the Board of Works last night a list of the dangerous places in the city that in his opinion the city should attend to. Most of them are on walks and roadways where a railing would afford all the protection necessary. Some of the others were culverts that should be rebuilt, and to do so will require quite an expenditure of money.

The City Engineer was instructed to have the guard railings built at as early a moment as the weather will permit, and the culverts will be dealt with when the board takes its spring inspection trip

A FINE OF $50

IMPOSED ON WOMAN WHO PLEADED GUILTY TO THEFT.

A fine of $50 and costs was the punishment meted out to one woman and suspended sentence to another woman by Police Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning. They had both pleaded guilty yesterday on a charge of theft and had been remanded till this morning for sentence Most of the stolen goods were recovered.

The husband of one of hte women was charged with receiving the stolen goods, but the magistrate dismissed the charge.

Paris City Council endorsed the proposal for woman suffrage, asking its local member, Mr. Scott Davidson, to support the bill in the Legislature.

FINE RUSSIAN BLUFF

Small Army of Middle-aged Took Many More Austrians

A Russian officer visiting London told the following story of the siege of Przemysl: "The siege was very much like the game of poker. We won by a most beautiful bluff. Our troops were really poor, most of them bing older territorials. We were about 80,000 strong and thought we were investing 40,000. Imagine our surprise when the fortress surrendered and endless columns of men came marching out. In one place I saw with my own eyes two hundred unarmed Russians guarding 8,000 prisoners.

"General Selivanoff, our commander in chief, asked the Austrian commander how many men he had. '120,000 men,' was the answer and Selivanoff devoutly crossed himself and exclaimed: 'Thank God.' When he informed the Austrian general that he himself had only 80,000 troops, the other was equally surprised, for he had estimated the Russian strength at 300,000."

Many a poor man might acquire wealth by utilizing the time he wastes in bemoaning his luck.

UGLY BUT IT SAVES LIVES

BRITISH HELMETS SUPERIOR IN MANY DETAILS —STRANGE WOUNDS.

At the beginning of the war, as the London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association points out, there were many cases of soldier found dead without a mark on their bodies. It was explained that they had died from shock or from the concussion produced by the explosion of great shells. As the helmets were introduced it was found that soldiers wearing them did not die without visible wounds, while deaths supposedly from shock continued among the troops not yet equipped. This set on foot an investigation, and it was learned that the men who were found dead without a mark on their bodies had been killed by minute fragments of shell, some of them no thicker than a layer of paper, which had penetrated the brain, leaving not an outward trace to mark their course.

Many of these wounds were found in the base of the skull, and for this reason the British when devising their helmet gave it a wide, downward sloping brim, which protects not only the head, but the back and sides of the neck. The French helmet does not offer this protection lower down; and it is held to be inferior also from the fact that it has a ridged crown, while the British helmet is severely plain. It is true that the French helmet looks better, and that through the ridge there is a ventilating channel, but the ridge might also attract and deflect downward a bullet or shell fragment that the smooth top of the British helmet would miss. The British helmet does not fit so closely to the head as the French helmet, but is wide enough to permit the introduction of a number of rubber buffers between the leather band and the helmet proper. These buffers prevent shock, and are said to be quite sufficient to diffuse and neutralize the force of a blow that otherwise might prove fatal.

RECKLESS DURING WAR

Canada Burns Up Forests, Defying Increase of Taxes

In war time, and while many interests are urging thrift and economy, the Canadian people are burning up their created resources at a much greater rate. During the first five months of 1916, the fire loss in Canada exceeded that of January to May, 1915, by approximately $3,000,000, or $600,000 per month. Canada has need of all her financial resources. She is borrowing money to carry on the war, and is paying 5 per cent. interest thereon. The additional fire loss of 1916 would therefore pay the interest charge on the recent war loan of $100,000,000 and would pay $2,300,000 of the principal. Canada's average annual fire loss, of over $23,000,000, would pay 5 per cent. interest on approximately half a billion dollars. Our fire loss is, however, something for which we are receiving no value, either financial or patriotic; it is simply a tax, due in great part to carelessness, which Canadians appear willing to pay, and which they, as a whole, are doing little to avert.

MARTIAL ELOQUENCE

"Now, then, No. 7," the corporal shouted, "we'll make another start—that is, if you've quite finished feelin' if your back hair happens to be on straight this morning. It's you I'm talking to—third man from the left of the front rank. I haven't the pleasure of knowing your name, but I expect to be writin' it down for an hour's extra duty pretty soon.

"Now, then, look to your front—squad, 'tchun, left dress! Turn your eyes to the left—without squinting like Chinese dummies—if you can. Stand up in the ranks, too, like soldiers; not like a measly row of lop-sided, spindle-shanked, Cockney shop-boys! Stick your chests out and put your stumachs somewhere out of sight altogether. There's 'arf of you with figures like bags of potatoes. Strike me crimson if I ever saw such a mob! Hi! you in the centre—the ginger-headed man, I mean—don't grin like that; this ain't no perishin' beauty competition—not by no manner of means."

U-53 Described

The German submarine U-53 is officially described as having four torpedo tubes, two fore and two aft. She is also stated to have carried ten torpedoes, one four-inch gun forward and one three-inch gun aft. Wireless poles are erected on the starboard side, and are so constructed that they can be folded down along the deck. The vessel has three periscopes, one leading down to the chief engineer in the engine room, and is also fitted with a gyro compass, with heaters, and two Deisel-Nuremberg 1,200 horse-power engines. She has a speed of 18 knots on the surface and 14 knots when submerged. The U-53 is also stated to be able to submerge for a radius of 5,000 nautical miles, and is accompanied by a submarine tender.

AUSTRALIAN PUGILIST WILL JOIN THE ARMY SOME DAY

He Insists That His Intentions Are The Best.

BUFFALO, Jan. 31.—Les Darcy, the famous Australian, says he will enlist in a Canadian regiment and do his duty for the Mother Country when the proper time arrives.

"Tell the people of Canada I am not a shirker or a slacker," he says. "I want to see that my father and mother are provided for in their old age. That's my first duty as a loyal son. I am also a loyal subject of Great Britain. After my pugilistic plans are completed I will join the colors and nothing would please me better than to join the 250th Regiment of Hamilton. I am with my country heart and soul and will be ready to shoulder arms when my parents at home are taken care of. Don't let people tell you I have made a lot of money in Australia. I wish I had. If I had I wouldn't be here."

In proof of his statement Darcy sent his mother by cable three hundred pounds, which is $1500 in American money, the first he had been able to send her since his arrival in the United States.

Poilu In Red And Blue On Canadian Streets

"Oh, ma, look at the circus man!" exclaimed one little girl as she caught sight of a small man in uniform in front of the C.M.R. recruiting office at Hamilton. The man in question, however, was not a circus man, but A. P. Duries, a private in the 163nd regiment of the French army, who obtained a discharge and came to Canada to seek employment. He was dressed in the uniform of the French army, with red breeches, blue tunic and puttees of the color, and the peculiar shaped hat of the French with its bright coloring of red and blue. He explained that his dress was not the service uniform, which is grey in color. For sixteen months he was in the trenches in the Argonne and Champagne districts.

THOSE EAGER FRENCH YOUTHS

CLASS OF 1917 WERE PITIFULLY ANXIOUS TO BE ENROLLED.

La Raconteuse wrote from Paris: There are no conscientious objectors in France. A French army surgeon who had just finished examining nearly ten thousand young men of the class of 1917 told me that every one of them was eager to be accepted for service. The disappointment of those who were found unfit was pitiful.

"A lame boy," he said, "who made desperate efforts to conceal that one leg was more than one inch shorter than the other, and who had lost his only two brothers in the battles near Bouchez, said to me with tears in his eyes, 'Please do not reject me. I am as fit as any of my comrades for trench war and if you do not think so, you put me into the cavalry.' His sorrow when I had to send him away was heartbroken. I have had more than one consumptive tell me that open air life in the trenches was just the thing for them.

"We must go back to the first days of Christianity, to the days of the martyrs, to find young people so eager to offer themselves, to rush into danger, to fight and suffer for an ideal. Those who have seen our young soldier under fire are not surprised at the eagerness of our boys to get into the fighting line. A country whose youth is inspired by a spirit like this cannot be conquered. The chief of the committee examining these boys was an old major who had been severely wounded in the Champagne. When we were finished with our work one day, he said to me: 'To think that I am no longer considered fit to take boys like these into battle! I would give anything to be allowed to do so. Even if the Boches should finish me, it would make me ten years younger to command such soldiers.'"

It is an easy matter for a girl to fall in love with a shiftless man but when she has to support him there's the rub.

TALES OF THE RING

Double-crossed and Tricks Numerous in the Good Old Days.

Talk of sharp practice recalls the memorable scrap between Kid McCoy and Tommy Ryan at Maspeth, L.I., in 1896. McCoy, a novice in experience, was Ryan's sparring partner when they saw a chance to get a bunch of the long green. They had a fake quarrel and McCoy issued a challenge. Ryan accepted it and the late James C. Kennedy made the match. McCoy privately informed Ryan that he was in poor health and could do no hard work for the fight. As a result Ryan, taking the wily Kid at his word, did not train at all. McCoy, however, went to a quiet resort and put himself in splendid condition.

Kid McCoy's Start

When the men climbed into the ring, therefore, Ryan quickly saw that he had been "double crossed," but it was too late to back out. McCoy then proceeded to give a masterly exhibition of science, out-boxing and out-punching Ryan all the way to the fifteenth round, when the latter was put to sleep. A fortune was cleaned up on McCoy's victory by a few wise gamblers who were in the know and McCoy promptly began his climb up the ladder. Ryan issued another challenge, which resulted in a second battle, but after five rounds the bout was stopped and the decision was a draw. McCoy and Ryan never patched up their differences.

Picked Many Losers

When Jack Dillon knocked out Tom Cowler, Jim Corbett admitted that he never had been a successful manager of pugilists. Corbett's first attempt in this line was the handling of the good natured Steve O'Donnell, an Australian heavyweight, later boxing instructor at Harvard University. Corbett really believed that O'Donnell was a world beater and he was prepared to hand over his title and retire from the ring if O'Donnell defeated Peter Maher at Maspeth in 1895. But Maher settled O'Donnell with a couple of well directed blows on the chin and Corbett decided to remain the champion. It was in 1900 that Corbett assumed the management of Gus Ruhlin and matched him with Bob Fitzsimmons. The fight took place in the Garden and during the first five rounds Ruhlin did so much good work that Corbett, who wanted to see Old Fitz whipped, almost lost his senses. But in the sixth round Fitz drove his mighty left into the pit of Ruhlin's stomach and the big German was taken to a hospital in a serious condition. Corbett took several other fighters under his wing, but they amounted to nothing.

TRUST BRITISH CAVALRY

Hundreds of Thousands Trained For Modern Warfare

A Canadian paper said:—The First Dragoon Guards, one of Britain's crack cavalry regiments, were used in a charge on German organizations. Great Britain still believes in this arm of the service in spite of the trench warfare. She has approximately 250,000 cavalrymen in France and England, trained to the minute, and these men can take their place as infantrymen in the trenches as well as charge the enemy on horseback. The most intelligent and physically perfect men in Great Britain have been picked for this work. They have been taught to charge over ground pitted with small holes and terrain of this sort has been prepared on British moors where the cavalry has been going through the hardest sort of work.—Toronto Mail.

Read His Obituary

Franz Weiser, son of a baker of Hanerkirchen, Austria, returned home from the Russian front on furlough. The next morning his parents received an official communication from the army administration informing them that their son had been killed in battle near Baranovitchi. The "dead" soldier, after a hearty laugh, notified the ministry of war that he would report for duty at the expiration of his leave.

CANADIAN IN HOLLAND

FOUND DUTCH KIND—HOW HUNS TREAT THE CANADIANS.

Pte. Saunderson of Winnipeg, an 8th Battalion man, after escaping from a German prison into Holland wrote home: "The Dutch could not have been kinder. The Germans treat Canadians just like Englishmen, in fact, don't recognise any difference, but they often ask how it was Canadians wanted to come such a way to fight when not compelled. One day while in captivity there came a call for a party of prisoners to work on the Russian front. An English sergeant told the German, 'If you think the fellows will do anything to help you beat the Russians you might as well kill them right off here, because they won't.'" Saunderson believes the project of taking these prisoners to work in front of the Russian lines was accordingly abandoned.

French prisoners, he says, are treated much more leniently than English. Russians formerly were badly off for food, but since that English prisoners are looked after so well by those at home they get a lot of help indirectly. All prisoners are most ready to share together.

FRENCH UNIT'S POSTERS

Toronto Man Exhibited 178th Montreal's Clever Work

The artistic character of the posters issued by the 178th (French-Canadian) Battalion is exciting more than a local interest. William J. Craig, a manufacturers' agent in Toronto, asked for a copy of these posters and wrote to the battalion as follows: "Pleased to acknowledge receipt of your two interesting posters which I admired in Montreal and have put these up in a prominent place in the city to show that the French-Canadians are trying to do their part in Quebec. I thank you for same, and trust it will help to prove a United Canada." The object of the posters was to stimulate recruiting in the province of Quebec.

DISLOCATES MUSCLES

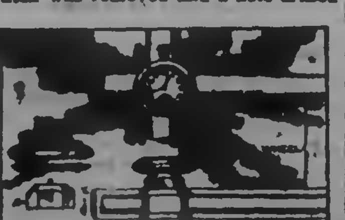
Strange Feats of Doctor-Private in Montreal Unit

At a sporting and musical evening given by the Irish-Canadian Rangers at Valcartier, Dr. A. Whitman of New York, enlisted as a private, gave an exhibition that was easily the feature of the evening. Doctor Whitman is possessed of lax ligaments and can perform more dislocations of the human body than any person living. One of the most dangerous of his acts is the lowering of the heart four inches. His heart can plainly be felt beating in the centre of the abdomen. He extends his height four and a half inches, and adds a length of eighteen inches to his arm.

WATCH FOR MOTORISTS

How To Fit Timepiece To Steering Post of Automobile

To fill the need for an automobile timepiece, the method of attaching an inexpensive watch to the top of the steering post, as shown in the sketch, was devised. The back plate of the watch was removed and a hole drilled through its center. A pin to fit the hole was riveted into the nut A, which held the steering wheel in place. The back was riveted on top of the nut and the watch was screwed to the back. This simple method of fastening proved satisfactory, and since the watch was a cheap one, it was not likely to be stolen.—Popular Mechanics.



The school child population of London, according to the latest report, is 893,000, the same figure as ten years ago.

There were 4[illegible]4 merchant vessels, aggregating 1,[illegible],436 tons gross, under construction in the United Kingdom on March 31 1916.

Wit and Wisdom

"You are not compounding that prescription as I would," remarked the stranger who had dropped in. "Dump in a little of this and a pinch of that."

"What do you mean? Are you a druggist?"

"Nope."

"Then what do you mean by telling me to run my business?"

"Oh, I'm the manager of the ball team. I notice you in the bleachers occasionally handing me unsolicited advice."

"What brought you here, my poor man?" asked the prison visitor.

"Just a little absent-mindedness," replied the prisoner.

"How was that?"

"I forgot to scratch the monogram off a watch before I sold it."

Capt. (examining uniforms which are expected to be marked with the owner's name) — What does this mean, my man? Your name seems to be obliterated.

Private (in the rear rank)—No, sir, it's O'Brien."

"I got-ta couple of forks left over," whispered terrified paw.

"Well, dip one into your butter and one in your coffee and work 'em off that way," directed resourceful maw. "Ain't you got no ingenuity at all?"

"Doctor, I'm worried about my hair. It's coming out something dreadful," said the lady.

"Humph," said the doctor. "That signifies a run-down system. You'll have to diet."

"All right, doctor, what with?" said the lady promptly. "Henna or peroxide?"

CROWN ATTORNEY HATTON ADVISES ERECTION OF A COUNTY-CITY BUILDING

Would be Waste of Money to Attempt to Repair Court House Recently Damaged by Fire---Old Structure Has Always Been a Bye-word Among Visiting Judges.

Editor Review: For the purpose of obtaining expressions from the public of the city and county of Peterborough, I give my reasons for the erection of a suitable edifice to combine the various city and county public offices.

The present Court House, erected in the year 1839, remodelled in 1878 and again some ten or fifteen years ago has lately been partially destroyed by fire.

This building is not modern in any respect, and there is not sufficient room under the present roof to give nearly the accommodation needed: even for present requirements expensive changes and additions must be made. For instance, excavation for the purpose of removing the earth from under the whole building and providing for a basement, or the old over-head system of steam heating, unhealthy, dangerous, and a positive "eye sore" must be replaced. This is most expensive work. Larger and more modern quarters are needed for the ever-growing law library, which is now rated as one of the finest in the province.

The Judges' Chambers and Clerk of the County Court, Deputy-Registrar and Surrogate Court offices should properly be under the Court House roof. The Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace is entitled to offices at the Court House. The office of public school inspector is relegated to an out-of the-way room on the third story. There is practically no accommodation for either grand or petit juries.

The court room is a by-word to all of the visiting Superior Court judges. Money that was spent in a so-called renovation of the building —some thousands of dollars — was just thrown away. The corridors are dark and there is not a modern office or modern accommodation throughout the whole building. Why, therefore, repeat the wastefulness and loss by expending the insurance money (some $48,000) on an old and out-of-date building that will not meet even the present-day requirements.

No one will question the immediate necessity for the erection of a City Hall in keeping with increasing requirements and growing importance of the city of Peterborough, and one that will give proper accommodation to the municipal offices, City Treasurer, Collector of Taxes, Engineer, Sanitary Inspector, Assessor, and their respective staffs. The Utilities Commission will shortly need much increased accommodation, especially if the city takes over the street railway and gas business, Police Court and Police Station, City Trust and other public offices.

Many valuable securities, books, documents and papers are without proper vault accommodation and are in danger of being destroyed by fire. These cannot be replaced except at great expense of time and money, and many of them not at all.

It being conceded, therefore, that two new buildings are imperatively required, why not scrap the present Court House and gaol and erect two suitable and imposing buildings, combining them in so far as practicable, on the present Victoria Park site, say west of the present band stand. This site is central and suitable for the people of the city and county.

The first and only valid objection is the cost and expenditure of money at the present time.

In answer to this, the debentures may be issued to cover forty years; a large percentage will be taken up locally. All the money can be spent here and a number of our factories can supply the necessary material and should we not now begin to prepare for "after the war"?

There will be a great increase in the population of this country. The C.R.P. and steamship companies are now preparing to take care of this immigration. We have naturally the healthiest and most attractive centre in the province and do not sufficently appreciate it. Many hundreds of fine English and Scotch families will have to leave the Old Land, their revenues and livings having been sacrificed to the war calls, they will be unable to live as they formerly did. Their sons and husbands have been killed and the remaining members of the families will welcome an entire change of life and surroundings.

We must conclude that if we need these buildings money spent on them is not being wasted. It is true the debenture debt of the city and county will be added to by the money spent.

If one loses his residence by fire or his requirement have outgrown the old one, it is not waste money to rebuild. The asset replaces the money and is of much more real value and benefit. Money is circulated, people enabled to get employment and live.

"No part of a man's income is so well laid out or procures for him in exchange so large an amount of positive benefit as that which he pays to the State in the form of taxation and it should be particularly remarked that the poorer classes receive relatively, much more positive advantage from the public expenditure than the richer class. They contribute far less per head or per family to the revenue. The revenue is spent in a manner which affords them employment.

"Nothing appears to us more calculated to mislead and deceive the uninstructed part of the public than expressions which imply that taxation is somthing taken out of the pockets of the people as if the nation were robbed of the money to pay its own expenses.

"It is a favorite maxim with many of the governing persons of the day, and notably with economical reformers, that 'you must not be generous with other people's money.' That I deny. When you are in an office of great trust, and have to deal with other people's money, it is your business to try to deal with it as though it were your own; and the highest functions of your trust may, in the interest of those for whom you have to act, compel you to be generous. In fact, if you are not generous with their money, you are often doing them a great injustice and manifest dis-service."

The paragraphs in inverted commas are from "Help's Thoughts Upon Governments."

Goes Out as Fast as it Comes in

The Surplus of the Canadian Patriotic Fund no Larger Than Nine Months Ago.

In October, the Canadian Patriotic Fund expended $930,000. It received $960,000. November showed about the same proportion of receipts to expenditures. In an undertaking of such magnitude, it is clear that there must be a large margin of safety if some month the administrators of the fund are not to find that they have to curtail the allowances to the soldiers' families. It is of the utmost importance that the revenue be made adequate and regular, and that it be practically guaranted.

The fund has lately passed the sixteen million mark. That is to say, it has received that vast amount. But this is not being stored up against the day of adversity. The demands on the fund keep pace with the revenues. For the past three-quarters of a year as much has gone out as has come in, so the surplus on hand today stands just where it did nine months ago.

The Fund therefore, as a matter of ordinary business precaution, asks Ontario to guarantee, early in the new year, at least the six million dollars which will be required in 1917 to meet the claims of the families of Ontario soldiers. It is hoped that more than the six million will be guaranteed, so that help may be given to the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia, which, with all the good will in the world, cannot raise the large sums required by reason of the heavy enlistments from those provinces.

Application to Parliament

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Corporation of the City of Peterborough will apply to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act for the following purposes:—

1. To authorize the Council of the City of Peterborough to purchase Motor Driven Fire Apparatus, with the necessary equipment, and to issue Debentures to pay for the same, to an amount not exceeding $10,000.
2. To amend Section 9 of Chapter 83 of the Statutes of 1907, so as to provide for the more expeditious collection of the special rates therein referred to.

3—To authorize the Council or the Peterborough Utilities Commission to instal sanitary conveniences in any building, the owner of which is unable to pay the expense of same at once, or who has neglected to instal same and to make the necessary connections therefrom to the sewage and water works system and to pay the cost therof and collect the same, including interest, in equal quarterly instalments from the owner of such building, and to provide that such cost shall be a charge on the said building and the land on which the same is situated until fully paid and that if any of said instalments are not paid they may be collected by action against the owner or added to the Colector's roll and collected in like manner as Municipal taxes, with authority to the said Council to issue Debentures to meet the cost of said work.

4—In the event of the City acquiring the plant, property and business of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, that the Peterborough Utilities Commission shall have the control and management thereof, with power to maintain, operate, extend and renew the same and that the said Peterborough Radial Railway shall when acquired be a public utility within the meaning of The Public Utilities Act and the provisions of the said Act, and of section 3 of Chapter 65 of the Acts passed in the year 1915 shall apply to said Railway and to the said Peterborough Utilities Commission, and their duties, authorities and powers in connection with the same, and that the said Peterborough Utilities Commission, with the consent of the Council shall have authority to borrow money for the purposes of the railway and shall have such other powers in connection with the management and maintenance of the Railway as the Council may by By-Laws confer.

5—To authorize the Council, without the assent of the Electors, to borrow such sums not exceeding $10,000.00 in addition to such amounts already provided or authorized, which may be required or needed to satisfy the amount of the award, costs, expenses and disbursements created or incurred by reason of the arbitration between the City of Peterborough and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, and the litigation resulting therefrom, and also the costs of the purchase of such property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, as was a part of the plant of the said Company, outside of the City of Peterborough and adjacent thereto, and to authorize the issue of Debentures of the Corporation therefor.

6—The amount of the rateable property of the Municipality is the sum of $11,561,220.00 and the existing Debenture debt exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates is the sum of $1,928,350.59 of which the following are the particulars: Waterworks $600,000.00, Electric Lighting and Power Plant $120,000.00, Local Improvements $344,375.28, Public Schools $253,650.00, Collegiate Institute $73,225.31, Protestant Home $10,000.00, General City Debentures $527,100.00.

WILSON MAY SEND AN ULTIMATUM TO THE BERLIN GOVERNMENT

ESTIMATES ON TRENT CANAL FOR CURRENT YEAR REDUCED BY ONLY FORTY PER CENT.

Welland Ship Canal's Expenditures Cut From Four and a Half Million to $200,000---Visit of Peterborough Delegates Bears Fruit---Nine Millions Voted for Pensions.

Special to The Review

OTTAWA, Feb. 1. — The work of the deputation from Peterborough that visited Ottawa recently to ask for the early completion of the Trent Canal has borne fruit. The estimate has been cut by only two-fifths, in comparison with the Welland Canal cut of four-fifths, which practically wipes it out. There has been general reduction in the estimates of about two hundred and forty-seven million dollars. The estimate for a public building in Peterborough has not yet been revoted, but this matter can be taken up later.

Some of the Figures

When the Commons met Wednesday afternoon Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, tabled the main estimates for the fiscal year, which commences on April 1, one-quarter of which are to be voted before the House adjourns, in order to allow Sir Robert Borden to attend the Imperial Conference. The estimates provide for an expenditure of $203,472,765, as compared with $271,015,545 voted last year. Supplementary estimates to be brought down later in the session will, of course, increase the amount to be voted.

Of the amount provided $182,359,215 are for consolidated account, or in other words for current expenditure, while $21,113,550 covers proposed capital expenditure.

The principle features of the estimates presented are heavy reductions in ordinary and capital expenditures of the Dominion Government for the coming year and the heavy increases in interest and pension accounts due to the war. The estimated increase in interest upon the public debt due to war borrowings is eighteen million dollars.

Three is an increase of five millions in pension charges, the total estimate on this account for the year being about nine millions. Against these increases the Government effects reductions of thirteen millions in public works and of twelve millions in railways and canals. The large items remaining in the estimates represent works under construction which, it is claimed, cannot be discontinued without national loss.

As compared with the estimates of last year there is a reduction of $1,500,00 in the total for consolidated fund account, and of $16,000,000 in expenditure on capital account. The estimates, of course, do not include anything for war appropriation.

$200,000 for Welland Canal

The main items on capital account for railways are $6,500,000 for construction and improvements of Government railways, $200,000 for Welland ship canal construction (as compared with $4,500,000 last year), $600,000 for canal inspection, $1,600,000 for the Quebec bridge, and $3,000,000 for the Hudson Bay Railway. The main items on capital account for public works are $2,000,000 for the restoration of the Parliament Buildings, $1,000,000 for St. John harbor improvements, $1,000,000 for the drydock at Quebec, $1,000,000 for Toronto harbor improvements, $750,000 for Port Arthur and Fort William harbor improvements, and $1,000,000 for Victoria, B.C., harbor improvements.

The vote for Federal aid for agricultural instruction in the Provinces under the act of 1912 is increased to $1,100,000 or by $100,000. The Immigration Department vote stands at $1,215,000, a decrease of $359,000 as compared with last session.

One Ontario Building

In Ontario the only new building for which a vote is asked is for a $4,000 building at Cardinal. Most of the votes in all the Provinces for public buildings and for harbors and rivers are either re-votes or else additional amounts required to complete works under construction last year.

Some of the Ontario votes are as follows:

Bowmanville, repairs to pier, $10,000.

Cobourg, repairs to east pier, $15,000.

OFFICIAL VIEW IN WASHINGTON IS SITUATION WILL BE CHALLENGED

President Wilson Expresses Incredulous Amazement But Has Not Yet Made a Statement on German Plan to Murder Neutrals

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Following a conference today between President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing, the opinion became generally prevalent in official quarters that a break in diplomatic relations with Germany seemed inevitable, although it was thought probable that an ultimatum of warning to the Berlin Government might precede this action. The view was taken widely in official circles that the United States could not let the situation stand unchallenged.

It became known today that the German situation is viewed with extreme gravity, and that the American Government had already begun to formulate definite steps. It was regarded as not impossible that action of some kind had already been taken, but there was no indication of its nature.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—President Wilson has given no intimation of the trend of his thoughts since he expressed incredulous amazement yesterday when informed of what was coming through in despatches from Berlin. So far as could be learned this morning, no arrangements had been made for him to appear before Congress. There is every indication that whatever the American Government does will be done quickly. Apparently it is agreed that there are but three courses open: Handing Count Von Bernstorff his passports without further ado, sending at once a warning to German that she will violate American rights at her peril, or awaiting development of the new starvation campaign against England.

CABINET CALLED TO DISCUSS NOTE.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—A Copenhagen despatch says a full meeting of the cabinet was held last night to discuss the German submarine note.

PORT OF NEW YORK OPENED AGAIN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—After being sealed all night by a cordon of destroyers and coast guard patrol boats, the port of New York was today opened by Customs authorities to all incoming and outgoing shipping. The stand taken by the collector of the port was that ships could sail at their own risk. They were permitted to clear as usual.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The German declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare was discussed at a special meeting of the Spanish cabinet at Madrid. An enormous sensation has been caused by the note.

INTEREST CENTRES IN U.S. POLICY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The German declaration of unrestricted war at sea has created a profound sensation in England, where it was unexpected. All interest centres on the policy the United States will adopt, as it is recognized that it will have a strong influence on other neutrals.

Big News in Brief

The St. Denis Theatre, Montreal, the largest moving picture house in Canada, is in liquidation.

REPRISALS TO BE TAKEN BY GT. BRITAIN

IF GERMANY CARRIES OUT HER THREAT TO DESTROY HOSPITAL SHIPS.

LONDON, Feb. 1. An official announcement includes the following:

"From the German Government's statement that hospital ships will be no longer tolerated within the limits mentioned only one conclusion can be drawn, viz., that it is the intention of the German Government to add yet other and more unspeakable crimes against the law of humanity to the long list which disgrace their record. In these circumstances the British Government has requested the United States Government to inform the German Government that his Majesty's Government has decided that if the threat is carried out reprisals will immediately be taken by the British authorities concerned."

ILL-TREATMENT IN A GERMAN PRISON.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 1.—Lt. Clyde Scott, brother of George Scott, of the Cockshutt Plow Co., who is now at Murren, Switzerland, having been transferred from a German military camp, tells of Teutonic neglect in a letter. For four days after being taken prisoner he received no attention at all from the Germans. Lt. Scott underwent seven operations for the removal of bone and shrapnel and was in bed for seven months. Doctors at first said he could not live two days.

DEALER FILLED LIQUOR ORDER

JUDGMENT IS RESERVED IN TEST CASE.

CHATHAM, Feb. 1.—The appeal from the decision of Magistrate Arnold, who dismissed the charge against F. A. Robert, former Chatham liquor merchant, now of Detroit, for selling and distributing liquor from his bonded warehouse here in response to orders mailed to his Detroit office, was argued before His Honor Judge Coughlin this afternoon. His Honor reserved judgment after hearing the argument of J. A. McKillop, of London, for the Crown, and J. C. Stewart for the defence. The case is a test one as to whether a party can be convicted of supplying liquor from a bonded warehouse to fill an order mailed to a branch office outside of the province. J. D. Flavelle and J. A. Ayearst, of the Ontario License Commission, watched the case.

AUTO LICENSES.

IT IS HARD TO GRASP the line of reasoning by which Dr. Amys arrives at the conclusion that the issuing of auto licenses should rest with the association. What would be the result if this principle were generally applied? The locomotive and other engineers, for example, would be allowed to select th men who license them. This arrangment would be no more incongruous than one permitting a man charged with an offence to name his judge and jury. Does the applicant for authority to practise medicine nominate the man who is to examnie him? Did the hotelkeepers, in the days of the license system, appoint the inspectors or the commissioners? The fact that a man has sufficient money to purchase and maintain an automobile is not adequate proof that he is capable of running it. That point should be decided by a disinterested party. Automobiles these days are killing more people than are the railways, and the Government of Ontario is being constantly importuned to tighten the regulations. If they are to be held responsible for the casualties, it is certainly only wair to allow the department to control the issuing of the licenses.

SAVINGS BANKS IN SCHOOLS.

MR. A. B. CUNNINGHAM, in his letter published yesterday, certainly makes out a strong case in favor of installing penny savings banks in the public schools, the object of the innovation being to teach thrift to the rising generation. These banks have been tried in the schools in other Canadian cities. The Peterborough Board of Education considered the matter some time ago, and decided that the proposition was hardly feasible, the difficulty being to find a bank that would be willing to co-operate.

In spite of the vigorous argument which Mr. Cunningham puts up for the school banks, there is still left a good deal that may be said on the other side of the question. In these days of unparalleled prosperity, which is sure to be followed by a period of depression, more or less protracted, after the war, economy is desirable, not only on the part of adults, but the principles of thrift should be taught to children. Everyone should help in conserving the wealth of the country against the day of rain that is sure to come.

There is an unfortunate tendency on the part of Canadian parents to attempt to shun the burden of the secular and religious instruction of their children. The latter are left entirely or almost so to the school teachers for the training which is so essential to fit them for life's battles. The Sunday school which the children attend one hour a day, one day a week, is regarded as the sole religious monitor with the majority of parents.

The child's first lesson in thrift should be received at home. It is not sufficient to give him money to put in a bank either at home or at school. He should be encouraged to earn this money for himself and then to take care of it. The parents are the proper persons to educate him along these lines.

In installing savings banks in public schools the great difficulty is to induce a bank to handle the accounts. The savings banks will not receive deposits of less than one dollar, and the amounts placed in the school treasury run from one cent up. The chartered bank that takes over the business is required to keep a separate account with each depositor, and it is claimed that the amount of clerical work involved costs more than the enterprise is worth.

In all the large American cities there are savings banks that accept deposits of five cents upwards. In such cities the school bank is not required. If such an institution were installed in Peterborough children could have their own bank accounts without using the schools as intermediaries. If those who favor penny banks would agitate for the acceptance of small accounts by the regular institutions, they would accomplish the object in view and spare the public schools and the teachers additional work in a course of instruction that is already overcrowded by fads.

Let this fact always be borne in mind by the advocates of penny savings— the banks object to handling deposits of less than one dollar, and this objection is not removed by the proposed innovation. It is no more reasonable to make banking an adjunct to our school system than it would be to adopt the same course with regard to any other line of business. Technical education has its place. Commercial work is taken up in our high schools and colleges, and the pupils there are taught the principles of saving and instructed in the mysteries of banking.

THAT NEW COUNTY BUILDING.

HAVING LONG SINCE emerged from the primeval stage, the County of Peterborough is worthy a public building in keeping with its importance. The city, too, is entitled to business quarters in other than a rented and inconvenient structure. The court house has recently been damaged by fire, and the question arises as to the advisability of repairing it or putting up an entirely new building.

Mr. G. W. Hatton, the County Crown Attorney, puts the matter squarely before the people in his letter to The Review yesterday. He shows how inadequate the present city and county offices are and the desirability of securing quarters in keeping with present requirements.

As Mr. Hatton says, the question resolves itself into one of expense. Would the ratepayers be willing to assume the cost of new city and county buildings at this time, when there are so many extra burdens on the tax rolls? That is the problem which the people will be given an opportunity to decide for themselves before any such outlay is undertaken by those in authority. The Review would welcome discussion of this subject in its columns by those who either favor or object to Mr. Hatton's proposition.

THEIR ONE LONE HOPE.

THE LIBERALS in this riding have one little hope left them, one thin plank on which to stand, one shaky life raft upon which they hope to make shore. The harp upon which the party tune is played is bereft of all but a solitary ragged string.

The only charge the Liberals here can make against the Government is the mendacious one that there are three Nationalists in the Cabinet, men who do anything and everything in their power to retard recruiting and who, from the first, have fought not for the cause of the Empire, but against Canada's participation in the war. That day is regarded as lost when the sun sets upon the local party organ and its editorial columns are not loaded with this prevarication. Does the organ itself take any stock in its own asesrtions or is it another of those things which it schools itself to believe but cannot?

The organ, perhaps, is buoyed up by the hope that it can deceive the gullible among its readers. Any person gifted with ordinary intelligence knows that the members of the Dominion Cabinet must be unanimous on all public questions and that a majority vote is not sufficient. Everything done to carry on the war has received the support of the so-called Nationalists, every one of whom has made recruiting speeches in his own province. It was these "Nationalists," too, who voted with the Government against the attempt of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to force the French language upon the schools of Ontario.

But with only one weapon left them, the Liberals cannot be blamed if in their desperation they make the most of it. A few weeks ago they assured each other that the mystic hand was tracing on the wall the doom of the Conservative party. They have been dismayed to find recently that, while the writing is there, they failed to interpret it correctly and that it was their own cause that was threatened.

MR. TURRIFF OUTDONE.

MR. TURRIFF, M.P., the Western gentleman who made himself notorious by his charges in the House that Premier Borden was opposed to recruiting and was doing his utmost to discourage enlistments in Quebec, has every reason to feel relieved. A more foolish representative than he has arisen in Parliament and public attention has been diverted to a new object.

Mr. Kyte of Richmond says that "no one can get either Patriotic Fund pay or separation allowance without the approval of a Conservative patronage committee." Does this apply to the Patriotic Fund in Peterborough, where more Liberals than Conservatives have been entrusted with its managemnt?

The time of Parliament is being wasted and the resources of the country dissipated by so-called debate in which such charges figure. What spirit has possessed the members of the Opposition, anyway? Is it not possible that there may be an urgent necessity for the commission which Capt. Burnham suggests? Lunacy is not an affliction peculiar to the private citizen.

WHEN THE WAR IS OVER.

ONE OF THE PLANS to help wipe out the national debt when the war is over has to do with Canada's farm lands. The project has been developed in London, and has public and other men of note behind it.

The memorandum of the committee in charge suggests that an Imperial board be formed to arrange with the Dominion of Canada for the purchase of two million acres of arable land in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and British Columbia for, say, forty millions sterling, paid by England at the rate of ten millions yearly, on the condition that the Dominion Government spends the whole capital in the immediate development of her lands.

It is believed that the value of these lands in such an Empire farm would speedily reach £20 per acre, or altogether the Empire would receive in cash four hundred millions sterling, which is the value of its debts for the war or pre-war.

The committee realize that this and similar plans affecting the other Dominions are dependent upon arrangements with the Governments of the Dominions which they say are pending.

Meanwhile the committee is proceeding with suggestions affecting the resources of the Crown Colonies and protectorates of India.

PEACE WITHOUT VICTORY MEANS TRIUMPH OF WRONG OVER RIGHT

"President Wilson has earned for this country the curse of Meroz, for he has not dared to stand on the side of the Lord against the wrongdoing of the mighty."

That's what Col. Roosevelt thinks of the Administration. Also he says: "Mr. Wilson asks the world to accept a Copperhead peace of dishonor."

The Colonel, questioned at Oyster Bay as to his opinion of Mr. Wilson's remarks to the Maryland preparedness delegation last Thursday, made the following statement:

"President Wilson has announced himself in favor of peace without victory and now has declared himself against universal service—that is, against all efficient preparedness by the United States.

"Peace without victory is the natural ideal of the man who is too proud to fight. In the event of war it is the only kind of peace open to the nation whose governors and leaders are too proud to fight and too foolish to prepare.

"It is spurned by all men of lofty soul, by all men fit to call themselves fellow-citizens of Washington and Lincoln or of the war-worn fighters who followed Grant and Lee.

Shames Americans

"The Tories of 1776 demanded peace without victory. The Copperheads of 1864 demanded peace without victory. These men were Wilson's spiritual forbears. But neither Washington nor Lincoln was among the men who draw the sword lightly, or who, when once it has been drawn sheath it without victory.

"If a righteous war is concluded by a peace without victory, such a peace means the triumph of wrong over right, and neutrality between right and wrong means the support of wrong against right.

"President Wilson's policies throughout his four years have brought woe to humanity and shame and bitterness of heart to all Americans, proud of the honor of their flag. President Wilson talks of the freedom of the seas.

"The basic form of freedom is to be free from murder. Yet President Wilson has not dared to secure even this elementary freedom for our men, women and children on the seas."

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Regarding the editorial in Tuesday night's issue, I would like to make the following comment. First, it is not necessary to teach children military training in order to have our young men qualified for military service when the need for such service arises, as the following case will show. A member of the 93rd Batt., who has been recently wounded, joined that battalion in the early fall of 1915. In three months he was appointed sergeant and was said by his company lieutenant to be the most efficient N.C.O. in his company. This young man had had no previous military training but had covered a thorough course in physical training. The time for military training comes after the boy has matured and had a strong body, sound heart and lungs, which only wise and thorough physical training can produce and which military training, in the strict sense of that term, cannot develop.

Secondly, the Duke of Wellington said that the battle of Waterloo was won on the fields of Eton and Rugby. What did they do on those fields —teach military training? No; at least it was the games of football, rugby and cricket that the Duke had in mind, and it is in these and other games that the qualities of courage, perseverance, initiative and the power to think and act quickly are developed. It is these very qualities as they have been developed in the British youth (for no nation has cherished the love of sport and games in their most wholesome sense as have the British peoples), that have given them the mastery over the much "military trained" German. The Iron Duke was right and this war has more than proved it.

Military training teaches obedience and correct posture, but any system of physical training that does not insist on these essentials is not worthy of the name.

A careful study by leaders in education in the United States recently led to the conclusion that military training for children is unwise and that attention should be given to the building up by means of a careful program of physical training, including the fundamental activities of running, jumping, climbing and throwing, bodily vigor and the development of physical fitness.

When this is done in our country there will not be 35 per cent. of the men who offer themselves for military service turned down, not because they have had no previous military training, but because they are physically unfit. Our present system is woefully inadequate to produce the desired results.

Thanking you for your consideration in publishing these views on most vital subject, I am yours for the best possible Canadian manhood.

CAN THIS BE?

Editor Review: It is reported that there are one hundred and thirty-seven applicants from Peterborough for a Senatorship. If this is true, the life of our worthy member must be like the picture of old Aunt Sally at a country fair when the boys have got through throwings things at it! Is all this begging for honors manly, or decent, even, if only half true, Mr. Editor? It is certainly ridiculous, if not worse.

Today's Story

Little Sammy was generally at loggerheads with his father, who had a habit of using his razor-strop in a way that was not in accordance with Sammy's views.

One morning, after the razor strop had been more than usually busy, Sammy's mother went out into the field to look after her much-stropped child. To her intense astonishment she found him fondling a huge goat for which he usually professed a deep hatred.

"Why, Sammy, darling, it is nice to see you being so kind to poor Billy! Why are you being so gentle with him today?"

Over Sammy's face came a look of unspeakable gratitude as he gave the wondering goat another carrot.

"He butted father into the pond this morning!" murmured the dear little chap, patting his four-footed friend affectionately.

C.P.R. Military Medal Hero

Corporal Ralph G. Murrow, who for four years previous to the outbreak of war was in the Passenger Department, C.P.R., Liverpool, has won the Military Medal.

Corporal Murrow joined the K.L.R. the day war was declared and went to France in February, 1915. Before the war he was a well-known member of the Harrowby Football Club and it is interesting to record the fact that the act which won for him the coveted medal was performed in the rescue of a club mate, A. H. Robertson, who had been seriously wounded. Corporal Murrow picked up his companion and carried him some 500 yards under a heavy fire to the British lines.

THE DISTILLERY IN THE HOME

A writer in the Medical Times not only takes a gloomy view of possible nationwide prohibition but suggests that it would add complications to our domestic life:

'Do we not know from past experience that where prohibition is enforced the people will make their own spirits? Prohibition could never be enforced, for it would be impossible for any government to police all homes. The making of spirits is a simple matter, requiring no more intelligence than bread making."

There is temptation here to suggest that if only a moderate quality of mind is necessary for the making of good bread then thousands of our bread cooks are intellectually sub-normal; but it is more to the point to consider the prospect of every rebellious home being equipped with a distillery, says the New York Sun.

To begin with, unless there should be a slump in the copper market the expense for worms and retorts would be huge. Again, there is little enough room in New York apartments as it is. If the still should come in the phonograph would have to go out. Most important of all, would man or wife be the moonshiner? The operation would require some knowledge of mechanics and chemistry. Your average New York man looks upon a screwdriver as complicated, and compared with his wife he knows nothing of chemistry at all. Flat dwelling wives are so busy now that they do not go in for the bread making which the medical writer holds so lightly. Would they be willing to give up the weekly matinee to compound a sour mash for their husbands' tipple?

If the day should come when Manhattanites set out to make their own alcoholic beverages it might be profitable for certain citizens of the Appalachians. "Learn by mail to make your own mountain dew; a few minutes' study every night of the courses from the Breathitt County Correspondence School will enable you to make, in your own home, the very best corn whisky, raging red rye and peach brandy. Are you going to sit idly and soberly at home while all your neighbors are taking advantage of this big offer?" How many internal revenue officers would be shot down the dumb waiter shaft?

It is well to add warningly that the Medical Times man declares that home made liquor is about the most injurious of any, but this opinion seems to be based on the illicit product of France, and there the peasants may not have taken up the work as seriously as our mountaineers did.

C.P.R. Solicitor Killed in Action

LIEUT. JAS. McNAUGHT.

THE Canadian Pacific Railway has lost another of its valued servants at the front. Lieut. Jas. McNaught, a Scotchman by birth, was one of the company's solicitors, with office in Montreal, and his death was recently reported in the casualty list. Lieut. McNaught was one of the most popular officials of the C. P. R. He was born at Walkerburn, Scotland, thirty-three years ago, and came to Canada in 1906, after qualifying as a solicitor in Edinburgh. Shortly after his arrival he joined the law department of the railway company. His abilities were quickly appreciated by those in higher authority, and his efforts were rewarded by a promotion as Assistant Solicitor on Jan. 1st, 1912. It was nearly three years afterwards that Lieut. McNaught was made one of the solicitors of the C. P. R., but when the war broke out, like many other Scotchmen, he had the fighting fever. He commenced his training with the McGill Battalion in the summer of 1915. On Nov 17th, the same year, he went back to Scotland and enlisted for active service in the Royal Scots as a private. He trained all through the winter until June, 1916, when he was selected to take an officer's training course. Lieut. McNaught had no difficulty in qualifying, and in October last he was appointed to the 2nd Batt. Royal Scots, and went to the front about the beginning of December. He was on the Somme front and was killed on January 7th.

FOUND HER IDEAL

BY GEORGE ELMER COBB

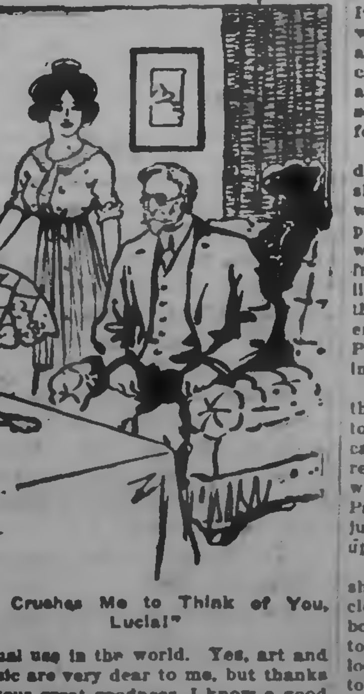
Daniel Forsythe considered himself one of the most fortunate men in the world when he became a partner with Roger Bell. He was getting old, his new business cares would be light, and Bell was a money maker. Besides that, young Denzil Bell and Lucia Forsythe were engaged.

It was true that young Bell was by no means the man the old business veteran would generally have selected for a son-in-law. The scion of the Bells was idle, without ambition, fickle and a spendthrift. As to Lucia, she had failed to find one ideal among the fashionable young men with whom she was brought in contact in the social swim. She had arrived at a marriageable age, however, and the principal anxiety of her father was to see her "settle down," as he expressed it. She sighed a trifle, and then in her great love for her father she decided to make a sacrifice of herself.

Then, rudely, unexpectedly, came the darkest day in the life of old Daniel Forsythe. With a crash the great house of Bell, Forsythe & Co. went down in ruin. All of the Forsythe fortune was involved. The Bells, however, were notorious for having ever "an anchor to windward." When the creditors were settled with the Bells flew as high as ever. Mrs. Bell had a fortune of her own, and on that the family could drift along very pleasantly. The first thing shallow, mean-spirited Denzil Bell did was to break the engagement with Lucia. She had expected it, and was devoutly glad that it had come about.

"We are paupers!" mourned her father. "And now the engagement is broken. It crushes me to think of you, Lucia. I had so counted on your trip abroad to finish up your art and music. Now—"

"Now, dear papa," cried Lucia, almost joyously, "I am free to have my own way, to really live, to be of some actual use in the world. Yes, art and music are very dear to me, but thanks to your great goodness, I know a good deal worth knowing of both. I am going to try to share those treasures, to impart my knowledge to the world at large."



"It Crushes Me to Think of You, Lucia!"

"Even if the crash had not come," declared her father, "it would not have meant much to me, for I am gradually breaking down in health."

"Nonsense!" cheered his hopeful daughter. "A month up among the pines with Aunt Carrie will soon drive away all such megrims. Papa, you have taken care of me all my life—how I am going to pay you back."

Lucia was as good as her word. She did not realize that the removal of social restrictions, the absence of matrimonial fetters, were elements in the vast courage and ambition that began to come into her life in a practical way.

Years previous Mr. Forsythe had given his widowed sister a small home at Wareham and had secured a permanent pension to her. This was now their refuge. Lucia found it to be a very humble home, indeed, but comfortable, cleanly kept, and, what made up for all other deficiencies, they were welcomed with true heartsome love. Lucia had arranged in the city to do some illustrating for two publications. A music house, too, had agreed to pay her something for arranging songs, so she began her new life with quite an encouraging income. Her work did not take up all her time, and she became immensely interested in the children of the poor factory workers of the town.

"I declare, papa," she said, one day about six months after their arrival in Wareham, "I believe I never knew what real happiness was until now. Think of it, this grand air and exercise have made you twenty years younger, the bank is willing to pay you well for a few hours of your time as adviser, I am earning a nice little sum, and oh! these dear little children. Mr. Page has selected those who seem to have the musical and art instinct, and Saturdays I have four different free classes. You should see some of their drawings. I am really proud of them, and there is not one of my music scholars who would not give up a whole holiday to practice on the piano."

The Mr. Page she had alluded to had come into Lucia's life quite prominently of late. He had charge of a school supported by the manufacturing plants at the edge of the town. The work was purely philanthropic. It was profound admiration for the way in which he had won the interest and love of his poor pupils, that had caused Lucia herself to long to be of assistance in co-operating to raise the social and educational status of the forlorn little ones.

Lucia would never forget to her dying day one golden afternoon when she was strolling by the riverside with Harold Page, discussing new plans for the benefit of their mutual work. Suddenly Harold had sprung from her side. Then she saw that a little girl playing in a boat tied to the shore near the mill dam had fallen into the water. Just in time Mr. Page made a plunge that rescued the imperiled child from sure death.

The little one was more frightened than hurt. When Page carried her to a grassy plot, Lucia sat down to care for the weeping child, and her rescuer hovered near by to soothe her with gentle words. "Oh, dear Mr. Page! You was so good, so grand to jump in and get all wet and mussed up, just for a bad, naughty little girl!"

She was so grateful, so happy, that she seized his hand. She drew it close to that of Lucia, and kissed them both, and held them there so close together that Lucia blushed and Page looked embarrassed. It awoke Lucia to a quick comprehension of the fact that she had found her ideal at last. It nerved Mr. Page to speak out what had been in his heart for some time.

"Miss Forsythe," he said, as they walked slowly homeward, "anybody would be pardoned for the common belief that you are a princess in disguise, and really I was led to believe that you were the great heiress they said. But I have learned that your work here is real soul labor. I have something more in worldly wealth than my humble but glad position here would seem to indicate. Let me share it with you."

And on such a dreamy, mellow evening, and with such earnest words from such a man, Lucia Forsythe could not say him nay.

BATHING THE BABY

A GOOD TUBBING SHOULD BE A DAILY EVENT IN HIS LIFE:

Most mothers would feel that you had insulted them if you intimated that the baby they love so much was not their most precious belonging—and yet these same mothers will sometimes let the "call of the housework" come before the "call of the baby." Every mother should determine if anything is to be neglected it must not be the little helpless atom of humanity whose only hope and shelter is her tender heart and loving arms.

Take time to bathe your baby every morning, even if you must leave the breakfast dishes until later. Bathing the baby is such a delightful task that it does not seem possible that any mother would neglect it. She can make it her rest time during the morning. A baby should be bathed every day if it is perfectly normal and does not show any temperature, but if the baby is the least bit feverish and "fussy" a sponge bath in tepid water often will do him more good than a dose of medicine.

The bath should be of the temperature of 98 degrees F., and this should be decided by the use of a thermometer and not by the hand. The child should be ready for the bath when the bath is ready for the child, or the water will become too cold. The child should be placed in a warm blanket while being dried and then be at once slipped into warmed clothing.

Never bathe the baby just after it has had its milk. Use only the best soap and be sure that the "wash rag" you use is perfectly clean. Don't be afraid of bathing your baby even if it has stomach trouble. Indeed, a bath will be found to be of great benefit. After you have used soap and water rinse well with clear water and pat the baby dry with the softest of clean towels and the lightest of touches.

As baby lies on his back most of the day, you can impart an extra coolness to him by laying him over your lap before you put on his clothes and rubbing talcum powder over his little back.

Put your baby in the bathtub at least once a day and you will be astonished how soon he will grow to love it and how he will stretch and squirm and "coo" when you rub his back afterward with the powder. It is well to do all this just before his feeding time and not less than two hours after a meal, so that when he is bathed and dressed he can be fed and like any other comforted and comfortable little animal can go to sleep.

MISERABLE FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Felt Wretched Until He Started To Take "Fruit-a-tives"

594 CHAMPLAIN ST., MONTREAL.

"For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I had frequent Dizzy Spells, and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints, and my hands swollen.

A friend advised "Fruit-a-tives" and from the outset, they did me good. After the first box, I felt I was getting well and I can truthfully say that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that helped me". LOUIS LABRIE.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THERE is lots of satisfaction in having something laid by for a rainy day, but sometimes the cashier gets both the cash and the satisfaction.

Why do we always remember the disagreeable job we have to do and forget the one we really don't mind doing?

It is easy enough to pick flaws in the other fellow's work, but could you do better yourself?

Some persons are good because they are too lazy to be bad.

A gentlewoman may do as she pleases—if she has the price.

Every mother knows one boy that wouldn't smoke cigarettes.

Figures don't lie, but they furnish a basis.

Nothing disgusts a man so much as to tell the latest smart thing that baby said to a bachelor friend and have the same man come back with a story about his cute little niece. Bachelors should be fair game.

If you don't expect too much in this world you will save yourself a heap of disappointments.

Coming and Going.

"I am going to start two weather bureaus. There is a fortune in it."

"But why more than one? It will be a duplication of work."

"Yes, and it will be a duplication of results. Each will predict directly the opposite of the other, and one will always be right."

Fashions in the Factory

CANADIAN women of to-day are demonstrating their keen patriotism in a great many ways, but the latest and most up-to-date is the donning of man's overalls and playing a most important part in the workshops of the Dominion. It was at their own instigation that they exhibited a desire to take the places of the men who had gone to the war. The women of England are making munitions and replacing those at the front in almost every kind of trade, and it is nowadays considered to be abreast of the times for the women of Canada to do a similar work and their little bit to help the country in times of need.

A shortage of man labor has given the women every opportunity, and they have risen to the occasion. In the C. P. R. Angus Shops at Montreal the women have been first with the ambition of emulating their sisters in England who are now wearing overalls just like men, and now they also "wear the breeches." They are glad of the change, for the skirts often hampered their work. The overall gives them much comfort and has been found of considerable convenience, particularly in the paint shop. The overall gives them more confidence in carrying out the work. Without the women the Empire cannot win the war.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Cream Toast

Cream toast is a most maligned article of food. Very few know how to prepare it. The cream or white sauce should be cooked at least 35 minutes in a double boiler.

To one cup of warm milk add a pinch of salt. Take one even tablespoon of corn starch wet with one tablespoon of cold milk. Blend until perfectly smooth. Put into the warm milk. Stir until it is as thick as cream. Set back on range allowing the water in the boiler to boil slowly twenty-five minutes. Stir to avoid lumps. When ready to serve add one teaspoon of butter and send to table to be put over slices of bread that have been toasted golden brown. Toast sandwiches. Any kind—a bit of meat, fish or cottage cheese.

A Nursery in Kitchen

Of course the baby is in the way in the kitchen—but it's necessary to have him there sometimes. Let's swing him from the ceiling, out of the way of your feet and the hundred and one things he can get his little hands into.

Have husband get a soap box and cut it down on one side. Attach ropes to the box and hang it wherever it is convenient. Drive a few extra nails in the seat and back of the box, as the kind of boxes soap usually comes in are none too strong.

Keep the Hands Soft

To keep the hands soft, even through the rigors of housecleaning time, apply the following lotion before the hands are dried each time they are washed: Dissolve a lump of gum camphor the size of a hazelnut in half a pint of alcohol; add one tablespoonful each of glycerine and of lemon juice. If the skin is naturally very dry, use less alcohol.

For Women to Know

If it is absolutely necessary to take up a bone in the fingers, only one hand should be used.

A hostess should not attempt either to eulogize her dishes or to apologize that she cannot recommend them. This is extremely bad taste.

All meats should be cut across the grain in very thin slices. Fish at dinner should be baked or boiled—never fried or broiled.

To Sprinkle Clothes Quickly

To sprinkle clothes quickly, use a cheap whisk broom and clean, warm water. The whisk should be kept exclusively for the purpose, as otherwise there is danger of its holding dust and thus spotting the clothes.

Corn Starch Pudding

A simple corn starch pudding made as follows: To one quart of milk, after cream has been taken, put in double boiler. Mix five even tablespoons of corn starch with four tablespoons of sugar. This may be put into the milk without blending. Add very slowly stirring all the time. When it begins to thicken add one-half teaspoons of salt and either a piece of stick cinnamon or a strip of orange or lemon peel. This should cook—not rapidly—for half an hour. Stir often to avoid a skin forming on the top. Pour into moulds that have been wet with cold water. Set aside to cool gradually. May be served with any fruit juice or cream.

Tomato Savory

Take 1 tin tomatoes, 1 thick slice stale bread, dessertspoonful butter, sugar, and pepper and salt. Melt butter in a frying-pan, and when hot pour in the tomatoes from the newly-opened tin. Add bread cut into dice, and then the sugar. Season generously with pepper and salt. Cook rapidly for 10 minutes, and serve hot. This is a delicious dish.

WORK OF WOMEN

An exhibition within an exhibition is the women's section in the Children's Welfare Exchange at Olympia. Here are represented all the activities of woman, her interests and achievements in the world of art and letters, as well as her work in industry and her power of co-operation and initiative in movements of social reform. The exhibition has been organized by the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies for the purpose of advertising the woman's movement and of proving the breadth and extent of woman's work and capacities and the consequent justice of her claim to enfranchisement. A very interesting feature of the exhibition is the contribution which it makes towards the solution of the housing reform problem among agricultural laborers. Arnold Mitchell, an expert in the matter of cottage building, has erected on the ground floor of Olympia a semi-detached cottage built of concrete hollow blocks, with a non-conducting air pad in the centre of each. The ground floor consists of a living room, a wash house with a copper boiler, a cycle store, coal store and lobby, while upstairs there are three bed rooms. The complete cost of the cottage, exclusive of the land, is $625.

EVANGELIST AT HASTINGS

MISS MORTON IS HOLDING MOST SUCCESSFUL MEETINGS.

(Special Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Jan. 31. —An interesting letter is to hand from Lieut. F. S. Hubbs, in which he gives an interesting account of his trip to Switzerland, where he is interned. He speaks very feelingly of the boys who went overseas with him, and says, according to latest reports, only four of them are left.

The Methodist Ladies' Aid met on Thursday afternoon in the church parlor, when important items of business were discussed and disposed of.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was dispensed on Sunday morning, Rev. Isaac Snell officiating. The special evangelistic services commenced on Sunday evening, conducted by Evangelist Kathleen Morton, who is a forcible speaker and who easily held the attention of the congregation throughout the entire service. Services will be continued nightly through the week.

Quite a number of our young people drove to Mr. Alfred Metcalfe's home on Friday night, where a social was held under the auspices of the Elm Sunday school. A large crowd attended and a pleasant evening was spent together. Refreshments were served and much enjoyed, as there was enough for all.

Mrs. Wm. Warner entertained a number of young people to a 5-o'clock tea on Wednesday last, when a very enjoyable hour was spent.

A merry sleigh load of young people went out to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brooks on Wednesday evening and enjoyed themselves with the family.

Several of our citizens took a trip to Peterborough on Dollar Day.

Miss Honey of Percy has been the guest of Mrs. Wm. Warner.

Mr. M. Brown, reeve of Asphodel, is receiving congratulations on his election to the position of warden for 1917.

Pte. Brooks of Cobourg has been the guest of Mr and Mrs. A. Brooks of Percy.

Dr. Huycke took a business trip to Cobourg on Thursday.

Mrs. James Stevenson and Miss Gladys took a trip to Peterborough during the week.

Mrs. Charlie Plant returned on Saturday from an extended visit with friends in Lakefield.

Mr. Ed. Lynch was in Cobourg on Thursday.

Miss Carrie Doxsee has returned from a visit with friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. Menzies and children of Western Canada are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Metcalfe.

Miss Lillian Richards of Toronto is visiting her friend, Mrs Charlie Plant.

Miss Mae Huycke has returned from a visit with friends in Peterborough.

Miss Ethel Collins is on a visit in Campbellford.

We are pleased to learn of improvement in the condition of Mrs. Hugh Collins. Her many friends wish for her a speedy restoration to her wonted health.

Miss Minnie McConnell is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. Metcalfe.

Mrs. Alex. Greenley returned during the week from a pleasant visit with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Albert Armstrong has been with Lindsay friends.

Mrs. Beamish has returned from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Dukelow, of Beaverton.

Mr. James Buttars of Fort William is renewing acquaintances here.

CAUSED A RIOT AMONG GERMANS

CALENDAR PICTURES THE KAISER IN BRITISH PRISON.

Mr. J. F. Linton, secretary of Clan Alpine Lodge, Sons of Scotland, has received from San Francisco a unique calender issued on behalf of the British League by a publishing firm in that city. The Kaiser is pictured in every attitude of his true character as a war monster, and in one scene is represented in a prison cell wearing the costume of the British convict. "And to think," he is made to say, "that I once swore I would never appear in the British uniform again."

The police of San Francisco issued an order forbidding the hanging of the calendar in public as the sight of it was likely to breed a riot among the German residents.

Phenomenal Strides Made By Canadian Northern Railway System in First Year as Transcontinental

New System in the Past Year Carried Approximately 131,000,000 Bushels of Wheat, an Increase of 125 per cent over Previous Year—Company's New Mileage on Pacific Coast and Northern Ontario Makes Astonishing Showing Right from Commencement of Operation—Company's Lines Most Favorably Located.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Toronto, February 1.

The phenomenal gains that the Canadian Northern Railway reports for its year as a transcontinental line makes the statement one of the most important that has ever been issued by any railway in Canada It is even doubtful whether the tremendous increases in business handle have ever been duplicated by any system in the world. There are many features to the report that make it of special import to every Canadian, owing to the interest the country has in the building up of this important transcontinental line and the attractive territory that has been developed through the completion of the system. The feature of the report that is likely to be especially gratifying is that which shows the prominent part the Canadian Northern, with its transcontinental system, has been able to play in handling such a large proportion of the grain requirements of the Mother Country.

Right along it has been the contention of Sir William Mackenzie and his associates that it was only a matter of a very short period before Canada and the Empire would enjoy the benefits of the big system that had been built up across the Dominion, and the showing made in the report indicates that these hopes have been realized much earlier than it would have been thought possible when the transcontinental system was set in operation a little over a year ago.

Important Gains of Year

A few of the outstanding features of the report are as follows: An increase in freight traffic during the year of $8,352,412, equivalent to as much as 45.87 per cent.; increase in passenger traffic, $717,246, or a gain of 13.25 per cent.; an increase in total operating revenue of $9,564,168, or 36.91 per cent. over the previous year. That the company's lines handled over 131,000,000 bushels of grain is proof positive that the railway has been located in the best grain growing areas of the West.

The exact grain traffic handled amounted to 131,978,809 bushels as compared with 58,575,520 bushels in 1915, or an increase of 73,403,289, equivalent to an increase of as much as 125.31 per cent.

That the Company has been able to make such striking gains in the amount or traffic handled over its lines will undoubtedly be more readily appreciated when it is remembered that it was only operated as a transcontinental system during the last seven of the twelve months of the fiscal year and when it is recalled that last winter the weather conditions in the Western Provinces and more particularly in British Columbia, were the most severe that had been experienced in a great many years, in fact, in some instances were the most difficult that Canadian railways had ever to meet in that part of the country. It should also be pointed out that the Company had the disadvantage, owing to the conditions arising from the war, of being without its own terminals in such important centres as Vancouver in the West, and Montreal in the East.

Company's Earning Power

The development that is sure to be most favorably received by everybody who is following the growth of the larger Canadian railways will come from the fact that the Canadian Northern Railway has come within hailing distance of earning its total fixed charges, the deficit for the year being brought down to less than a quarter of a million dollars, a reduction from the previous year of almost $1,400,000. As was to be expected, a great proportion of the increased revenues come from the large crop gathered in the Canadian West in the fall of 1915, but since that time there has been a marked increase in the general freight traffic handled over the lines, and during the first four months of the current fiscal year gross earnings have continued to show large increases over the corresponding periods of the year now under review. Perhaps the most striking development in this connection is that it is in the month of October that the heaviest grain movement occurs, and yet in October, 1916, the gross earnings shows a gain over those of the same month in the previous year. As the grain crop was very much lighter, this evidently indicates that the growth in the traffic in other commodities has more than offset the lighter grain movement of the year now being reported on.

Division of Earnings

The results of the operations of the system for the fiscal year ended June 30th, 1916, and comparisons with the previous year are as follows:

	1916	1915
Gross Earnings—
From Passenger Traffic	$ 6,128,470	$ 5,411,224
From Freight Traffic	26,560,213	18,207,800
From Express, Mail, Telegraph, Interest and profits from Elevators and other Subsidiary Companies, Investments, etc.	2,787,591	2,293,081
	$35,476,275	$25,912,106
Working Expenses (Including Taxes, etc	26,102,744	19,288,814
Net Earnings	$ 9,373,530	$ 6,623291
Deducting Fixed Charges	9,621,657	8,263,574
Net Loss or Deficit	$ 248,127	$ 1,640,283

Some of the interesting features of the Board of Directors' report as indicating the position of the line and the progress is has made include the folowing.

An agreement of great importance in the development of the System's freight and passenger traffic was made with the Cunard Steamship Co. In future the Cunard line and the Canadian Northern Railway will be, in fact, a single transportation unit between Europe and Canada.

The possession of such favorable grades as those on the System's lines has given the Canadian Northern an already important advantage in the economy of operation, particularly in carrying the two commodities offering in largest volume, viz. lumber and grain.

The main lines of the Canadian Northern Railway from Quebec to Vancouver is superior to any line crossing the continent of America in points of grade and curvatures favoring traffic.

The lines of the Company's system are now serving 75 per cent. of the aggregate population of the cities and towns of all Canada, having 5,000 inhabitants and over.

The present situation emphasizes the fact that the Railway is not as dependent upon grain crop movement as in the past, and in becoming transcontinental has acquired a highly diversified traffic. The developments of the year confirm the Directors in the belief that they strongly hold, that the ultimate prosperity of the Canadian Northern Railway System is measurable only by the prosperity of the Dominion of Canada.

APPOINTMENTS FOR TOWNSHIP OF ENNISMORE

UNUSUALLY LARGE NUMBER OF SHEEP KILLED BY DOGS.

(Special Correspondence.)

ENNISMORE, Feb. 1— The inaugural meeting of the municipal council of Ennismore was held on Jan. 29. The meeting was three weeks later than usual on account of a by-election. All members were present. After taking the declarations of qualifications of office the following took their chairs at the Council table: Reeve Young, Councillors Patrick Y. Crowley, Wm. Harrington, Clayton Telford, Eugene Moloney.

After referring to several sections in the municipal statutes of Ontario, business began with the appointment of officers. The officers are: John Moloney, clerk; Wm. B. Crough, treasurer; W. F. Cavanagh assessor; Patrick G. Sullivan and Michael Geary, auditors.

The chief matter to be considered was the unusual large number of sheep killed by dogs.

The British Red Cross appeal for contributions from the beginning of the war, to the amount of $2290 was filled out and reported.

By resolution the following accounts were drawn on the treasury: Dr. Galvin, attending to Beaver family in sickness, $12; Joseph Costello, poll clerk, two elections, $6; Patrick G. Sullivan and Michael Geary, auditors, $10.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

WASH POISON FROM SYSTEM EACH MORNING AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels, the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, billousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practise internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Mending Trousers.

Two pastors' wives were visiting together. One said: "I don't know what we will do—my husband is so discouraged. Somehow his people do not care to hear him preach, and our salary is far behind. My husband feels so blue that he does not like to visit the people and pray with them, and so he sits around at home nearly all the time." The other sister said: "We are getting along fine. My husband spends much of his time visiting, and the people like to have him kneel and pray with them in their homes. Our congregations are always good, and our salary is paid up promptly." While the two sisters were talking they were mending trousers. One was mending her husbands' trousers at the seat, the other was mending her husband's trousers at the knees.

An Odd Invention.

More than 50 feet of tin tubing, filled with peas, is used by an English inventor to filter the scratching and metallic sounds from phonograph music.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

SOME EYES NEED A DOCTOR

When Dr. Fowler finds that a patient's eyes have a deeper trouble than any he can correct with his "PEBLO" Glasses, he does not make any attempt to prescribe, or give the patron unnecessary expense in experimenting, but at once advises the party to go to an oculist for treatment. This only occurs on rare occasions, but proves that Dr. Fowler has his patrons' best interests always in mind.

Born—In the township of Cavan, on Thursday, Jan. 25, to Mr. and Mrs Fred Patton, a son.

Died—In Cavan on Sunday, Jan. 21, Margaret May Cann, wife of Thomas Williamson.

The friends of Mrs. T. J. Lang will regret to learn she has had to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

The death of John McLaren took place at Cavanville on Wednesday, Jan. 24, at the age of 85 years. Deceased was born at Oxbow, Que. He moved to Peterborough nearly sixty years ago and five years ago he came to Cavan, where he had since resided. He was a member of the Church of England and a Conservative. He maried Elizabeth Widdis of Cavan about 53 years ago, and she predeceased him seven years. To this union six sons and three daughters were born, all of whom survive. They are: John George in the U.S., William, Fred and Sydney of Cavan, Alex of Saskatchewan, Thomas of Toronto, Mrs. C. Hard of Cavan, Miss Elizabeth McLaren of New York and Mrs. R. Hard of Sask. The funeral to St. John's Cemetery, Cavan, on Friday was largely attended. Rev. Canon Allen conducted the services at the house and grave. The bearers were Messrs. James Douglas, E. Keegan, Jas. Keegan, W. Tinney, W. Pritchard and J. Swain.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 313 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Tea and coffee do disagree with many. And in these days of accurate scientific knowledge there's no virtue in appearing astonished when this truth is faced.

Caffeine (the drug in coffee, and in tea also) leaves the system in an overworked and debilitated state, and is responsible for various serious ills and discomforts.

Thousands who desire an appetizing hot table beverage with none of tea or coffee's drawbacks, find a most delightful cup — one containing no deleterious substance whatever, in

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

The market this week has been quiet. There were a few loads of hay and some wood, but not nearly as much as last week. There was no change in the prices.

Straw is in demand, with very few loads on sale.

The local grain market is steady at last week's quotations. The local buyers have all they can handle.

The drovers are on the lookout for cattle, owing to the high prices prevailing on the Toronto and Montreal markets. The butchers complain of a shortage, and are wondering where the supply will come from for the local trade.

Hogs are quoted at $13.75 for this week's delivery, and are firm at this price.

Eggs and butter have dropped in Toronto and Montreal.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—Buying of remounts for the French army measured up to normal at the Repository last week, when between 90 and 100 horses were obtained by the inspections. Local trade was rather slow, however, although there is an active spring business in store for Toronto firms, according to the views expressed by local horse dealers. A few good expressers and wagon horses are being picked up at good prices. The western buyers are still in the market but their operations last week were not extensive.

CATTLE SHORTAGE TO BRING HIGHER PRICES SOON

BUTCHERS ANNOUNCE INCREASES

The scarcity of cattle in this section of Ontario is now being felt to a great extent by the local butchers and it is almost impossible to get hold of enough finished cattle to have a supply on hand when the bad weather sets in. The result is that slightly higher prices will be charged for beef ranging from one to two cents a pound, according to the cut.

The high prices being paid for cattle on the outside market also tends to make the dressed beef cost the butcher very much more than he ever dreamed of. The packers are quoting as high as $16 per 100 lbs for beef by the carcass.

Some of the butchers have put the increased prices in effect today but most of them are not not doing so until Monday.

In conversation with one of the leading meat dealers of the city, he stated to the Review man that Peterborough county was never so short of killing cattle, and he attributes it to the shortage of feed and the great demand for canning cattle. He expects still higher prices in the early spring. In regard to other meats, the same condition exists. There are few veal calves, a scarcity of sheep and lambs and a great demand for hogs, with the highest prices being paid for every one of them.

MANITOBA COW SCHEME IS SUCCESS

THIRTY GROUPS OF FARMERS RECEIVED BOVINES FROM GOV'T.

The "Manitoba cow scheme," brought into being at the last session of the Provincial Legislature, by way of an act known as "The Settlers Animal Purchase Act," has been in active operation since May 1, 1916. From figures just compiled by the Department of Agriculture, its scheme has justified in its working out the expectations of the Minister of Agriculture.

About 750 cows and over 100 heifers were delivered to farmers up to Dec. 1. Thirty groups of farmers, making a total of about 250 settlers, received cows. Many of these have had the animals all summer and have made a good profit on them.

The Manitoba cow scheme was designed to meet conditions in a single district in the Province, namely, the district north of township 14 and between Lake Winnipeg and Lake Manitoba. This is a rough country, heavily timbered, where the clearing of land for grain growing is a long and expensive process. The people who had gone into this district were without means and being unable to get quick returns from grain crops as homesteaders in other parts of Manitoba have been able to do in years past, were making slow progress.

Oleomargarine.

There has been considerable controversy recently in regard to oleomargarine, and the question is frequently asked whether its manufacture and sale should be permitted. In answer to this we would say that there is no scientific reason why oleomargarine should not be manufactured and sold as a substitute for butter, insisting, however, that it be sold only as a substitute and labeled as such. It contains practically as much nourishment as butter, and as far as experiments have gone, has been shown to be quite as digestible, in fact, preferable to the lower grades of butter. It can be manufactured and sold for decidedly less than butter. Steps should undoubtedly be taken at once to secure legislation that would warrant the manufacture and sale of this article of diet, in view of the prohibitive cost of butter at the present time.—From Report of M. H. O. Bulletin, November, 1916.

New Grain Elevators.

J. C. Gage, president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, said that the Canadian Pacific Railway is preparing to expend between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 in grain elevators and additional terminal facilities at Vancouver, B.C.

There is not the slightest doubt but that the morning of Feb. 20 will see a host of curlers here, if the weather man is generous.

Vice-Skip Percy Fitzgerald has been challenged by Vice-Skip Tooley to curl a game for the honor of holding the Mercantile Cup. The selected ricks will decide the matter on Saturday evening.

Wagner has not yet signed a contract for 1917.

"This automobile seems to be a swell machine, all right," said the man who was looking it over and taking a sample ride. "Could you let me take it a week on trial?"

"That is against the rules," said the salesman.

"But why a week?" asked the salesman.

"Well," replied the man in a burst of confidence, "we are going to have company for just that long."

PAID WITH HIS LIFE FOR DEED OF GALLANTRY

TRENTON OFFICER WON A MEDAL BUT DID NOT SURVIVE THE DAY.

Sergt. Harry S. Hayes, of Trenton, the popular graduate and athlete of the University of Toronto, who was killed in action last month, performed a very gallant deed a few days before he fell, for which he was awarded the Military Medal. The following letter received by his father, Mr. H. W. Hayes, of Trenton, from Major E. C. Hall, gives details of his bravery and his death: "I know how inadequate it is for a stranger," he writes, "to write a father about the loss of his son, but please don't look upon me as an outsider, as your son in the short time we were together installed himself in my thoughts. I really think the way he had of smiling with eyes is what endeared him so much to us. Only a few days before we had a gun-pit hit and the ammunition set on fire. Apparently everyone was accounted for, but he had an idea that someone was amongst the burning and exploding shells, so with his great friend, Sergt. Little, he went back to the fire and put it out, only to find that the man he thought might be only wounded had been killed instantly. He did all this under heavy shell fire, with the additional danger from the bursting shells that were on fire. He was awarded the Military Medal, but unfortunately he never knew about winning the decoration.

"I am only mentioning one incident, but his work was always of that type. If he had been spared he would have been granted his commission early in the winter, or rather as soon as there would have been vacancies. He was one of the finest men I have ever had the pleasure of serving with, and was without exception the most efficient N.C.O. I have ever known."

Giving Him Confidence.

It was his [illegible] campaign, his first political speech even. Although the county committee had sent him into a rural district to try out his oratorical wings, he was encouraged by the warm welcome of the local committee that were evident on all sides. There was even a band that played on the stand in the public square for half an hour before the speech. The chairman stepped to the platform rail and addressed the crowd. "Fellow-citizens," he said, "we have with us to-day a young man who is destined to make his mark in the ranks of our party. He comes to tell us of the burning issues that confront us, and his fame as an orator has preceded him. He will now address you, and when he has finished the band will call you together again."

Bread is made from chestnuts by the mountain peasantry in Italy and France. After the nuts have been blanched they are dried and ground. From this flour a sweet and heavy cake is made which resembles the oaten meal cakes so popular in Scotland.

CONFESSIONS AS MADE BY PRISONERS

PRIVY COUNCIL DECISION HAS EFFECT ON CANADIAN JUSTICE.

At the Chief Constables' Convention of Canada, held in Brantford in 1912, Chief Rogers of the Ontario Provincial Police, read a very valuable paper on "Confessions" made to the police by parties arrested for criminal offences. The paper gave rise to most interesting discussion, and a Special Committee was appointed to deal with certain points raised by the paper and the discussions thereon. Since that date Chief Rogers has had again to fight for the admission as evidence at trials of such statements and successfully established the right to offer such evidence if desired. Especially was this the case in the appeal of the King vs. Respa, who was finally convicted and sentenced for attempting to blow up the Peabody factory at Wallaceburg. In the case an officer of the Ontario Provincial Police had questioned Respa, taken down in writing the questions and answers, filling three pages of typewritten matter. Mr. Justice Falconbridge admitted the evidence and Respa was convicted.

A case which has been finally decided by the Imperial Privy Council, and referred to by Superintendent Rogers in carrying out the ends of justice in Canada makes it quite clear that statements made by an accused person to a superior officer, or even to any other person, can be properly used as evidence at the trial, although the accused party has not been warned by the officer that such evidence may be used against said accused. The case we refer to is known as Ibrahim v. the King, on appeal from the Supreme Court of Hong Kong. Ibrahim was an Afghan, but enlisted in an Indian Regiment, and so took the oath of allegiance to the King. The regiment was stationed at the British possession of Shameen Island, Canton, China. One evening Ibrahim shot Ali Shafa, one of his officers. The officer died almost immediately. While accused was in custody of the guard and in bonds with handcuffs and manacles on him, Major Barrett, the British officer in command, came up. As soon as the Major saw Ibrahim he said to him: "Why have you done such a senseless thing." To this Ibrahim replied: "Some three or four days he has been abusing me; without doubt I killed him." At the first trial of Ibrahim the jury failed to agree, but at the second trial accused was found guilty, but appealed to the Supreme Court at Hong Kong for a reversal of the death sentence. At both the first trials Major Barrett's question and Ibrahim's reply were admitted as evidence. The case came before the Supreme Court of Hong Kong, which unanimously upheld the conviction and confirmed the death sentence. The case was then appealed to the Privy Council in London, England. All the technicalities as to whether the accused could be tried in a British court, and as to whether or not he was a British subject, were speedily swept aside by the Privy Council, which declared that the Hong Kong Court was perfectly right in trying the man, and that he became of his own volition a British subject on joining the British army and taking the oath of allegiance.

Regarding the admissibility of Major Barrett's question and Ibrahim's reply as evidence at the trial, the court also unanimously upheld the procedure and declared that the admissibility of such a class of evidence was always "permissible in evidence against a prisoner unless it was shown that it was obtained from the accused or the prisoner by fear of prejudice or hope of advantage exercised or held out by a person in authority." Finally the court declared that unless the circumstances surrounding the "confession" made it quite clear that the "confession" had been secured by threats or offers of reward, all statements by the accused or a prisoner were admissible.

It's as easy to please an enemy as it is not to please a friend.

RALPH CONNOR TELLS OF NOBILITY OF CANADIANS

He Was at the Front as Chaplain of the 43rd Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, and Will Assist in the National Service Campaign

AFTER eighteen months in England and at the battlefront in his capacity of chaplain of the 43rd Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, Major the Rev. C. W. Gordon, better known to the reading world as "Ralph Connor," is back in Canada on two months' leave. During his short respite from active service work he has been requested to assist in the National Service campaign, and has consented to devote part of his time to the cause.

"Ralph Connor" is greyer than he was when he went away. The battalion whose spiritual adviser he was went into the Somme fighting round Regina Trench 900 strong. It came out mustering but sixty-five rifles, and its gallant commander, Lieut.-Colonel Thompson, was not there to take the muster roll, having fallen in the fight.

The chaplain of the regiment, however, brings back to Canada a message of optimism and a story of grim determination on the part of the Allies to see this thing through.

"Peace!" he remarked when interviewed in Ottawa. "The only peace talked of in England to-day is that based upon the declaration of Mr. Asquith at the beginning of the war. There is no man of any standing or influence in the old land to-day who has deviated one iota from that stand, endorsed as it was by the whole people. Not that there is anyone who is not sick of this war, and would welcome peace, but we have left too many splendid men up in the salion of Ypres and lying at the Somme to give up what we thought was right at the commencement of the great conflict. If we were right then we are right now, and if we are right now we would be traitors to quit under present conditions.

"The spirit of our men is splendid. The spirit of the whole people is splendid. In fact that spirit is the continual wonder of the war. Nobody talks of peace until our task has been accomplished.

"What we want in the next few months," he continued, "is such a demonstration of power on the part of the Allies as will break the heart of the German militarists. It is very near the breaking point now. When the spring comes — well, we shall see."

Major Gordon was asked what in his own opinion would most stimulate recruiting in Canada. He showed surprise.

"Does it require stimulating?" he asked. "Is it possible that any young man in Canada fit to go and fight and who ought to go and fight is unwilling to do so?

"If the facts in regard to the war were put vividly before the minds of the youth of Canada they could not fail to respond. Do you think that any man with red blood in his veins could fail to respond to the real story of the retreat from Mons? I don't believe that story is known in Canada—the story of the terrific and glorious exploit of the 'contemptible little British army'—really the finest army which ever went forth to fight for any cause in the world, whether in personnel or equipment. There was nothing like it in Germany. There was nothing like it in France. For over two weeks that army hung on to the flanks of the German hordes, finally constituting, I fully believe, the determining factor in the victory of the Marne.

"And take the battle of the Marne—the greatest battle of history—do we in Canada know anything of that? If young Canadians knew of the battle of the Marne, if they knew what Britain has been doing, what Canada has been doing (and they don't even know that as they should), they would not need stimulating.

"There never was in the history of the Empire a time when the people were so terribly resolved to see a thing through. They are preparing for events with no regard for time. They are building plants, for instance, in England to-day which won't be ready for operations till late in 1917."

Asked to what he attributed the general ignorance of the vivid things of the war, Major Gordon replied with emphasis: "I think that one of the mistakes of the war has been the stupid and soulless censorship imposed. While the Allies were fighting for their very souls in France in those early terrible weeks of retreat the papers were saying that everything was all right. The news the censor allowed to get out was ridiculous, and nobody laughed more grimly over the reading of it than the men at the front themselves.

"There ought to be a fearless putting of the facts to the hearts of the people," continued Major Gordon emphatically. "If we are being beaten let us know it, if we are winning let us know it, if we have done a gallant deed let the world know it. As it is, we are neither told the truth about our reverses, nor do we receive the inspiration of the recounting of our successes."

Studied at McGill.

Major J. S. Jenkins, deputy director of the medical department of the Fourth Canadian Division at the front, met a German officer prisoner from the recent Somme fighting who stated that he was a graduate of the Faculty of Science of McGill University. He said that he failed to understand why England and Germany were fighting. His conversation revealed much antipathy between the senior and the junior German officers.

The Fighting Priest.

Captain (Father) O'Gorman of Ottawa recently returned to Canada to recover from wounds received on the firing line. Captain O'Gorman was known in France as "the fighting priest." He had not been long on the western front before he demonstrated that he could hurl a bomb, use a rifle, or handle an entrenching tool, and he was frequently in the front line trenches. In one engagement he was struck by a bursting shell and he comes home limping, and with one arm in a sling.

NOBLE INDIANS STILL LIVE

Homeless Tribe in the Floridas Refuses to Accept Favors From Government.

It is difficult to realize that this homeless fragment of a people still retains, after nearly two centuries of disaster, the traditional pride which distinguished the caciques of the early Floridas, says the Christian Herald. They ask nothing from the United States government, would accept nothing, indeed unless tactfully offered as their righteous due, and through the men who have won their confidence, or through others aligning with these. The gauntest straggler who drops in at the mission store in times of bad hunting and deluged crops will hardly admit that the Indians are needy. "Injun no hungry now," he will answer to your hospitable question throwing back his proud, melancholy head as if gazing into that remote past with which—who knows?—he may be mentally contrasting the present moment.

They ask for nothing except by way of purchase and it would be unprecedented for a Seminole to "jump his account." It is not difficult to see why the mission needed the store. Besides the advantage of location and the closer contact with the Indians in general, the mission can also, through this agency, help the Indians in general, without seeming to dispense charity. Dr. Golden has steadily kept the prices of skins and furs up and of provisions down. The store is thus run at some loss in dollars and cents, but of great gain in the efficiency and scope of the mission's relief work.

The doctor and his assistants of the landing, moreover, kept open house for the Seminoles at all times, dispensing a simple, cordial hospitality frankly accepted by the glade people, whose appreciation, as well as sense of reciprocity, is shown by their custom of bringing "gift offerings" of their best to these good neighbors who with kindness and truth, are gradually wiping the stains from the white man's name.

Doubtless the way of the transgressor is hard, but the people who travel thereon never seem to get very lonesome.

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL CIRCLE FOR PARENTS

MRS. WAUGH ELECTED TO PRESIDENCY FOR 1917.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The annual meeting of the Parents Circle of Queen Mary School was held on Friday, Jan. 19, in the kindergarten room of the school. A large number of members were present. Reports of the year were read and received. It was with much regret that the president, Mrs. Adair, was unable to take the chair for a second year, for she has been very helpful during the past year.

The folowing officers were elected for 1917:

President—Mrs. Waugh.
Vice-President—Mrs. Connelly.
Recording Sec.—Mrs. Borbridge.
Corres. Sec.—Mrs. McDuffee.
Treasurer—Mrs. Edminson.

The following committees were formed:—

Visiting—Mesdames Stocker (convenor), Diamond, McDuffee, Canfield.

Program—Mesdames Medd (convenor), Connelly, Adair.

Sewing—Mesdames Clemence (convenor), Stocker, Elliott, Johnston.

The year 1916 has not been so full of real work as former years, as we found the children were all clothed for school, so there was really no need for us to sew for them. Two of our meetings have been held in the evening and were of a social nature, an invitation being extended to the husbands to attend. At our first social evening Adj. McElhiney gave an address helpful to our work among the mothers. The rest of our program consisted of a solo by Miss Stevens, reading by Mrs. Connelly. Refreshments were served and a thoroughly enjoyable evening spent. At the second social evening Col. Walker addressed the club on the advantages the present-day school children enjoy. This was very instructive. Our program consisted of solos by Mrs. Middleton, duet by Mrs. Adair and Miss Kemp, readings by Miss Stewart and Mr. John. Miss Waugh presiding at the piano. The club took an important step during the year by purchasing a piano to stimulate interest in its meetings. One half has been paid on the piano and a plan has been organized to complete the balance of the payments. Our annual picnic was held in June at Jackson's Park. A large number attended and enjoyed the hospitality of the club. Games and sports were held and a New England supper served at six o'clock. The event was voted a success in every way. A class is now being formed to instruct all girls over 8 years of age in plain sewing and darning; this will be under the supervision of Mrs. Clemence, and will no doubt be of great benefit to the mothers. We are starting 1917 with new plans and ideas to be worked out which we trust will be full of good results for us all.

FOR THE YOUNG GIRL.

How to Carve a Turkey.

After the turkey is roasted trim drumsticks with paper ruffles, which will enable carver to touch them if necessary without soiling his hands. Place turkey on platter with the head at the left. Unless the platter is very large provide an extra dish, also a fork for serving.

First.—Insert the carving fork across the middle of the breastbone.

Second.—Cut through the skin between the breast and the thigh.

Third.—Bend the leg over and cut off close to the body and through the joint.

Fourth.—Cut through the top of the shoulder down through the wing joint.

Fifth.—Shave off the breast in thin slices, slanting from the front of the breastbone down toward the wing joint.

Sixth.—Carve only from the side nearest to you.

Seventh.—Tip the bird over slightly and with the point of the knife remove the oyster and the small dark portion found on the side bone.

Eighth.—Then remove the fork from the breast and divide the leg and the wing.

Ninth.—Cut through the skin between the body and heart and with a spoon remove a portion of the stuffing.

Tenth.—Serve light and dark meat and stuffing as preferred.

If carved in this way the turkey will be left with one-half entire and if placed on a clean platter, with the cut side nearest the carver and garnished with parsley, will present nearly as fine an appearance to all but the carver as when first served. Where there are many to serve take off the leg and wing from each side and slice the whole of the breast before removing the fork, then divide as required.

Obesity Diet.

It is not the quantity of food, but the kinds of food eaten that fatten. This should be remembered when dieting to reduce flesh. "Semistarvation" as a means of reducing is not only weakening, but positively dangerous. The following diet list for the reduction of flesh is governed by common sense:

Foods permitted are clams, oysters, lobsters.

Soups without flour or fat thickening.

Lean meats (ham, pork and liver excepted).

Fish—fresh, salt or smoked, of any kind, but cooked without fat or butter.

Eggs in any style.

Chicken, duck, turkey, game.

Vegetables—squash, string beans, carrots, tomatoes, turnips, cabbage, peas, onions, asparagus, cauliflower, celery, salads, watercress, pickles of all kinds.

Gluten bread.

Water, coffee and tea (except with meals).

THE LATEST FUR.

Cafe au lait fur is the latest, the soft light brown shade harmonizing well with fashionable brown toned costumes. The real name of the fur is summer ermine, which is really in the pretty cafe au lait shade with white markings. The ermine changes his snow white coat to one matching the rocks during the warm season, when he must forage for his dinner against a background not all arctic white.

Subtle Perfumes

After long years perfume has come back into a favor almost as keen as in Queen Elizabeth's time. In its subtle use there is a very witchery, in the abuse of, vulgarity. Choose your scent as you would your hat for yourself, to suit your temperament and to express your own individuality, and then use no other. At that, be careful how you use it.

There is never an excuse for a heavy scent, nor for a harsh one, and, above all to be avoided, is the odor that "dies"—a quality, it must be admitted, that is characteristic of many proprietary perfumes. Better those that simply vanish in a few days, and of those I know of but one or two, among the many on the market.

"I am sure it is a great mistake always to know enough to go in when it rains. One may keep snug and dry by such knowledge, but one misses a world of loveliness."—Adeline Knapp.

CARE OF THE TEETH

Common Baking Soda is a Splendid Wash For Use at Night

Most people neglect their teeth more in summer than in winter. We eat more acid fruits and the warm weather lulls any grumbling tooth that may be decayed to sleep until the cold weather begins to call it into painful action. While acid fruit eaten in moderation is very healthful, yet the modern young woman is quite apt to tickle her palate at the expense of her teeth.

A prominent dentist says that among his patients are a number of people who go to California for the winters. "When they come back in the spring I am always sure to have plenty of work, for the oranges they have eaten constantly eat into the enamel and make great inroads in any little decayed places that otherwise would have been only a third as large."

Don't be Ashamed to Smile

A splendid way to counteract this acid is to rinse your mouth out after meals with a half a cup of water in which there is a half teaspoonful of common baking soda. When you go to bed at night you should rub your teeth with powdered magnesia and allow it to stay on the teeth over night. What goes into the stomach will not hurt you. Do not use a tooth brush that has become old and soggy. You should buy a new tooth brush at least once a month.

WAS TREAT FOR BOYS

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman Gave a Talk at the Y.M.C.A.

Last night the members of the Canadian Standard Efficiency Test groups had the pleasure of hearing Colonel Ackerman of the 247th Batt. lecture on the organization of the British army and the methods of trench fighting in France.

The Colonel held the boys spellbound while he explained the attack of the British soldiers on a German trench, and how preparations were made days ahead by the infantry and artillery for the attack.

At the close of the interesting and instructive lecture the Colonel placed on exhibition a number of souvenirs which he had brought home from the battle fields of France.
